Reduce Meat Prices 3 Cents by Subsidy

RETAIL SLASH IS ORDERED TO START JUNE 21

Cost of Cut Falls on Taxpayer.

Washington, D. C., June 5.—A reduction in meat prices, averaging 3 cents a pound below current retail quotations, was ordered tonight by the office of price administration. The cut is made possible thru subsidy payments to packers and will come from the pockets of taxpayers.

The meat slash will go into effect in retail stores June 21 for all cuts except cured and processed pork, OPA said. For pork products the reductions become effective July 5.

OPA's action was taken in the face of a decision by the house banking committee to forbid payment of subsidies by the Commodity Credit corporation, and a protest against them by the American Meat institute. This organization of packers asked postponement of any subsidy plan until the recently formed war meat board goes into action.

Butter Subsidy in Effect.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown has expressed determination to reduce the prices of butter, meat and coffee by 10 per cent each thru subsidies financed by the Reconstruction Finance corporation at a cost of approximately 400 million dollars a year.

The butter subsidy was placed in effect this week, but retail butter prices will not reflect the 5 cents per pound subsidy until Thursday.

As far as packers are concerned, the meat subsidy will go into effect Monday, but because of the time it will take before subsidized meat flows thru the hands of packers, wholesalers and retailers, the retail prices will not be effected until June 21 or July 5.

Some Reductions Larger.

Officials estimated the average retail price reduction will be 3 cents per pound or approximately 10 per cent, but on individual cuts the reduction will range up to 8 cents per pound.

The prices announced for Zone 5, in which Chicago is located follow:

	Old Retail Price	New Retail Price
Rib roast grade A, 7 inch rib	.41	.35
Chuck roast bone-in, grade A	.32	.28
Hamburger	.31	.27
Pork chops, center cut, [Loins under 12 lbs.]	.41	.37
Lamb loin chops, grade A	.64	.58
Veal cutlet, grade A	.50	.44
Sliced bacon, grade A	.46	.41

There are slight variations of these prices for other localities in the Chicagoland area.

Charles K. Elkinton, a meat price executive in OPA, estimated the meat subsidy will cost between 250 million and 300 million dollars per year. He explained that slaughterers will be paid the equivalent of 2 cents a pound on dressed carcasses. Defense Supplies corporation, a subsidiary of Reconstruction Finance corporation, will make the payments.

Action Is Defended.

Commenting on advertisments of the American Meat institute asking for a delay in the subsidy, Elkinton said: "We know that that is the sentiment of the meat industry, but we have no reason to believe that the subsidy will interfere with the operations of the war meat board, as claimed by the institute."

The war meat board, a committee of government and industry representatives, is scheduled to hold its first meeting in Chicago Monday.

Beginning June 12 all meat processors will be restricted in their beef and pork inventories.

OBJECT TO TERM "SUBSIDY."

A statement last night from the Chicago offices of the American Meat institute objected to implications in Washington, D. C., that the meat packing industry would benefit from the so called subsidy.

"The term subsidy as applied by the OPA to meat processors is completely deceptive and misleading because not one cent of the so called subsidy is intended to remain in the meat packing industry," the statement said.

LEWIS DECREES JUNE 20 LIMIT ON COAL PEACE

New Strike Threat Faces Nation.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—The back to work order for the nation's 530,000 striking coal miners, effective Monday, was revealed today as merely another truce limited to the period ending June 20, enabling John L. Lewis to continue wage negotiations with operators under the threat of further work stoppages.

The negotiations were reported on the verge of a final settlement when the last previous truce expired and the mine walkout began five days ago.

Disclosure of the time limit on the reopening of the mines stunned official circles here and jolted administration leaders who had been rejoicing over what they believed was a final victory over their archfoe.

Peace Hope Held Dimmed.

Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, set no time limit yesterday when he agreed to order the men back to work, and this had been widely interpreted to mean there would be no more strikes regardless of the outcome of wage discussions.

However, the setting of the new deadline left the administration as far away as ever from ending the threat to vital war production.

In directing the men to return to their jobs Lewis acceded to a request from Harold L. Ickes, fuels administrator, whom he termed the "duly constituted agent" of the government.

Miners Win Small Gains.

Ickes promised that collective bargaining would be continued and ordered an extension of the old contract along with the added benefits recommended by the war labor board, representing approximately 25 cents per day for each miner. In the meantime, Lewis will continue negotiations for further pay increases.

Thus, said those familiar with the ramifications of union controversies, Lewis has maintained the status quo which existed thru the first and second truces without any loss of advantage to himself. He said his men would not work without a contract, and under Ickes' ruling the old contract has been extended. He said he would not deal with the WLB, and it seems likely to observers that if a settlement is reached with the operators he will not have to go before the board, which was reported angered by the deadline announcement.

And he has secured some small benefits, with the possibility of further pay increases. There were prospects of early agreement between Lewis and the operators. Their wage differences have been narrowed to approximately 50 cents a day.

The miners have been demanding portal to portal pay [compensation

Army to Show Its Might on Tribune Stage

BY JOHN MENAUGH.

Residents of Chicagoland soon are to see a vast array of war weapons and equipment of the types used today by United States troops on the battle fronts.

Beginning Saturday, June 19, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in coöperation with the United States army ordnance department, will present in Tribune square and adjacent areas a comprehensive exhibition of hundreds of fighting tools, ranging from minute ammunition items to a monster gun weighing 96,000 pounds.

The exhibition, according to present plans, will continue for about one month and will be open free to the public each day from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m.

Four Parts to Show.

Because of the large number of individual exhibits and the bulkiness of many of them it will be necessary to divide the show into four parts. The greatest number of the exhibits will be arranged in a large tent on the lower level automobile parking lot between Tribune Tower and the river.

The tent, 142 feet long and 66 feet wide, made of blue material, and without center poles, will be reached from the Michigan avenue upper level by means of a stairway leading to the parking lot. The main entrances to the tent will be on the north side.

Just north of this tent, on THE TRIBUNE'S triangular parking space south of the Tower, will be other exhibits, which also can be reached by the stairway from avenue upper level.

Exhibits in Lobby.

The Hall of Inscriptions [lobby] of Tribune Tower will contain a number of exhibits, as will Nathan Hale court, the open space between Tribune Tower and the W-G-N studio building.

All parts of the exhibition will be adequately lighted at night. Army officers and enlisted men will be present at all times to explain the weapons and other equipment.

This will be the most extensive exhibition of present day army equipment ever presented in the midwest.

Some of Items.

While it is not possible at this early date to present a complete list of all the items that will be on display, officers of the Chicago ordnance district, representing the ordnance department in this area, say that among the exhibits will be:

A 105 mm. howitzer.

A 75 mm. field piece.

An 8 inch mobile rifle weighing 48 tons. This will be the largest single item of the exhibit. The barrel of the weapon is more than 33 feet long.

One man light tank of World War I.

M-5 light tank of present day, mounting one 37 mm. gun and three .30 caliber machine guns.

M-4 medium tank [Gen. Sherman] mounting 75 mm. gun, one .50 caliber, and two .30 caliber machine guns.

Sections of Bomber.

M-7 mobile gun carrier [known as "the priest"] armed with 105 mm. howitzer.

M-3 half track personnel carrier.

Two sections of a large two-motored bombing plane, one showing the bomb bay of the plane, the other the pilot's and bombardier's compartments.

Complete display of ammunition for all types of American army weapons.

Complete display of small arms, including rifles, machine guns, pistols, carbines, submachine guns, automatic rifles, and semi-automatic rifles.

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—Maj. Kermit Roosevelt, 53, son of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, died Friday while on an assignment with the army forces in Alaska.

The war department, in announcing his death, said today that it had no details.

Officials said Maj. Roosevelt had been on duty in Alaska for several months, but were unable to say what his assignment was. Due to ill health, Maj. Roosevelt had been invalided from the British army in December, 1940, after receiving a commission in the first month after Germany's attack on Poland.

When Russia went to war with Finland, he accepted a commission as a colonel in the Finnish forces and engaged in recruiting in England for the Finnish army. Back in this country at the time of Pearl Harbor, he entered the American forces.

Maj. Roosevelt was the third of "Teddy's" four sons, and the second to die in the service of his country. Quentin, the youngest, was killed in the first World war in aerial action.

Meet the Man Who Sells New Minds to Rich

BY ROY GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 5.—Fat are the little pigs on Dr. Gregory Zilboorg's show place farm at Bedford Village, N. Y. Luxurious are the rugs on his office floor. Soft are the voices of his secretaries. Tasteful are the decorations and furnishings in his smart Park avenue town house apartment. And, rich indeed, is his admitted lion's share of the troubled "carriage trade" that has boomed the psychiatric business for Zilboorg and a tight little group of psychiatrists into an important industry here since World War II. began.

As a mender of warped psyches, retooler of neuroses and psychoses, Zilboorg, who was born Dec. 25, 1890, the son of Moses and Anne [Braun] Zilboorg, in Kiev, Russia, has come far along the road to fame and fortune since first he set up private practice as a mental expert here in 1931.

Expert on Suicides.

Today he is the respected member of many learned societies, and has to his credit, among other accomplishments a brand new personality which he has streamlined for Marshall Field III., multi-millionaire publisher. Zilboorg is a lecturer on the history of medicine at topflight Johns Hopkins university. He has great charm, is a fluent talker, and is much in demand as a speaker at forums and other gatherings.

He has written voluminously on the mysterious workings of the mind, and as secretary and director of research of the Committee for the Study of Suicides, Inc., he has revealed that half of all cases of self-destruction occur between 5 and 7 a. m. Virtually all other cases, he has announced, occur during periods in which the victim is unoccupied, thus indicating the importance of hobbies and avocations.

Reports on 1,227 Patients.

The Committee for the Study of Suicides, Inc., was founded Dec. 23, 1936, to study and disseminate information concerning the causes of and means of preventing suicides. The committee's first annual report, on Aug. 12, 1939, said that since its formation it had examined 1,227 suicidal patients and carried on similar studies at several hospitals and the Institute for Psychoanalysis in Chicago. 3 Battleships, Cruiser, Cargo Ship Damaged

AN ADVANCED AMERICAN BOMBER BASE IN NORTH AFRICA, June 5 (AP).—Scores of American Flying Fortresses, raining armor piercing bombs on Mussolini's fleet, damaged three 35,000 ton battleships in a daylight raid on Spezia today, and also hit a heavy cruiser and one merchant ship. The American air fleet returned without the loss of a plane.

The battleships were all of the 1940 Littorio class, the Littorio itself, the Vittorio Veneto, and the Roma, mounting nine 15-inch guns, 12 6-inch guns, and 12 anti-aircraft guns.

Fires were started in oil depots and harbor installations.

Longest Operational Flight.

Carrying 2,000 pound "battleship busters"—bombs that can smash thru armor—the Flying Fortresses made the longest operational flight of the North African campaign for their first daylight assault on the naval base on the northwest coast of Italy. The hop was made without escort.

There was only minor Italian fighter plane opposition, but the fleet cut loose with the heaviest anti-aircraft fire it could hurl aloft.

The last raid on Spezia was by the R. A. F. on April 18, when a destroyer was sunk.

The Littorio class battleships are approximately 775 feet long. Each has an aft catapult carrying three scout planes.

The huge armada of attacking Fortresses included many of the same planes which, 100 strong, struck at La Maddalena in Sardinia April 10, sinking the 10,000 ton cruiser Trieste and crippling the 10,000 ton Gorizia with two direct hits.

Direct Hits on Battleships.

The Gorizia is now in Spezia harbor, but it was not known whether it was the cruiser hit there today.

Direct hits or near misses with 2,000 pound bombs were reported on all three of the battleships and the heavy cruiser. The near misses were within 50 feet, close enough with one ton bombs to cause heavy damage, in the opinion of air bombing experts. The merchant vessel struck was estimated to be 350 feet in length. Fire and smoke from jetties, oil depots, storage areas, and electrical ships in the navy yard indicated that the shore installations as well as the ships were hit hard.

Among the planes on the raid were the "Pegasus," a veteran of 39 missions against the axis, and the "Heinie Headhunters," with 53 missions behind it.

Blast Italian Airdrome.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, June 5 (AP).—Nearly 125 tons of bombs dropped from United States Liberators of the middle east air force blasted Grottalgie airdrome near Brindisi, in southeastern Italy, in a two wave assault yesterday while air forces from northwest Africa shuttled over Pantelleria, Sicily, and other points in Italy.

Lieut. Gen. Carl Spaatz's forces struck at Catanzaro, on the sole of the Italian boot 90 miles from the Messina strait.

In turn, the enemy raided Algiers last night with a force which was officially described as small.

CHURCHILL WAR CABINET HOLDS SECRET SESSION

LONDON, June 5 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill hastily summoned his war cabinet for hours of secret session immediately after his dramatic return today from war conferences in Washington and Africa.

This was viewed in some quarters as meaning that major military operations were pending, and needed quick and final approval.

The meeting in Tunisia of Churchill, Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff, and African war leaders was noted here with much interest, and gave further stimulus to speculation about an offensive to be launched from North Africa.

Unusual activity among service chiefs was reported by the London press in the wake of the cabinet meeting.

Apparently Outlined Plans.

Churchill supposedly told his ministers the details of his conference with President Roosevelt, and outlined plans to carry the war to the enemy.

He is expected to elaborate somewhat at the next session of commons.

Few expect him to go into the finer points of the military problems involved, but it was suggested that probably he would be able to assure commons that the plans now made should see the allies all the way to victory.

Churchill returned to England at dawn today, and hurried to London.

The final stage of his flight from Africa across the dangerous Bay of Biscay was made in the dark with picked air fighters accompanying Churchill's bomber and watching anxiously for the Nazi aerial pack which on Tuesday shot down a British passenger plane carrying Actor Leslie Howard and 16 others.

Maps War Moves.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, June 5 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill came to North Africa after his recent conferences with President Roosevelt, it was disclosed today, to lay before allied field commanders the war plans approved in Washington, D C.

During the last week the prime minister, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, and the American and British chiefs of staff, Gen. George C. Marshall and Gen. Alan Brooke, have held conferences with allied army, navy, and air commanders "on details of a plan for striking the most powerful possible blow at the axis," the announcement said.

Situation Greatly Improved.

Marshall held a press conference at the conclusion of the talks and, speaking of the growth of the American army at home, he told newsmen that the situation had changed tremendously for the better in the last six or eight months.

New Chaplin Woe: 'Burned' Judge

Los Angeles, Cal., June 5 [Special].—The trouble which Charlie Chaplin foresaw yesterday when he was served with Joan Berry's paternity suit began piling up for him today as a "burned" police court judge called on District Atty. Fred Howser to investigate Miss Berry's guilty plea to vagrancy charges before him last Jan. 2.

The district attorney, who already had announced intentions to investigate reports of two surgical operations allegedly undergone by the comedian's 23 year old former protégé, indicated a willingness to comply with the judge's request.

"Burned" by a Proposal.

Meanwhile, the judge, Charles J. Griffin, asserted that a Beverly Hills detective came to him before the trial of Miss Berry's case and told him Chaplin would pay her way to New York if he would sentence her to leave California forever.

"I was burned when I went on the bench that morning," Judge Griffin told reporters. He said he had been left in this condition by the visit and offer of the detective, whom he named as Capt. W. W. White. He asserted he had refused to have any part in sending Miss Berry out of the state and added that he had considered citing Chaplin for contempt, but had decided against it for lack of direct evidence.

Despite his indignation, he gave Miss Berry a "floater"—probation contingent on her getting out of town. It was as a probation violator that she was jailed May 7 when she returned and sought out Chaplin.

Knows Doctor Involved.

From the district attorney's office it was learned Robert Arden, radio commentator and friend of Chaplin, has been named as the person who gave White $100 and a railroad ticket to give Miss Berry after she was sentenced. Arden, a native of Austria, faces deportation proceedings at the end of the war for overstaying his time allotment in this country.

District Atty. Howser was quoted as saying he knows the identity of a physician who assertedly performed an abortion on Miss Berry.

At his Beverly Hills estate, Chaplin was found striding back and forth by his magnificent swimming pool. Waving his hands, he was shouting, "I must be left alone. I must have peace."

YANKS LEARNED FAST AND WELL, THOMPSON SAYS

Battle of Tunisia Proved Training Sound.

(This is the last of a series of eight stories by The Tribune's war correspondent, John Thompson, on the allied campaign in North Africa. Thompson became the world's first parachute reporter when he accompanied American paratroops invading Tunisia. He followed the Tunisian campaign thru to the axis surrender at Cape Bon.)

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A military campaign has very definite outlines. You either win it or you lose it. We — the British, French, and Americans — won the Tunisian campaign. We defeated the Germans and Italians, the best they had, completely and thoroly.

But there are other facets to a campaign beyond victory or defeat and each army learns many lessons from which it should profit in the next campaign. Tunisia was no exception.

Summarized here are some of the lessons learned by the Americans, the tactics and equipment we found most suitable for modern warfare, the improvements which must be made to insure future success. They represent the observations not only of this correspondent who followed the American army for six months, but the considered judgment of numerous officers present during that time.

Unit Training All-Important.

There is no substitute for the experience of a battlefield. But in general our military training program here, far more advanced than it was in World War I., has proved its worth. Often, if the precepts taught in the camps and on maneuvers had been more clearly followed, the soldiers would have found their task less difficult.

Small unit training can never be overemphasized. The squad, section, and platoon are the basis of every military maneuver. If the small unit is trained to fight intelligently and independently when cut off, an army will function as an army. If a battalion is trained to hold its positions, altho skilled enemy soldiers are working in among the foxholes at night — infiltration — that battalion will be able to repel such an attack.

The training of our junior officers too can never be complete enough. In building a mass army quickly the training of its young lieutenants and captains often suffers from lack of time. But it is upon these officers that success or failure often depends. They must have mental agility, military imagination, and the ability to hold their units together under heavy attack.

Need Emphasis on Discipline.

Discipline in a mass army such as ours often is overlooked in the need to make men skilled in the use of their weapons, in familiarity with battle tactics.

Americans have often said, as they did in this campaign, that a poor garrison soldier is often the best battlefield warrior. It has been proven true again, particularly in a division which has been highly trained, which has its torn battle flags and the traditions of other wars. But most of our officers believe we should have more emphasis on discipline.

And toughness. Both mental and physical. The combat soldiers who did the fighting in Tunisia were, on the whole, in excellent physical condition. But even this could be improved.

We are a motorized army, but there are many times when trucks cannot carry soldiers. Night raiding must be done on foot. Soldiers often had to make forced marches of 16 to 25 miles, and then be ready to fight.

Maj. Kermit Roosevelt, whose death in Alaska was announced by the army. The cause was not given. Maj. Roosevelt is the son of the late President Theodore Roosevelt.

Long Periods Without Sleep.

They slept on rocky ground, curled into foxholes. They went days and nights without sleep. They lived on cold rations for days. In the training camps at home this must be realized, and the average soldier, whether combat or in the supply services, should receive the same rigorous physical preparation we give to such specialized troops as the Rangers and the paratroopers.

As a nation we have enjoyed a high standard of living. That is one of the things for which the American soldier is fighting. But it has also made the soldier accustomed to luxuries not enjoyed by others.

It has been observed by many high ranking officers that the American soldier could do with more mental toughening. He has a natural hatred for the Japanese, after Pearl Harbor. But in Tunisia he often voiced an uncertainty of why he and his pals were there, an unawareness of the significance of the campaign, and the lack of a soldiers' will to kill. This changed under combat conditions, but it was a change which many felt should have occurred long before.

Camouflage No Joke.

There were many other items, which may appear small, but which often were vital to survival. Poor aircraft recognition was common among all troops until they learned to distinguish enemy planes from our own. It was true, too, in the early days that many of our pilots were sadly lacking in adequate recognition of American ground units, and our own vehicles.

Camouflage, often inadequate and treated jokingly, during those November and December days, improved immensely near the end of the campaign. Our own planes aided by surveying bivouac areas from the air and pointing out deficiencies.

In much the same way the soldier learned the need to dig in immediately his vehicle stopped in any exposed area.

Straight Trench Wrong.

The straight slit trench, he found, was wrong. It would permit a tank or an armored half track to strafe its length. But in a round deep foxhole, a soldier could avoid strafing, and even withstand the pressure of a tank rolling over it.

There were times when our battle tactics left much to be desired; fortunately it was not often. But our tanks, and sometimes the infantry, were enveloped. Sometimes they used frontal assaults when an objective should have been taken from the flank, encircled, or even by-passed.

Reconnaissance at times was faulty. But the experienced commander never failed to reconnoiter new terrain, or personally select a bivouac area, or send out patrols immediately to contact the enemy.

The engineers, whether equipped with the most modern road grading devices, or doing their own spade work, kept otherwise impassable roads open to military traffic. And the unsought job of searching for mines made possible many an advance. Altho the engineers were extremely efficient in this it was thought by many that more infantry soldiers should be trained in mine sweeping.

Solved Supply Problem.

On the problem of supply, so vital to the conduct of any campaign, the Americans can well feel proud. Once the long ocean haul was successfully negotiated, the quartermaster troops succeeded in bringing supplies of food, ammunition, and clothing close to the front lines, over narrow, difficult roads, often under fire.

While it was believed the British system of handling convoys was better in that there was less traffic congestion, the American truck driver could not be excelled. He had better road discipline, seldom bunched up his trucks and was quick to disperse his vehicles when they were stopped. Our ammunition dumps were also well handled, the explosives being widely dispersed.

The dispersion of forces, so evident during the campaign until after Kasserine valley in February and the reorganization of the entire allied force, was probably justified by the exigencies of the campaign. No commander ever desires such dispersion and certainly Gen. Eisenhower, the commander in chief, desired it least of all.

Divisions Shouldn't Be Broken.

Americans discovered what they had always known, that tactical units such as divisions, which were designed to be self-contained, should not be broken up. Their combat teams should be used within the division framework and under control of the division commander.

Some observers too often felt that our armored divisions were too unwieldy, not mobile enough. This was difficult to determine since the 1st armored division never fought as an entity until at Bizerte, being used beforehand in its smaller combat commands, A, B, and C.

Similar observations were made of our large tank destroyer battalions. It also was often true that our tank destroyers were improperly used in maneuvers, which violated most of the principles of armored warfare.

The tank destroyer is not a tank, as some of our military people consider the latest destroyer, the M-10. Before a battle its mobility is valuable. But when used on the flanks of a tank battalion, it becomes artillery and as such usually finds it must be sheltered hull down behind a hill or even dug in.

Guns Used Like Tank's.

Its guns, like those of the tank, are used in the same manner. Altho the targets most often are armored vehicles against which it uses armor piercing ammunition, the destroyers and tanks also carry high explosive shells which explode on contact, showering shell splinters for many yards.

In the .50 caliber machine gun our army has an excellent weapon. The air force think it's superb. It is coming to have more uses among the infantry, as well as in anti-aircraft batteries.

This machine gun has been found much more effective than the .30 caliber, still used both in the air and on the ground. Its bullet, tearing a jagged hole much bigger than the smaller .30 caliber, will stop a man and knock him down where the lighter one won't.

Troops who have faced batteries of our .50 caliber machine guns are not anxious to advance against them. The Germans have done it, with mortars and hand grenades, but their prisoners confessed that our machine gun fire was devastating.

Many 1st division infantry battalions had their ordnance men mount "fifties" on jeeps for patrol work, and it is understood the army as a whole is coming to the idea of mounting .50 caliber machine guns and 37 mm. guns on jeeps.

And the artillery? It was excellent in World War I. Today one is tempted to use superlatives, except for the sobering influence of a man like Lt. Col. Verdi Barnes, a 1st division battalion commander, whose men did many notable jobs. Col. Barnes said:

"Don't forget. We've been learning from the Germans."

He was talking about the selecting of battery positions, of camouflage, of deception, and of how to leave a gun position looking as if no one had been there and the enemy came in to be killed by your cleverly concealed mines.

Tops in Massed Fire.

As to our guns and our formula for massed artillery fire: For several years our artillery men have culled the best from all the field armies which have been fighting. Today, the American artillery cannot be surpassed in massed fire.

Within a very few minutes one gun, or a battery, a battalion, division, or even an entire corps, can register on a single target from the information relayed back by a single observer. Their devastating curtain of "shot and shell" often has caused prisoners to ask, "May we see your automatic 105?"

They refer to the 105 mm. howitzer. It isn't automatic, altho the rapidity with which a battalion can drop shells on one target would convince any one we had an automatic field piece. But it is one of the best close-support field guns ever devised.

"Long Toms" Slower.

Our 155 mm. guns, "Long Toms" as the British call them, are excellent at long ranges of say 15 miles. But they are slow to move and to assemble. It is the infantry's close-support gun, the 105, that carries most of the load.

Altho it is a somewhat slow laying piece, the 105 has even been effective against tanks, both as a direct and indirect firing weapon. But most of its work, is on indirect fire, from camouflaged positions on the lee side of a hill.

Like the 75 mm. it will fire either armor piercing or high explosive shells, altho most of its shells are the high explosive, either normal or supercharged.

There is no more shrapnel such as featured World War I. With the exception of a few French batteries, firing ammunition of that vintage, there has been no shrapnel in this war. The high explosive shells, either in high angle fire or with a lower trajectory, are far more effective. Their fragmentation is much greater.

"A Superior Gun."

In this respect, too, the 105 howitzer is superior to the 75. One 105 shell burst will cover a radius of 40 yards, 10 more than the 75. Whereas the 75 shell weighs 15 pounds, the 105 weighs more than 30 pounds and its explosive charge is also more than double. The 105 howitzer's range also is about 3,000 more yards than the 75's.

All of which adds up to a superior gun. While the Germans' famous 88 mm. multi-purpose gun has a higher velocity and can outrange our 105, this howitzer has proved itself more than the enemy's equal, by its ability, from a concealed position, to lob a more destructive explosive in great quantities on any given target.

As a last item in this summary, but by no means the least, there were the United States air forces. Our Fortresses, Mitchells, Marauders, and Bostons, showed themselves to be excellent bombers, in need of only minor improvements.

In the field of the fighter plane there was, however, many an opportunity to build a better plane. The P-38, or Lightning, was superb at high altitudes, excellent as a bomber escort, and often good at lower altitudes. The P-40 was fought ably by pilots who had to learn tactics which could win with this plane.

All in all, the Tunisian campaign placed the American soldier and his arms in the major leagues. He fought, he learned, he conquered. On his side he always had, too, those qualities which have marked him thru many wars: Intelligence, humor, comradeship, unselfishness, a flexible mind, and the ability to learn, and learn fast.

The future looks bright.

BRITAIN'S PLANS FOR AFTER WAR HOLD U. S. EYES

Blast at Free Trade Stirs Concern in Capital.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—From Capitol hill to the White House official Washington is studying with deep interest British proposals and expressions of opinion, governmental and private, on post-war planning.

There are some superficial similarities in British and American planning, but significant differences have been noted by members of congress and officials engaged in the study.

One outstanding difference, it was said, is that British planning is concerned chiefly with promoting the British empire and American planning, instead of being primarily for the United States, is an effort to make the world over.

Offer Number of Commitments.

The British have made several commitments—both broad and specific—on international and intra-empire relations, and British leaders and trade groups have made statements hinting at post-war plans.

The most important of the broad commitments are recognized generally as the Atlantic charter and the lend-lease agreement. In accepting the charter, Prime Minister Winston Churchill made it clear, in line with his statement that the empire will not be liquidated, that the document is not to be construed as qualifying in any way the governments of India, Burma, or other parts of the British empire.

British leaders have expressed themselves most frequently on the phase of the charter calling for permanent disarmament of the axis. Foreign Minister Anthony Eden has said that disarmament of aggressor powers must be complete. Stafford Cripps suggested while lord of privy seal that Germany be split into several small states, that the heavy Ruhr industries be brought under some international public corporation, and that German industry be decentralized and removed to other countries.

Pact Held Major Commitment.

Government officials have said little on their interpretation of lend-lease, but Eden has linked dominion status, devised by the British, and lend-lease, an American invention, as political implements of the first order of importance.

It has been felt here that this linking means Britain expects lend-lease to continue after the war as a powerful means of holding the world together under a British-American pattern. Some observers feel that the British regard lend-lease as the most potent instrument of Anglo-American benevolent imperialism.

The most important of the specific British post-war commitments is regarded as the British-Russian mutual assistance pact. This pledges mutual assistance for 20 years "to preserve peace and resist aggression" and calls for collaboration "for the organization of security and economic prosperity."

Vow to Restore France.

The British also have pledged restoration of France as a power, renounced extra-territorial rights in China, pledged maintenance of the sovereignty of Iran and Egypt, repudiated the Munich agreement, promised retribution for nazi pogroms and pledged restitution of property seized by the axis.

The British also have assured this country that they plan to "return to liberal monetary and trade policies as soon as possible after hostilities cease." This promise has given concern to the American state department, in view of the recent assertion of Robert Boothy, member of parliament, that "the hoary old shibboleth"—removal of trade barriers—should be tossed into the dust bin. The removal of trade barriers is the keystone of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's policy.

William Jowitt, minister in charge of reconstruction studies, recently predicted that Britain would enter the post-war world as a debtor rather than a creditor nation. He said it would be necessary to develop export trade without any return to pre-war throat cutting competition.

Asks Coöperation on Trade.

Frederick Leith-Ross, chairman of the inter-allied post-war requirements committee, called for Anglo-America coöperation to overcome obstacles to free trade. He warned that foreign exchange difficulties face war exhausted nations.

Lord Chancellor Simon indicated that Britain will not return to the gold standard soon after the war. He said recently that British return to gold after the last war was not successful. Some New Dealers have had grandiose schemes of financing the war by enforced post-war return to the gold standard, under which the United States would sell gold at $35 or more an ounce.

On the domestic economy front the most important British development is the cradle to the grave social security program, prepared by William Beveridge, which has an American counterpart in a plan of the national resources planning board. The objective is to establish a new social order which would abolish extremes of wealth and poverty, end unemployment, and improve living conditions.

Expects to Keep War Controls.

Hugh Dalton, president of the board of trade, predicted that many war time controls would have to be retained to reach the objectives. He has the support of Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, and Lord Privy Seal Cranborne.

Oliver Lyttleton, minister of production, has said there will be room for individual enterprise, but Harold H. Balfour, undersecretary for air, has declared enterprise will not be tolerated. Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, has declared himself convinced greater state control is inevitable.

British business men are reported to favor some form of protection against low cost of living competition. They have expressed themselves thru trade groups as favoring the industrialization of backward areas to increase world purchasing power.

The British have instituted an extensive program of study of post-war problems, covering the fields of reconstruction, international economic relationship, inflation control, trade, and finances. Special groups have been created to consider land ownership, land utilization, social security, reconstruction, and care of the disabled.

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—A plea for more letters for soldiers stationed in Iceland was made today by Chaplain Peter E. Cullon, who spent two years with the troops there. A Churchill Made Citizen; Says He's Winston's Kin

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 5 (AP).—Corp. Peter Spencer Churchill, 45 years old, who said he was a second cousin of Winston Churchill, British prime minister, took an oath of American citizenship today. Churchill said he joined the army at Santa Maria, Cal., while visiting the United States as a newspaper and public relations writer.

British Tell How R.A.F. Bombs Tore Up Ruhr War Industries

Steel Works Ripped

LONDON, June 5 (AP).—Recent R. A. F. raids on Duisburg and nearby concentrated manufacturing districts of the western Ruhr caused "overwhelming industrial damage," the air ministry news service declared today on the basis of reconnaissance photographs.

The report was from the 1,500 ton attack May 12 and the warmup raid of April 26.

In the May attack four plants of the August Thyssen-Vereingte Stahlwerke—one of the world's largest steel combines—were damaged. Extensive wreckage also was reported in Germany's largest tar distillation plant. A coke and benzol purifying plant was put out of action. Dozens of other war factories in Duisburg and surrounding towns were damaged.

Blast 600 Buildings.

The report said nearly all the commercial and administrative center of Duisburg was in ruins, with more than 600 buildings destroyed or damaged. One area of devastation was reported to cover 48 acres.

Damage at Steel Plant.

The Hamborn plant of the August Tryssen-Vereingte Stahlwerke combine received a direct hit on the sheet melting mill. The bomb made a hole of about 600 square yards. Most of two rolling mills also was destroyed. The Hamborn plant produced 2,000,000 tons of pig iron and 2,500,000 tons of steel ingots a year.

Large buildings of the Wanheim branch combine, which makes shells and bomb cases, also were damaged. The Rheinhausen plant of the Krupp steel works was hit.

Several buildings in the Vereingte Stahlwerke's rail work shops were destroyed.

Coke-Benzol Plant Idle.

The air ministry said there was no sign of work at the coke and benzol purifying plant at Gelsenkirchen or at the Bergwerke Thyssen colleries in the Hamborn district.

The leading tar distillation plant of Germany which was hard hit was the Gesellschaft fur Teerverwurtung in the Meiderich district of Duisburg. Its principal products were liquid fuel, lubricants, and explosives.

British Spitfires this afternoon attacked enemy shipping off the Dutch coast and railway and road transport in Brittany. One fighter plane was lost.

Mines Knocked Out

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 5 (AP).—Two of Germany's largest coal mines are out of commission temporarily and fuel needed for the reich's war industries is going up in smoke as a result of R. A. F. bombardments of the Ruhr, travelers on the continent reported today.

Breaching of the Mohne dam May 16 loosed flood waters which trapped hundreds of miners in the Sraiherr von Stein and Rarbenberg mines and caused widespread devastation in other Ruhr cities, eye-witnesses said.

Many Miners Drowned.

Scores of miners drowned in the pits. Equipment was damaged.

"Hell broke loose when the dam was mined," one traveler said. "What was left by the water at Dortmund was later smashed by bombs."

Due to insufficient transportation facilities, millions of tons of coal are stacked near the Ruhr mines. R. A. F. bombs ignited these, causing fierce fires, it was said.

Floods Do Much Damage.

One traveler said the valley was overcast by smoke from R. A. F. bombings.

Floods caused by aerial mines also did extensive damage at Elberfeld, Barmen, and Gelsenkirchen. The Weser-Ems canal, one of Germany's major inland waterway transportation links, was flooded out of commission. The entire village of Soest was evacuated.

SPELLMAN SET FOR TRIP AROUND AFRICA TO INDIA

CAIRO, Egypt, June 5 (AP).—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, said today he was ready to set out on a new journey that would lead him all around Africa and on to India and China. He already has covered 60,000 miles from the Aleutians to the borders of Afghanistan.

"I am looking forward to this a great deal, for all the countries I am going to visit now will be new to me," he said. "Except for Iraq and Iran, I already am familiar with Europe, Africa and parts of Asia as I lived abroad many years."

The churchman said his new trip would be to Eritrea, Ethiopia, the Sudan, Uganda, Tanganyika, Madagascar, Mozambique, the Union of South Africa, Rhodesia, the Belgian Congo, French, French Equatorial Africa and other countries in West Africa.

SEEK AID OF 20,000 TO HELP IN MAILING NEW RATION BOOKS

Raymond S. McKeough, regional rationing administrator, appealed again yesterday to residents of Chicago and suburban communities to help prepare No. 3 ration books for mailing. Twenty thousand volunteers are needed to process the 18 million books that will be distributed in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, and the Dakotas, he said.

Mailing centers for the books have been set up in the Austin, Senn, Schurz, Marshall, and Calumet High schools in Chicago. Volunteers work in these centers from 10 a. m. to noon on Saturdays, and from 10 a. m. to noon, 1 p. m. to 6 p. m., and 7 p. m. to 10 p. m. on other week days.

Yesterday was the last day for mail delivery of the application forms for the No. 3 ration books. Persons who have not received theirs should get them at a postoffice or postal sub-station, McKeough said. Applications mailed after Thursday night will not be filled until Aug. 1.

YOUNG DOCTORS WARNED THEY'RE FACING DRAFT

Doctors and dentists under 38 years old without children born before Sept. 5, 1942, are being considered for reclassification and induction by their local boards, Col. Paul G. Armstrong, Illinois director of selective service, said yesterday.

Col. Armstrong said reclassification of all those of military age who had been deferred solely on the basis of their occupation had been ordered by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national selective service director, to fill the critical personnel requirements of the army.

The Illinois director urged the doctors subject to reclassification to determine their acceptability to the army and navy by applying for commissions.

Lt. Flesh Does a Takeoff, Mystifying Home Folk

St. Louis, Mo., June 5 (AP).—The mystery of the low flying army bomber which skimmed over tree tops in suburban Webster Groves was solved today. The pilot, 1st Lt. William R. Flesh, telegraphed his family to be at the Algonquin Golf club's "No. 2 fairway at 4 p. m." The plane swooped low. A bundle was thrown out. It contained Flesh's old clothes.

MUST PAY JUNE PORTION OF TAX, OFFICIAL WARNS

Regardless of pending legislation for pay-as-you-go income taxes, the second quarterly payment on 1942 taxes, due June 15, must be paid, Carter H. Harrison, collector of internal revenue for the Chicago district, warned yesterday. Mailing of 1,500,000 June 15 statements was completed yesterday, he said.

Harrison urged early payment of the June instalment so that his office would be prepared to handle details of pay-as-you go taxes should that method be put into effect July 1. Windows for cash payments have been opened on the first and fourth floors of the federal courthouse. Taxes also may be mailed, if checks and money orders are used, he said.

About 1,000 telephone calls daily are received from taxpayers confused by the statement on their bills of the unpaid balance on 1942 taxes, Harrison said. He explained that only one-fourth of the year's taxes, or one-third of the unpaid balance shown on the bill, is due this month.

U.S. Seizes Food at Border and Then Allows It to Spoil

Stench Is Terrific

Brownsville, Tex., June 5 [Special]. — The bad odor emanating from the federal building here today was traced to a storeroom where approximately a ton of foodstuffs, mostly in one and two pound packages, is rotting with a vigor peculiar to tropic conditions.

The food, which includes large quantities of coffee, sugar, cuts of meat, beans, and other items rationed in this country has been seized by United States customs inspectors from individuals entering the country across the two international bridges here.

No Disposition Ordered.

A. E. Kraut, deputy collector of customs here, said his men have orders to seize rationed foods unless owners are able to surrender ration stamps. His instructions are to hold such food intact for the office of price administration, which so far has refused his appeals for permission to give food away.

Inspection today revealed that packages containing approximately 500 pounds of coffee are rancid, with the older stock crawling with maggots. Several hundred pounds of beans were infested with worms. The postmaster is reported to have called on the custodian to remove the stored products to prevent tenants and patrons from being driven from the building by the stench.

Refuse to Sell Stuff.

Kraut admitted that some packages of meat have been destroyed without OPA authority but said nothing else has been disturbed and that the stock is growing daily.

Federal prisoners in the county jail, six blocks away, have suffered a sharp cut in coffee and sugar rations, it was said, leading to an offer by George Waters, jailer, to buy seized food from the customs house. Waters said federal officials turned him down.

Coffee Piles Up

Miami, Fla., June 5 [Special].—Several thousand pounds of coffee have been seized here by customs inspectors from returning Americans and foreigners since the beginning of coffee rationing in this country, customs officials said today. Unless stamps are produced to cover the amount of coffee, it is seized and sold at public auction after 30 days. During the 30 day period the owner can redeem it if he can scare up ration stamps.

Twice since coffee rationing became effective coffee auctions have been held on the steps of the federal building, officials said.

Rule Is Kept Quiet.

Inquiry revealed that travelers have a right to donate their coffee to the Red Cross, the Salvation Army or other relief agencies but that customs inspectors are not permitted to inform them of this fact. If the idea happens to occur to a person about to lose his coffee, however, and he requests permission to give it to a relief agency, the request will be granted.

The queerest twist of rationing regulations revealed here was the recent disclosure by Pan American airways officials that customs inspectors deprived a 13 year old lad from Ecuador, bound for Chattanooga, Tenn., to attend school, of three pairs of shoes found in his luggage.

The Boy Is Baffled.

When inspectors demanded three No. 17 coupons, the boy had no idea what the trouble was and tearfully left his new shoes behind.

Told by officials that everything would have been all right if he had only worn each pair around the block before starting the journey, he appeared even more confused about North American ways.

But the Equadorean consul provided the requisite coupons and the shoes followed the boy to school.

CORRECTED FOOD CEILING PRICES ISSUED BY OPA

Correcting errors in previous lists of ceiling prices, changes were made in the prices of 11 foods yesterday by Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago director of the office of price administration. The new prices will take effect today. They are for Chicago only.

Unsalted butter is listed at ¾ of a cent higher than the previously listed price. Other corrections included:

COFFEE—Kaffee Hag, 1 lb., 35 cents in classes 3 and 4. Sanka, 1 lb., 36 cents in class 3. Security, 1 lb. bag, 28 cents in class 4.

DRIED FRUITS—Sun Maid seedless raisins, 15 oz. pkg., 15 cents in class 4. Sun Maid nectar, 15 oz. pkg., 15 cents in class 4.

MILK [evaporated]—White House, small can, 5 cents in classes 3 and 4.

THE FORMATION OF A NEW KIRCHBERG & CO.

(Field Annex Building)

To Our Many Friends in Chicago:

In 1867 my grandfather started a business that was to become famous in Chicago. For 80 years, through my grandfather, my father and myself, we served Chicago continuously and well.

Some time ago we reached the painful decision that a large State Street store was a difficult burden in view of wartime complications of getting merchandise and personnel. To expedite our plans, the entire store was turned over to a liquidating organization to sell out. This they did, the store becoming their property intact, to dispose of as they saw fit.

But our roots are too deep in Chicago's history for the Kirchbergs to leave this city completely. Now that our old establishment is a "duration" casualty, we are happy to be able to announce a new Kirchberg store on a smaller scale, in which we can serve our old friends in the familiar and pleasant Kirchberg manner.

In an intimate setting and operating under the policies which made Kirchberg THE quality name in Chicago jewelry for almost 80 years, we will offer a complete line of jewelry priced in keeping with the times. As a co-partner and manager of this new venture, I invite all of our friends to visit Chicago's newest, as well as one of its oldest, jewelry shops and renew acquaintance. Do come in soon.

Phil Kirchberg

P. S. We have re-purchased all of the old accounts of Kirchberg from the liquidators.

RAWSON NAMES A NEW CABINET FOR ARGENTINA

Takes Over Presidency; Castillo Resigns.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, June 5 (AP).—Gen. Arturo Rawson formally became president of Argentina tonight, succeeding Ramon Castillo who returned to surrender the office after a brief period of defiance aboard a warship.

Rawson's new 10-man governmental leadership includes only two civilians, the others being army and naval leaders who marched with the general to oust the Castillo government yesterday.

Altho under Castillo Argentina had remained neutral and was the only South American government maintaining relations with the axis, there was no official indication immediately of the policies of the new leaders.

Rear Adm. Sabo Sueyro will be vice president under Rawson. The other cabinet ministers are: Interior, Rear Adm. Segundo Storni; agriculture, Gen. Diego Mason; foreign affairs, Gen. Domingo Martinez; public works, Gen. Domingo Pistarini; finance, Jose Maria Rosa; navy, Rear Adm. Benito Sueyro; Justice, Horace Calderon, and War, Gen. Pedro Ramirez.

Rosa and Calderon are the only civilian members.

Castillo was set free after formally resigning the presidency, but two of his ministers were imprisoned.

They are Interior Minister Miguel Culaciati, who was a prisoner of the 2d infantry regiment in the capital after giving up with Castillo at La Plata, and Daniel Amadeo y Videla, agriculture minister, who was taken in custody by the police on his arrival by plane from Montevideo, Uruguay.

The two were taken to the federal penitentiary to await prosecution, a government house announcement said. "The regular courts will investigate their actions in the administration," it added, but gave no indication of the charges against them.

Culaciati had enforced many of Castillo's stern measures, including the "state of siege" which forbade public discussion of war issues.

Other Ministers Go Free.

Other members of the scattered Castillo cabinet, which took to the minesweeper Drummond ahead of Rawson's 7,000 marchers yesterday and first announced a determination to govern from it, were let go free on their return by plane from Uruguay.

They included Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, the "torpedo-man" of the post-Pearl Harbor Pan-American solidarity conference held at Rio de Janeiro in January, 1942, and mouthpiece of Castillo's "policy of prudence."

The ailing Castillo went to his home, while Ruiz Guinazu moved into a hotel.

Castillo and Navy Minister Rear Adm. Mario Fincati, after cruising on the minesweeper Drummond to Uruguay and back, finally offered their surrender to the commander of the army garrison at La Plata, in Buenos Aires province.

Castillo's resignation was quickly forthcoming. According to a government house announcement it said: "I present to the commandant my indeclinable resignation from the office which I have discharged."

Gen. Rawson, ruling under martial law, asked the governors of Argentina's 14 provinces and 10 territories to retain their powers for the time being. He identified himself as chief of the "military movement of the government of the nation" and added in personal messages to each:

"I therefore request your excellency to take adequate measures to keep order and public peace until necessary measures to carry on the aims inspired in this movement are adopted. May God keep your excellency."

Revolt Costs 50 Lives.

Anti-aircraft guns were mounted in the Plaza de Mayo and in front of government house.

Rawson also ordered the high seas fleet based at Puerto Belgrano, on the Atlantic, to steam to Buenos Aires to join the river fleet.

The one day revolution took the lives of approximately 50 soldiers, ousted the only western hemisphere régime tolerating axis agents who communicate with Germany, Italy, and Japan, and resulted in a three man junta headed by Rawson, his close friend, Gen. Ramirez, and Rear Adm. Sueyro.

Ramirez resigned as war minister in Castillo's cabinet to join the revolt. The 50 casualties occurred in a brief clash at a naval engineering school near the capital.

Capital Back to Normal.

The military seized power a few hours before Castillo's Conservative group was to have named Robustiano Patron Costas as its candidate in the September presidential election. He was Castillo's choice to carry on a strict neutrality policy.

Castillo's resignation strengthened the military's hold and life in Buenos Aires quickly returned to normal.

[A dispatch from Montevideo said Uruguayan officials were disappointed over the almost completely military character of the new government, because several members were extreme rightists. However, one Uruguayan official said the new government might be pro-allied in international policy.]

Publishers Go to Havana for National Congress

HAVANA, Cuba, June 5.—Newspaper publishers of the American nations continued to arrive today for the second national and Pan American Press Congress, which will open Monday for a five-day meeting. The opening session will be presided over by President Fulgencio Batista, and Minister of State Santovenia will welcome the delegates in the name of the Cuban government.

NEW ARGENTINE PRESIDENT LONG AN ARMY LEADER

Chief of Coup Also Famed as a Swordsman.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, June 5 (AP).—Gen. Arturo Rawson, the 59 year old head of the new provisional military government in Argentina, is a professional soldier and has devoted most of his life to the cavalry.

At the Argentine military college Rawson was a classmate of Gen. Pedro P. Ramirez, Argentine minister of war who broke with President Ramon Castillo to help lead yesterday's revolt.

Both entered the college in 1902 but Ramirez finished a year earlier than Rawson.

Ramirez appointed Rawson as commander of cavalry last year to succeed himself when he was called to Castillo's cabinet as war minister.

Served on General Staff.

Rawson, who led the troops on their triumphant march to the Buenos Aires government house, has served on the army general staff and held regimental commands. In 1924 as a lieutenant colonel he was military attaché in La Paz, Bolivia. As director general of Remount he established the Argentine equestrian federation and only recently organized a Pan-American federation, of which he is president.

Like Ramirez, Rawson was born in 1884. He is a member of a distinguished family and his father was an army officer.

Rise to Cabinet a Surprise.

Rawson has a reputation as a swordsman and participated in a saber duel three years ago with Gen. Benjamin Menendez. Both were wounded but the judges decided Menendez was unable to continue.

Ramirez was a comparatively unknown military figure until his appointment to the cabinet six months ago. This came as a surprise because of his lack of political affiliation.

This week Ramirez denied reports he had been consulted by politicians concerning his candidacy in the September presidential election.

Sketch of Ramirez.

Ramirez was born in La Paz, Entre Rios province, on Jan. 10, 1884. He was graduated from military school in 1904 and became a cavalry lieutenant in 1910. The following year he was sent to Germany to complete his studies. He remained there until 1913.

In 1931 he was military and air attaché in the Argentine embassy at Rome. He returned to take command of the 2d cavalry brigade in 1932. He became a brigadier general in 1937 and a major general and commander of the cavalry in 1942.

British Liaison Officer to Address Law Group

Lt. P. Everett-Price, British naval liaison officer, will speak at the Nordic Law club meeting at 6:30 p. m. Thursday in the Swedish club, 1258 North La Salle street, the club announced yesterday.

FORMER FOREIGN MINISTER LAUDS ARGENTINE COUP

Dr. Horacio B. Oyhanarte, former Argentine foreign minister and member of that country's radical party, said last night that the military revolution there has "succeeded in overthrowing and wiping out one of the most deadly menaces in Argentina's history."

Dr. Oyhanarte, with his attractive wife and infant daughter, is living at the Croydon hotel. He has been in Chicago two months, having been in voluntary exile in this country and in Europe since the Conservative party revolution of 1930 placed Argentina under a virtual dictatorship. He was married in 1941 in Switzerland.

He said he was invited last January to return to Argentina by Dr. Gabriel Oddone, president of the Radical party, to lead the country in a drive for a more democratic form of government, but was unable to go. He said he would return to Argentina as soon as possible, probably with in two weeks. Argentine foreign policy, he said, should be decided "by the people and not the executive."

NAVY DISCLOSES RICE 'BOMBING' OF GUADALCANAL

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—American positions on Guadalcanal were "bombed" with rice by the Japanese, and as a result the marines had rice pudding for desert. The navy disclosed the bombing today, saying it occurred last November when the Japanese apparently were attempting to deliver food to their troops on the island.

The story was told by Marine Corporals Harold G. Fowler, 25, Chaffee, Mo., and Charles N. Perry, 30, San Jose, Cal., who said:

"It was 9 o'clock one night last November. A twin engine Jap bomber droned overhead and we heard a swish, swish like falling bombs. But the customary explosions didn't fellow, so we investigated. We found 12 parachutes, each with a 90 pound woven grass bag of rice attached."

GIANT AIR FLEET RIPS VOLGA AUTO CITY, SAY NAZIS

Tell of Hours Long Raid on Gorki Factories.

LONDON, June 5 (AP).—The German radio today said several hundred German planes attacked the great Russian automobile works at Gorki yesterday in a raid that lasted several hours.

Gorki evidently was the Volga city referred to in the German communique, which said "strong formations" attacked a soviet arms plant, hitting buildings and starting fires. [Gorki is 250 miles northwest of Moscow.]

Russia's midnight communique late tonight told of a smashing soviet air raid on a concentration of German trains at Brysnak and Karachev, west of Orel. The bulletin said the Germans had been forced by the 520 plane raid on the Nazi base of Orel Thursday night to move much rail equipment to these rearward hinges of the south and central fronts.

In Friday night's attack, the Russians said, these trains were attacked again and "many fires and explosions were caused."

The heavy Russian air blows were the only outstanding developments reported in the midnight communique, which was recorded here by the soviet radio monitor.

The bulletin told of only minor land fighting. It said the Germans lost heavily in hurling an infantry battalion against soviet lines on the northwestern front. Two hundred Germans were reported killed on the Smolensk front.

Millionth Submachine Gun Built by One Plant

Utica, N. Y., June 5 (AP).—The millionth submachine gun manufactured for World War II. by the Savage Arms corporation was presented today to Col. Frank J. Atwood, chief of the Rochester ordnance district. "Most certainly our enemies cannot gain aid and comfort from the fact that 18 months after Pearl Harbor we can shout out this production figure — 1,000,000 submachine guns from one plant," Atwood said.

WE NEED A GOOD COPY WRITER

There must be a creative advertising man in Chicago who has been hoping for just the kind of an opportunity that we offer. This is a well established agency, known for the quality of its work, serving a variety of nationally known accounts. Our business is growing beyond our present creative capacity. We need someone who is more than just the usual copy writer. He must have a talent for originality, enough experience to do finished work, a co-operative personality and a capacity for growth in our organization. We regret that we cannot consider anyone who is likely to be needed for military service. Our people know about this advertisement so write fully about yourself.

ANKARA, Turkey, June 4 [Delayed]—(AP).—Semidiplomatic sources said today that the homes of all Bulgarian cabinet members were surrounded by strong police guards in fear that Liberty Front assassins might strike next at government members. The same sources said the Rumanian government had enraged Hungarians by passing a law forbidding all foreigners to inhabit military zones. GREEK PATRIOTS RISE; TAKE TOWN FROM ITALIANS Drive Garrison Out and Kill 200.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Italy was reported beset yesterday by a rising Greek patriot opposition to her army of occupation, while at home she counted mounting losses from allied aerial poundings.

The Greek government in exile reported from London that headquarters of an Italian army corps was menaced by Greek guerrillas who had driven an Italian garrison from one town ad killed 200 Italians in another engagement.

Reuters recorded a Morocco radio broadcast quoting reports that Mussolini was recalling all Italian troops stationed in Greece.

Italian soldiers, after a 15 day battle, have evacuated Metsovon in north-central Greece and Greek forces have already occupied Kalabaka, east of Metsovon, and have pushed within 20 miles of the headquarters of the 31st Italian corps command, these reports said.

Foresee Invasion.

The Bulgarian army newspaper Narond Otbrana was quoted in reports from Ankara as foreseeing "imminent" help for occupied Greece from divisions of the British 8th army, reinforced by Greek forces and armies of the near east for an invasion of Greece and the Balkans via Crete.

Twenty allied divisions have been concentrated for the attacks, the army organ said, and added: "What is going to happen to the Balkans is becoming clear, and this interests Bulgaria very directly."

Dispatches to Switzerland from Italy admitted that many Italian cities now are virtually "heaps of ruins," but predicted that the rain of bombs would only make the Italian people fight with "courage and despair."

Pope's Speech Cited.

Mussolini's own newspaper, which a year and a half ago gave great prominence to Italian aviation bombings of London, carried, under the heading "men and beasts," an editorial on the pope's recent speech in which he repeated his plea that belligerents observe the laws of humanity. The article in Il Popolo d'Italia recalled that Mussolini had asked Hitler for the "privilege" of participating in the London raids.

The Rome correspondent of the Swiss Tribune de Geneve wrote that Messina, Palermo, Trapani, and Cagliari are heaps of ruins. Many refugees are fleeing, he wrote. He said the population of Rome is reported to have reached 2½ millions, a million more than the census figure of a few months ago. Naples was described as a city where people pass like shadows amongst mile after mile of windowless, shattered houses.

AFRICA MAPPED BY AIR MONTHS BEFORE INVASION

Photographers Did a Complete Job.

Denver, Colo., June 5 (AP).—The army disclosed today that American airmen, operating from secret bases, paved the way for the North African invasion by making detailed photographic maps of strategic areas months before that historic event.

An expedition sought out and mapped tactical positions, likely invasion points, concentrations of resistance, topographical conditions and land marks in and about Oran, Algiers, Casablanca, Morocco, Tunis, Bizerte, Rabat, and other vital sections.

The war department said thru the public relations office at nearby Lowry field, where 30 members of the expedition were trained, that the mission brought back the first complete photographs of Northern Africa expanses, and was one of the most significant examples of the importance of aerial photography in modern warfare.

F. D. R.'s Son a Member.

Leading the expedition was Lt. Col. Paul T. Cullen of San Gabriel, Cal., former assistant director of the Lowry field photographic school. Col. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, was navigation officer.

Back at Lowry field recently the four gave a graphic account of the mission in their photo-equipped Flying Fortresses in which they spanned thousands of miles, often in territory patroled by enemy aircraft, to unmask the objectives which later became of importance to the invasion forces.

Lt. Charles T. Randall, 23, said one of the planes—all of them were unarmed—was attacked by a trio of Messerschmitts on one occasion and barely managed to escape by climbing to an extreme altitude.

Carried No Guns.

"We were miles from our objective," said Lt. William H. Teague, 23. "Our Flying Fortresses had to be specially equipped with cameras and plenty of gas tanks. Each plane had a 3,900 gallon capacity.

"It was impossible to carry guns of any sort on the bombers. Weight was so carefully allotted that we weren't even allowed to carry coins in our pockets. In case of enemy attack, our only weapon was altitude—but that was enough."

Randall said that during one attack by German planes, a member of the crew fired his Very pistol at the attackers "and the old man [Col. Cullen] gave him hell."

KILLED BY GAS.

Howard Hinsley, 39 years old, 7252 Yates avenue, was found asphyxiated yesterday, apparently by carbon monoxide gas escaping thru a valve of a tank at the plant of the Interlake Iron corporation, 106th street and the Calumet river.

10,000 BARRELS FOR RUM SHOCK ISLAND PROBERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, June 5.—Lee Miller, the first business man to appear before the house of representatives insular affairs committee, gave investigators and the public a tense moment yesterday when he told how the food distribution administration had been utilized, despite its policy of bringing only essential food to Puerto Rico, by the shipment here of 10,000 barrels marked as containing ingredients for cattle feed.

The cattle feed was consigned to the San Miguel Fertilizer company but the barrels were for a local rum company, a continental firm manufacturing here, which sells only in the American market.

The witness pointed out that the 10,000 barrels took up space which could have been used for the badly needed fertilizer.

GIRAUD TO KEEP ARMY COMMAND IN NORTH AFRICA

De Gaulle Aides Get Key Posts in Compromise.

ALGIERS, June 5 (AP).—Gen. Henri Giraud will remain as commander in chief of the French North African army despite earlier opposition by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, political informants said tonight.

Gen. Auguste Nogues.

Belief that a compromise had been reached in what was probably the greatest stumbling block to a union of De Gaulle's Fighting French and Giraud's forces was expressed after the conclusion of today's session of the French committee for national liberation.

It was reported that De Gaulle has agreed to permit Giraud, co-chairman of the committee, to remain as head of the army provided he does not take command in the field; in return Giraud agreed to place several Fighting French generals in key positions in the newly merged army.

Nogues Resigns to Giraud.

Earlier today Gen. Auguste Nogues, resident general of Morocco, asserting that he placed French unity above any other consideration, presented his resignation to Gen. Giraud.

Gabriel Puaux, former high commissioner in Syria, was named to the post.

Nogues, in explaining why French troops under him opposed allied landings, said he did so to prevent German intervention.

Eisenhower Visits De Gaulle.

He added: "It is with enthusiasm that our troops have formed themselves again in one bloc and taken up the struggle at the side of the allies against the common enemy."

[According to a dispatch from London, more than 2,000 Frenchmen are busily winding up the affairs of the French National committee, and expect to go to Algiers shortly.]

Gen. Eisenhower, American commander in chief of the allied armies, visited De Gaulle today, returning a recent visit paid him by the Fighting French leader.

CHINESE BISHOP WILL RECEIVE LOYOLA DEGREE

Bishop Paul Yu-pin, vicar apostolic of Nanking, China, in this country as a special envoy of the Chinese government in behalf of post-war rehabilitation of his countrymen, will be given an honorary doctor of laws degree at the 73d annual commencement of Loyola university Wednesday evening.

Bishop Yu-pin, who was a member of the Chinese relief commission sent to this country in 1939, has been in exile from his diocese since the fall of Nanking. Called by his people the Cardinal Mercier of China, the bishop has traveled more than 100,000 miles by air, crossing the Atlantic and Pacific oceans eight times on patriotic and charitable missions.

After his arrival Wednesday morning he will celebrate mass in the Holy Name cathedral and then will meet with Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch and a committee of Chinese leaders. He will be fêted at a tea party Thursday evening at 2311 Wentworth avenue. The affair will be attended by heads of the Catholic church and city officials and civic leaders.

LAVAL CALLS UP '42 FRENCH ARMY CLASS FOR WORK

Says 200,000 Must Be Sent to Germany.

LONDON, June 5 (AP).—France's 1942 military class was mobilized "for work" by Pierre Laval today, while the Germans boasted of new weapons of war and a new peak reached in May in war production.

Laval, speaking on the Paris radio, said "200,000 workers must go as the result of a convention between Germany and France." He declared it was "entirely untrue" that during a recent trip to Germany "I had to agree to stringent measures. On the contrary, Hitler was cordial and understanding."

Warns Draft Dodgers.

The Vichy chief of government added:

"French volunteers on the eastern [Russian] front demand that we equal their sacrifice. I have decided to call up the 1942 class without exception for work in order to avoid arbitrariness. Rigorous measures will be taken against any one who tries to avoid the call-up."

In Berlin, meanwhile, at a meeting of German armament workers, Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels said "there is only one effective means against the British and American bombing terror—counter-terror." He added that "the whole German people are inspired only by one thought, to retaliate equal with equal."

Goebbels said that the winter crisis was at an end and that "we are taking measures to carry on the war in all circumstances until the enemy goes to the floor."

New Weapons Promised.

The workers' rally was told by Albert Speer, Nazi munitions minister, that thru "German inventive genius" the Nazis will "furnish the front new arms, new tanks, new airplanes and new submarines in numbers which will enable our soldiers to win victory."

He did not describe any new weapons, but declared German armament production reached a new high in May. He said the overall May production, was 6 per cent above May, 1941, production of heavy antiaircraft guns had risen 31 per cent over 1941, and 1942 plane production was "several times" over 1942.

[The British, however, have estimated that allied aerial attacks have reduced German armament production by 30 to 50 per cent.]

YANKS DESTROY JAP OIL STORAGE BANK AND BURMA FACTORY

NEW DELHI, India, June 5 (AP). —Medium bombers of the 10th United States air force struck successfully at Japanese oil sources in Burma yesterday and also blasted a factory, an American communique said today.

A direct hit was observed on a large oil storage bank at Chauk, 35 miles north of Magwe, and other bombs damaged surrounding oil wells. The factory hit by the raiders is at Myaungu, 20 miles north of Chauk.

Storage warehouses in Akyab and river shipping in the Maungdaw-Buthedaung area were bombed by R. A. F. planes yesterday, the British announced.

SINK A JAP SHIP, WIN A FREE SET OF HOUSE PLANS!

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, June 4 [Delayed].—There is a special incentive for the pilots of one bomber squadron here to sink Jap ships. The intelligence officer, a former architect, has a standing offer to give a set of house plans for each enemy vessel sent to the bottom.

He is 1st Lt. John Edwin Petersen, who taught at Armour Institute of Technology and worked in Chicago until five years ago. His sisters are the Misses Ann and Helen Petersen, 204 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, Ill.

Petersen's offer to date has been somewhat expensive. He has been here only since February, but made his offer retroactive.

The squadron has a record of more than 70 ships hit, of which 29 were definitely sunk.

ADMITS 30 BAD CHECKS.

Robert Mason, 44 years old, 3838 Broadway, was reported by police yesterday to have confessed passing 30 worthless checks for a total of $1,200.

Hamilton was chairman. War and post-war problems of man power and priorities will be among the subjects discussed at the convention. "READING BETWEEN THE LINES OF YOUR BLESSED LETTER..."

"Reading between the lines of your blessed letter, I feel again the warmth of your love, and your unshaken belief in our future together. Just to know there is still in the world such faith as yours is enough to keep me sane. Just to know that you somehow have made a happy home for the children is enough to keep hope alive.

"I shared your letter with the others. It's what they live for, too. The knowledge that our wives and mothers and sweethearts are keeping our homes together—while they help to forge the weapons that will some day set us free.

"Reading between the lines of your blessed letter, I know that once again the sirens will howl over Tokio, and bombers will fly so low we'll see the stars on their wings.

"So every day I look to the sky, waiting for them to come again. They will come—no one of us doubts that, ever. And my faith and hope in you keeps my head up and my heart high, while silently I pray for the day they'll come—to deliver us from evil—to bring me home to you again.

"Home—where I want unchanged, just as I remember them now, all the things that I hold dear. The right of a man to think and speak his thoughts, the right of a man to live and worship as he wants, the right of a man to work and earn a just reward!

"Don't ever let these be lost. Guard them with every ounce of your energy until I come back . . . back to America where no armed guard bars the door to liberty . . . where there will never be a barbed wire fence between a man and his opportunity to work and build and grow and make his life worth living—this war worth winning!"

GABLE, IN BRITAIN, MAKES MOVIES OF YANK RAIDERS

Ex-Film Idol Compiling Data for Training.

A U. S. BOMBER STATION IN ENGLAND, June 5 (AP).—Capt. Clark Gable, the former movie star, is making training films in England for the United States army air forces, it was disclosed tonight. Gable said he was sent to England under orders of Brig. Gen. Luther S. Smith, United States army air forces director of training.

The one-time movie idol has charge of a six man crew which includes two former Hollywood associates and they are touring all American air stations in England.

The announcement was made during an interview here, the first permitted by 8th United States air force officials since Gable's arrival seven weeks ago.

Took Part in Antwerp Raid.

The interview, however, failed to clear up the question of whether Gable will make any more trips over Nazi Europe. His sole operational mission to date was on May 4, when he rode as an observer in the Fortress "Eight Ball" piloted by Capt. William R. Calhoun of Birmingham, Ala., in the raid on Antwerp. He took movies of that attack.

Pressed on the point of future flights, Gable's only reply was: "I'll do whatever is necessary to complete my job." He introduced other flyers, companions on his Antwerp trip—Capt. Joseph Strickland of Liberty, Miss., navigator; Capt. Robert Yonkman of Grand Rapids, Mich., bombardier, and Sergt. Willard Stephen of Spokane, Wash., tail gunner. He also introduced Sergt. Randall Petersen of Princeton, Ill., waist gunner.

Photographs Raiding Crews.

Gable's work consists of interviewing and photographing returned raiding crews and hospitalized wounded, as well as studying flying conditions and ways to improve equipment and training, particularly that for aerial gunners.

He gets up at 7 a. m. and by 8:30 he is out in a jeep heading for work. He works seven days a week. His only trip to London, he said, came during four days of detached duty there.

Assisting Gable in making the training films are Lieutenants John Lee Mahin, script writer, and Andrew J. McIntyre, photographer, both of Los Angeles. Gable is the director and film narrator. The script writer and photographer both worked with Gable in several movies, including "Gone with the Wind," which is still showing in London, and "Boomtown."

ALLIED PLANES BOMB TWO JAP ISLAND BASES

ALLIED HDQ. IN AUSTRALIA, June 6 [Sunday]—(AP).—Langgoer on the Kai Islands and Dobo on the Aroes were raided lightly Friday night, today's noon communique reported, but action yesterday virtually was at a standstill because of stormy weather.

The Langgoer airdrome and the village itself were attacked by medium bombers which started fires. The two-engined planes also bombed and strafed Dobo, setting fires which could be seen 40 miles away. A coastal vessel in the vicinity took a direct hit.

The Aroe Islands are 500 miles above Darwin and the Kai Islands are just west of the Aroes. In the same area, the airdrome at Laha on Amboina Island was bombed in a night raid.

BOY DROWNS NEAR ROSCOE.

Rockford, Ill., June 5 [Special].—Arthur Kelly Gardner, 10 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Gardner, was drowned this afternoon in Rock river, three miles south of Roscoe, while fishing. A brother, Peter, 13, attempted to save him.

8 YANKS ON PEAK WITH RADIO WIN PRAISE OF ARMY

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—A portable radio station operated high on the side of a Tunisian mountain by eight enlisted men of the United States army air forces, including Sergt. Sidney A. Troxall of Rockford, Ill., served as a vital beacon to damaged planes during the crucial and final phases of the North African campaign.

This was disclosed by the war department today, which said that by using a transmitting and receiving set the men operating this "homing" station gave pilots who needed to land quickly directions to nearby airdromes. They were also credited with aiding many pilots to make the last leg back from combat to the safety of northwest African air force air fields.

Rations reached the men but once a week and the soldiers never got to a town. A small, flat rock beside a pool served as their bathtub. They took turns at "K. P." duty and Sergt. Troxall, a motor maintenance man, acted as their barber. For relaxation they taught two Arab youngsters, who lived near by, to sing "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

TURKEY BATHES ITS UNWASHED TO END TYPHUS

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ISTANBUL, Turkey, June 4 [Delayed.]—Turkey's worst epidemic since 1905 of typhus, one of the most dreaded of all diseases, has apparently reached its peak. It has shown no recent increase, according to a statement today by Dr. Fethi Erdem, leading bacteriologist.

The disease first reached epidemic proportions in March. Finding public coöperation necessary, Minister of Hygiene Houloussi Alatas announced on May 28 that, tho typhus is endemic here, it was evident that it had now reached the epidemic stage. The average number of cases for the four years before the war was 480. The average for 1939 to 1942 inclusive was 760. This year there were 2,312 cases from Jan. 5 to May 25 inclusive.

Lodging Houses Fumigated.

A vigorous campaign then began. Thousands of beggars, workmen and others of dubious cleanliness were rounded up and marched off to the public baths. The police have taken as many as 1,200 in a day to be washed.

Cheap lodging houses were combed and many closed for fumigation. Typhus, which is much more dangerous than typhoid fever, is caused by the bite of infected body lice. The disease is dreaded because of its high mortality rate. Vaccine is scarce and it would be impossible to produce enough for the entire population, so an elaborate campaign of publicity was undertaken to urge the public to keep clean and to avoid crowds.

Peasants Add to Problem.

The Balkans and particularly Macedonia have always been one of the greatest typhus centers of the world.

The growing number of peasants migrating to town from Anatolia has created a housing problem and now the sanitary authorities are finding that they also complicate the health problem.

SURGEON SEEKS DATA; GETS IT IN FLAMING PLANE

Helps Crew Fight Fire in Race for Coast.

AN ADVANCED U. S. MEDIUM BOMBER BASE, North Africa, June 2 [Delayed]—(AP).—A flight surgeon riding as an observer told today how a B-25 Mitchell bomber shot up by enemy fighters carried him and its crew over 325 miles of open sea with one engine out and a wing on fire before it pancaked into the Mediterreanean near the allied shore.

"That water didn't wet me at all—I was wet before," said Maj. John L. Coglend of Burke, N. Y., who thought that at any moment during the ordeal the bomber would explode. His adventure took place in a bombing raid against Sardinia.

Jumped by Enemy.

"As we climbed to 10,000 feet with our target in sight a group of enemy fighters did an unusual thing—they rode thru their own heavy flak [anti-aircraft fire] to jump us before we dropped our bombs," recalled Coglend, who has made seven flights over enemy territory to study "the reaction of our men under combat."

While he was looking at the target, two Messerschmitt 109s swept the American bomber with tracer bullets.

"It sounded like the patter of hail," said Coglend. "I saw the bullets rip thru the left engine and wing. Then a dozen bullets smashed the window by the co-pilot. The phone was knocked out and the bombardier had no way to tell us if the bombs were away. The rudder had been hit, too, and both the pilot and co-pilot had to work with all their strength to maneuver us into a turn and dive. The German fighters didn't follow us down or we would be dead."

Crew Fights Fire.

"We looked out and saw fire in the right motor," Coglend went on. "We cut off the motor and put out the fire with an extinguisher. But it started again and two more fires started in the right wing. For 2 hours and 10 minutes we nursed the plane back, only 25 feet above the sea, on one motor which cut our speed from 200 to 150 miles an hour.

"When the fire reached the main wing span, the pilot decided to set down in the sea. He set her down at 120 miles an hour and we hit with a terrific impact. In less than a second the water poured in and flooded the plane. The co-pilot clambered out the escape hatch overhead with us boosting him like fat walruses. All of us followed the co-pilot except the radioman and the turret gunner who got out thru the camera door at the rear. We all climbed onto the ship which floated tail up for three minutes before sinking. That gave us time to get out the life raft and inflate it."

Picked Up by Arab.

Coglend said they thought they had landed about three-quarters of a mile from shore, but that after paddling for some time, "we decided we had been a little optimistic and that we really were three or four miles out." They were picked up by an Arab fishing boat which took them to the seaside home of the caid, a local Arab leader. Coglend treated the cuts and bruises on himself and the rest of the crew, and then——

"I went swimming in the Mediterranean," said Coglend. "You know we don't get a chance like that very often."

SENATORS O. K. HUGE FARM AND NAVY FUND BILLS

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—A 24 billion 850 million dollar naval appropriation bill—the largest in history—and an 820 million farm appropriation measure containing several controversial features were approved today by the senate appropriations committee. Senate action is due early next week.

The naval bill contains more than 9 billion for new ships, and 6½ billion for naval aviation. It sets up funds for an additional 27,642 planes. The bill is expected to gain speedy and possibly unopposed passage.

The agriculture bill will furnish plenty of room for debate. Much of it is expected to center on funds for the farm security administration. The house appropriations committee attempted to transfer the functions of FSA to the farm credit administration and the agricultural extension service, but the attempted transfer was blocked on the point of order that it constituted an attempt to legislate in an appropriations bill.

CHINESE VICTORY GROWS; ICHANG DEFENSES TAKEN

Troops Enter Main Jap Base.

CHUNGKING, China, June 5 (AP). The proportions of the Chinese victory in the upper Yangtze area, which the Chinese call their greatest of the war, continued to grow today, and the high command announced the capture of the outer defenses of Ichang, the main base from which the Japanese last month started their drive in the direction of Chungking.

Chinese press dispatches said Chiang Kai-shek's warriors in plain clothes infiltrated into Ichang Thursday and created "utter disorder and confusion," setting large fires and explosions which shook the city.

The high command announced the capture of Kungan, south of Shasi on the Yangtze and 65 miles southeast of Ichang, from which one Japanese column had set out on the abortive campaign. More than half the garrison was wiped out and the remainder retreated, the bulletin said.

Other Points Captured.

Dispatches from the front said a number of other points had been captured in a triumphant sweep to the southeast of Ichang, with the fleeing enemy abandoning large quantities of arms and stores and even discarding their uniforms.

One force of about 4,000, making a last ditch stand at Tsingshih, in Hunan province north of Lake Tungting, was said to be cut into small isolated units.

"Their fate is sealed," the dispatches said.

Clear West Bank.

The entire west bank of the Yangtze, opposite Ichang, was said to be cleared of the enemy, and the communique said Meitseya, in the city's outer defenses, had been taken.

"Several hundred enemy soldiers were killed during the encounter and a large quantity of war supplies was captured," the announcement reported.

On the northern arc of the front in Hupeh province, the communique said a Japanese counterthrust north of Suihsien had been turned back. Suihsien is about 100 miles northwest of Hankow.

Chinese authorities said the Chinese victory of the Yangtze was far more important than those scored in the three battles of Changsha in central China because in those battles the Chinese hold on a stretch of the Canton-Hankow railway only was threatened, while in the latest battle Chungking itself was menaced.

DOG'S DEVOTION TO PILOTS KEEPS HIM IN TUNISIA

Gen. Eisenhower Decides Pet Will Remain.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, June 5 (AP).—This is a story of Duckworth, a little black and white cocker spaniel with a big heart filled with devotion for two American Spitfire pilots—one dead, the other living—and a letter Gen. Eisenhower wrote to make sure the comradeship of the flyer and his dog would not be broken.

The story actually began when Lt. Harold F. Taff of Otto, Ind., and Lt. Richard J. East of New York City brought the spaniel on a troop ship across the Atlantic and set up home together on a Tunisian fighter airdrome.

With allied victory near, East one day failed to return from a mission. Taff and Duckworth shared their grief.

Seek Dog's Return.

Then the army mail man brought a message to Eisenhower from Dr. Bion R. East of Columbia university college of physicians and surgeons which said he and his wife had been notified that their son was missing and asked if the pet dog might be returned to them "if it is not inconsistent with general policy and it doesn't interfere with the war effort."

[The home is at Ralston, N. J., where Dr. East said yesterday he had not received the general's letter, but there now was no question in his mind that the dog belonged to his son's friend. Duckworth, he explained, was named for Lt. John Stewart Duckworth of Boston, stationed at Randolph field, Texas, third of three chums who went thru their aerial training together.]

"Dick's mother would particularly appreciate it," the father wrote. "If the dog could be placed on a plane or freighter coming to New York harbor I could meet the dog and take him to our home."

The allied commander in chief, who had not known about Duckworth's co-master, ordered the request granted.

Just in time Lt. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, allied air commander of the northwest African air force, learned of the situation and dispatched an explanation to Eisenhower. It was this explanation which reunited Duckworth and Lt. Taff.

Eisenhower Replies.

To the parents of the dead pilot went this reply from Eisenhower:

"When I received your letter asking for the return of the dog owned by your son I was deeply touched. I immediately directed that every effort be made to comply with your request. Today I received from Gen. Spaatz a report in which appears the following statement:

"'It is learned that the dog Duckworth belonged jointly to Lt. East and his best friend Harold Taff. Lt. East was killed in action April 4. His plane and grave were located after our forces moved into the Tunis area. The loss of his best friend deeply affected Taff. The commanding officer of the fighter group brought Taff with the dog to the airplane. Taff was heartbroken at the thought of losing his dog and wanted to spend every possible minute with him until the plane took off. He placed him in the plane and carefully tied him. He left the plane just before the takeoff. Col. West had been waiting in his car to take Taff back to his quarters, but Taff was seen to thank him and walk away from the car to an adjoining field.'

Duckworth Carries On.

"Under the circumstances and particularly in view of the statement that the dog was jointly owned by your son and his best friend, and especially as Taff has shown strong affection for the dog I believe you will agree with me it would be unwise to return the dog to you as requested.

"The friendship of a dog is precious. It becomes even more so when one is so far removed from home as we are in Africa. I have a Scottie. In him I find consolation and diversion. For me he is the one 'person' to whom I can talk without the conversation turning back to the war. Duckworth is performing a patriotic service. I respect the quality of warm friendship shown by Taff for the dog. I am confident you and Mrs. East will view the situation similarly despite your natural and understandable desire to have with you this close companion of your gallant son who died for his country on the field of battle."

There isn't any end to this story. Taff and Duckworth are carrying on together in the war.

Young Lt. Taff has been on more than 20 missions. Duckworth is always right there wagging his tail when the plane comes home.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF CHARGED.

A charge of malicious mischief was placed against Harry E. Plier, 19 years old, 813 Lincoln street, Waukegan, yesterday after he was arrested in downtown Waukegan for causing his automobile to backfire.

WOMAN CASHIER DEFIES GUNMAN AND SAVES $2,500

Mrs. Julia Lombardo, 27 years old, cashier in a currency exchange at the front of a restaurant at 1622 Fullerton avenue, was opening up the double steel doors of her cage yesterday when a gunman demanded her keys. She refused and backed away from him.

The man took his revolver from his pocket, remarking: "Lady, I'll have to shoot you." Mrs. Lombardo continued to back thru the restaurant, kicked a chair in front of the gunman, and fled thru the rear door. She tossed the keys as far as she could. The gunman fled, too, not stopping to hunt for the keys.

Police asked Mrs. Lombardo, who saved the $2,500 in the exchange vault by her strategic retreat, if she wasn't afraid of the bandit's gun. "I work nights in my brother's shooting gallery concession in Riverview park," she told them.

CITY TO HONOR MOST PATRIOTIC FATHER JUNE 20

Plans to find the most patriotic fathers in the Chicago area and to honor them on Father's day, June 20, were announced yesterday by the Illinois war savings staff. Letters nominating fathers for the honor must be submitted by June 16, and an honor roll of 50 will be made public June 18. From this list one will be chosen as the hero of Father's day and will be given city-wide recognition. Letters of nomination should be addressed to Don McKiernan, Illinois war savings staff, 105 West Adams street. The letters should list the candidate's contributions toward winning the war, such as war bond purchases, members of family in army and navy, Red Cross work, and work in a war plant.

MEET ZILBOORG, WHO SELLS NEW MINDS TO RICH

Kiev Born Psychiatrist Retools Neuroses.

mittee were moved to Dr. Zilboorg's offices.

Zilboorg's other versatilities include previous service as secretary to the ministry of labor in the cabinets of Lvov and Kerensky. He has one M. D. degree from the Psychoneurological institute of St. Petersburg, received in 1917, and another from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia university, received in 1926.

Zilboorg is, moreover, a former journalist, having edited, by his own admission, a daily paper in Kiev. He served with the Russian army as a physician during World War I. He participated in the first revolution at Petrograd in 1917 and fled his native land two years later to come to America, where he became a naturalized citizen in 1925.

In addition to his activities as a mental expert, Zilboorg found time to appear on the lyceum platform, contribute to numerous scientific journals, and do a variety of translations, including his quite widely acclaimed version of the Russian Andreiev's play, "He, the One Who Gets Slapped."

It was while Zilboorg was taking his second medical degree in this country that he met the élite of Frederick, Md., on a memorable occasion during the summer of 1922.

The now eminent psychiatrist then was the star attraction of the Swarthmore chautauqua, which was doing a turn thru the southeast. On the program Zilboorg, as an expert on the Russian scene, followed a number called the "Crinoline Girls." His salary was $200 a week.

In the new armory at Frederick, home of Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner," and of Barbara Frietchie, of Civil war fame, approximately 1,000 persons, including the president of Hood college, prominent clergy, and leading citizens, were present when Zilboorg strode upon the platform.

Tosses Away Bible.

Under one arm the little man with the fierce black mustachio carried a copy of the Bible, as was his custom during those days. Why he carried it, other than that he claimed to have been converted to Quakerism by the American Friends' Relief in Russia, no one connected with the chautauqua circuit seemed precisely to know.

Shortly after Zilboorg launched into his address, there was a stir in the audience as a few of its members started to leave. Apparently they had expected to hear a sermon, a mixup in the chautauqua schedule having resulted in Zilboorg being put on in the place of a minister.

Zilboorg's anger was aroused as the clicking heels of the departing patrons resounded upon the hardwood floor. Claiming he had been insulted, the lecturer pitched his Bible thru the wings of the stage on which he was perched.

"Disgraced Our Town."

A commotion followed. Zilboorg was assured no affront had been intended. The president of Hood college guaranteed that if the fuming little man would return to his talk, not another soul would leave the building until he had concluded.

Zilboorg did go back upon the platform. He mumbled a few incoherent words and then walked off, the second time for good, the college president's entreaties notwithstanding.

Next day the sponsoring committee which had underwritten the chautauqua appearance called a protest meeting headed by one of the town's leading bankers. They informed the chautauqua's advance man that Zilboorg "has humiliated and disgraced our town." To this they added that never again did they want any more of any kind of chautauqua—good or bad—a decision the committee later reconsidered, but not because of Zilboorg.

"Get That Roosian Out."

At another meeting of the same chautauqua back in the hills of Carthage, N. C., in 1922 the action of a Methodist minister saved Zilboorg from possible bodily harm after the chautauqua's representative had been warned by a vigilance committee to "get that Roosian out of town."

The minister posted a cordon of armed guards around the platform and the chautauqua's superintendent was stationed near the master switch ready to extinguish all the lights if the crowd proved hostile as rumor said it would. Dousing the lights was to be the signal for Zilboorg to dash to a side entrance of the tent where an escape car was in readiness to speed him off to Sanford, N. C.

Fame and Fortune

These precautions, however, proved unnecessary. No disturbance developed and Zilboorg gave his talk without interference, altho to this day the chautauqua's superintendent recalls he had "quite a few uneasy moments" over the affair.

Looked "Rather Seedy"

The same program superintendent also recalls that when Zilboorg was first engaged for the tour, he was of "rather seedy appearance."

A program builder named Al English then connected with the chautauqua, discovered Zilboorg in New York.

"We frequently had to get hold of Zilboorg during those days and take him to the barber and tailor to have him trimmed up and pressed," the former program superintendent relates.

He also recalls that after Zilboorg had been raised from $200 to $500 a week, the now famous psychiatrist "got prima donnish one day over in Westwood, N. J.," just before the lecturer was to go on with his talk.

Got Whacked Around.

"I had run out of flattery, so I just slapped off his [Zilboorg's] glasses and whacked him around," the program superintendent recalls. "Zilboorg ran. Then he settled down and became a good boy. We never had any more trouble with him after that."

Whether this experience inspired Zilboorg to do his translation on "He, the One Who Gets Slapped," the chautauqua superintendent says he has no way of knowing.

Just who his patients are Zilboorg refuses to say. And all among the great and near great, who supposedly go to him, deny they are in his charge or that they have ever consulted him professionally.

Yet Zilboorg is busy every hour of the day. When one patient leaves another arrives at his place of business, located on the ninth floor of a building in the heart of the fashionable district of Madison avenue at East 75th street.

Has Angel for Suicides, Inc.

Here are housed the headquarters of the Committee for the Study of Suicides, Inc., of which Marshall Field is the principal "angel" and financial backer.

It was here that Zilboorg, by Field's admission to a magazine writer, "freed" him from whatever he was freed. Here Zilboorg refashioned Field from an international playboy into a rootin' tootin' New Deal whooper upper. And it was in this cozy haven that Field, as the Eton bred expatriate who in England had spent a large part of his life and not a few of 200 million dollars left him by his grandfather, the founder of Marshall Field & Co. in Chicago, was first introduced to Ralph McAllister Ingersoll.

Ingersoll and Field had much in common at the time. Field had the money and, prompted by Zilboorg, a desire to do something creative and constructive. Ingersoll was an editor at $45,000 a year on Fortune magazine. And he wanted to be a writer, to escape his own frustrations, even as Field.

"Brought Forth Mouse—PM."

From the "psychiatric mating of these two," as one biographer puts it, "the mountain labored and brought forth the mouse—PM."

This publication, often referred to as "the uptown edition of the Daily Worker," in New York, was given Field's money and Ingersoll's brain.

At first it had a glow so "Red" that it was included in a roster of publications adjudged by the United States army as unsuitable for soldiers to read. The army lumped PM with the New Masses, the Daily Worker, the New Republic, and Social Justice.

Under Dies Attack.

Moreover, in a formal report issued by the Dies committee on June 24, 1942, PM was included along with five magazines, the Daily Worker and 20 Communist front organizations as part of "the spearhead of the attack upon congress as an institution." The attack, according to the committee, "stems from a group of men who have had long training and experience in the ideology of Karl Marx."

Field subsequently took up all the publication's stock, and having watched the way the editorial wheels went round, set off for Chicago to start a morning paper of his own. But before he went, it is related in one magazine account of his departure he left behind an ample fee for Zilboorg. The fee, according to the magazine, consisted of the earnings from one of Field's race horses.

FLY TO PIN POINT IN DARKNESS TO SAVE 95 AT SEA

Pilots Answer SOS; Aid U-Boat Victims.

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—Perfect navigating by two PBY bomber pilots was credited today with resulting in the rescue of 95 survivors of an American cargo ship torpedoed in mid-Atlantic recently.

The loss of the ship previously was announced by the navy on May 13. It was torpedoed by an unseen submarine which attacked at night. The radio operator had time to flash only one call for help and to give his position.

The message was picked up at an American Atlantic base and it was an account from that base which was released by the navy today to tell the story of what happened.

Night "Black as Pitch."

"A navy PBY bomber, piloted by Chief Machinist S. B. Tetreault, and carrying Gunner J. J. Tucker Jr. as co-pilot, took the air," the account said. "The night was black as pitch; there was no moon; the overcast hid even the stars, it was the job of Tetreault and Tucker to navigate their plane thru the blackness to a pin point in the middle Atlantic several hundred miles from their base and find survivors in the dead of night. The job was one to try any navigator's soul and the chance of success was slim."

At the time expected, however, the PBY reported it had "sighted its objective."

In the glare of flames from ignited oil drums the pilots of the PBY discerned two lifeboats and three rafts, all loaded. Then the PBY communicated with a ship on the horizon and as dawn broke the ship rescued 95 men, including the captain and 27 members of the gun crew. Not a life was lost.

Search for Submarine.

For the rest of the morning Tetreault and Tucker cruised the area looking for the submarine. They were relieved by three PBYs which searched the area but there was no claim that the sub was sunk.

Tetreault and Tucker returned to their base after more than 14 hours in the air.

Tetreault's home is in West Springfield, Mass., and Tucker lives in Chattanooga, Tenn. Relief pilots on the plane were Lt. A. E. Tollison of Moorehead, Miss., and Ensign R. L. O'Flaherty of Richmond, Va.

2 Missing Children Found; Say They Slept in Woods

Mrs. Edna Bailey, 8829 Union avenue, who supports eight children by working nights in a war plant, reported to police Friday that two of the children, Barbara, 9 years old, and Wayne, 6, had been missing from home since Wednesday. Yesterday the children of neighbors found the pair a block from their home, and returned them to their mother. The children said they had spent the three nights in the forest preserves and on the 75th street beach. They begged food from picnickers, they said.

BODY FOUND IN RIVER.

The body of a gray haired man about 55 years old, tentatively identified as Harry William Maloney, 437 North Clark street, a registered pharmacist, was found in the river yesterday near Wabash avenue.

Seven Weeks' Course

Eighteen Northwestern university co-eds now are ready to take their place in the nation's understaffed hospitals as Red Cross volunteer nurses' aids. The girls, who completed a seven weeks' course at the Evanston hospital, became members of the corps at a capping ceremony held in Patten Memorial hall of the hospital yesterday. Miss Pearl Gridley, vice chairman of the nurses' aid division of the American Red Cross, officiated.

As members of the corps, the girls are pledged to serve a minimum of six hours a week in hospitals to which they will be assigned by the Red Cross. Pringle, Hinsdale; Virginia David, 432 Sunset road, Winnetka; Bette Christiansen, Charles City, Ia.; Florabel Hain, Middletown, O.; Mary Hallock, Baker, Ore.; Adeline Nelson, Duluth, Minn.; Frances Phelps, Pitchfork, Wyo., and Regna Simpson, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Motorman and Six Hurt When Street Cars Crash

The motorman and six passengers on a southbound Cottage Grove avenue street car were injured and 110 others were shaken last evening when the car rammed into the rear of a Lincoln-Indiana street car which was discharging passengers at 14th street and Wabash avenue. The motorman, Victor Ferricane, 25 years old, who suffered cuts on the face and hands, said he applied the brakes, but the car failed to stop. The injured persons were treated at St. Luke's and Michael Reese hospitals and then taken to their homes.

19 HURT WHEN BUS HITS TREE AT FAIRFIELD

Fairfield, Ill., June 5 (AP).—Nineteen persons were injured, 10 of them seriously, when a Greyhound bus, carrying 38 passengers, left state highway 15 and crashed into a tree at the edge of town last night.

Mrs. C. N. Mitchell of Evansville, Ind., reported most seriously hurt, was taken to an Evansville hospital. The rest of those critically hurt were reported taken to Evansville hospitals. The bus driver was H. S. McCullough of St. Louis.

McCullough told state police that he lost control of the bus while attempting to pass another car. He said he followed the car, which he said bore no license plate, for about five miles and that the automobile driver would not allow the bus to pass. The car which he described was found later about a block from the crash. The bus was bound from Evansville to St. Louis.

Getting Up Nights
Nervousness and Kidney Strain

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles.

Worry, Colds, working too hard, or over-eating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your Kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.

Fourteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

Guaranteed Trial Offer

Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. An iron clad guarantee insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. Get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Cystex is produced under the direction of a licensed physician for The Knox Co., one of the largest drug companies in the world with laboratory connections in the U.S.A., Canada, England, Australia and South America. The guarantee of money back unless satisfied is enforced 100% and is a dependable form of assurance to all users of Cystex.

A newspaper to vindicate its trusteeship of a free press should be on the offensive, critical, and ever vigorous; it should never be subservient.—Joseph Medill.

ENGLAND AND THE JAP WAR.

One sentence in a speech by Mr. Churchill after his recovery from illness in March left an impression not removed by anything he has said since. It was: "However vigorously the war against Japan is prosecuted, there will certainly be a partial demobilization following on the defeat of Hitler, and this will raise the most difficult and intricate problems." He was referring to problems at home, civil life problems made difficult by soldiers returning from service and asking for their place in peace time life. Only a very large demobilization could create these difficulties.

Mr. Churchill also has promised a vigorous prosecution of the war against Japan. It has seemed strange to Americans that he should offer to put his promise in the form of a written obligation. If the prime minister had not said anything about Japan we in the United States would have assumed that the British were in this war to the limit. That would have been taken for granted. They have lost empire, prestige, rich territory, many prisoners, profitable resources, coigns of vantage, valuable trade privileges, and many of the heirlooms of 300 years of conquest. They have been threatened with the loss of India.

The king's first minister says he wants all these possessions and honors back and intends to keep them when they are restored. He can be trusted to mean that and to be speaking for the governing class of England. But he has been trying to tell us something and we may have been slow in understanding what he means. He has already given the Pacific war to the United States. An American, Gen. MacArthur, is commander in chief with direction of the defenses of Australia. The American navy has been charged with the task of destroying Japanese sea power. To the American air forces has been assigned the attack on the body of the octopus. The American army is being prepared in numbers and training for a war to the finish. We do not expect to demobilize any part of the American armed forces after Hitler has been defeated. The only military reason which could be given for our planned army of 11 million men or more is the war with Japan. If there are other reasons they are not military.

England expects a demobilization large enough to create an immediate peace time problem as soon as the Nazis have been defeated with the consequent submission of the satellites and the freeing of the occupied countries. Mr. Churchill says so. Possibly he knows something about the English people that we haven't taken into consideration.

Just how interested is the common man of England in recovering Malaya, Singapore, Burma, and Hongkong, and in keeping the fairest jewel of the crown, India? How interested is he in making great sacrifices after he has won the fight against Hitler, warded off the danger to the home land and sees peace again in Europe? Mr. Churchill and his caste are interested, but is the man who goes into the ranks? What does he get from dominion over the lesser breeds? Not even tires. He doesn't use them. Mr. Churchill may know why he must demobilize large forces after the war against Hitler and get the men home. A British government might not be able to force an empire war.

The British have not sent great armies into action, but the people have been fighting the war nearly four years, much of the time in great peril. They'll know they are weary when Europe is at peace. When Hitler has been put in his grave or in a cell British ships can sail a large part of the seas undisturbed. The merchants will jump at the trade opportunities. The industrialists will strain at restrictions which keep them from converting to peace production. The peace in Europe will be immediate, close, and real to the people, the war in the Pacific remote. Mr. Churchill may know that the British government cannot keep the United Kingdom on a full war footing after the firing stops across the channel.

We'll hear that we took our time in getting into the war, that the burden was carried three years by people who have earned a rest, that we have just reached full military development in armed men and war production. So carry on, America. The British fleet will pitch in, the air force, reduced, will help, and the professional army, what's left of it, will be available. We needn't be astonished to discover that the majority of the English people, gaining nothing from imperialism, are thru with the war when their homes are safe, and that no British government can force them to make great, continued sacrifices for dear old Burma, India, the debentures of any British or Dutch trading company, its factories or warehouses, or the provincial governors and civil servants of the British raj.

How can we best make it known now, as clear as one of Mr. Churchill's more explicit speeches, that if Kent and Devon are not interested in empire, Iowa and Illinois are less so? We'd better do it before it's thought that we're carrying one message to the Filipinos and another to the Burmese, Malayans, and the people of India.

AN ENDURING MOTTO.

At the head of this page today is found a quotation from Joseph Medill, who guided THE TRIBUNE in its formative years and whose spirit still guides us. We are indebted for the quotation to Mr. Joseph H. Finn. In 1894, at the age of 16, he came to THE TRIBUNE as a cub reporter. One day Mr. Medill noticed him and asked him what he was doing around the plant. The boy's reply, as Mr. Finn told the story the other day at a Union League club luncheon, was, "trying to be a reporter."

"'Well,' said Mr. Medill, 'come into my office a moment and maybe I can help you.'

"Mr. Medill called attention to the fact that reporters for THE TRIBUNE at that time were supplied with the traditional galley proof of 'do's' and 'don'ts,' but there were some things rather difficult to set down in an orderly fashion. Continuing, the eminent editor said:

"'The work of a reporter must be accurate, tho what he writes should be interesting. A newspaper, to vindicate its trusteeship of a free press, should be on the offensive, critical, and ever vigorous; it should never be subservient.'"

Mr. Finn went on to say that he believes these simple rules as laid down by Mr. Medill have become a living part of THE TRIBUNE philosophy. We of THE TRIBUNE know that to be so.

THE SENATE IN FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Sen. Gillette's resolution to submit a constitutional amendment dropping the two-thirds majority required in the senate for treaty ratification heads exactly in the wrong direction. It would increase the power of the executive at a time when it is evident that the authority of this branch of the government should be diminished. The amendment congress should submit is the one limiting tenure of office for the Presidency.

The part the Constitution assigns to the senate in treaty making has never been more important than it will be in the approaching post-war period. Mr. Roosevelt has no regard for constitutional government as provided for this republic. He frets at its restraints. The long view with which the fundamental law seeks to check the purposes of a man, the excesses of a following, or the enthusiasms of a day is not his view. His thought of the day is to be the law of tomorrow. We have the record of his kind of personal government; if a court intervenes, get rid of it; if the organic law forbids, construe it differently or get around it; if usage and valued traditions are in the way, ignore them. Mr. Roosevelt has his third term. He will undertake a fourth.

Between the planned society and the new world order many revolutionary proposals are in prospect for the United States. Some of them are to be expected in treaties and international agreements. They may contain encroachments on our constitutional forms, invasions and impairments of American sovereignty, and limitations on the independence of the nation. Mr. Roosevelt's promises and pledges are scattered to the world in general. His personal ambitions have outflown any flight heretofore known in this country, altho Mr. Wilson did not have clipped wings.

The men who made the Constitution knew that in times of excitement and illusion, of visionaries and hot partisans, majorities can be carried away and later regret what they have done. The prohibition monkeying with the Constitution proved that even the most far-sighted restraints may be fallible. The jig time procedure by which we corrected the prohibition error was proof of repentance. Our program makers may try to avoid the senate treaty power by use of joint congressional resolution. It was done in inviting Texas into the Union and on the recommendation of President Tyler. However, there will be some difficulty in entering treaty relations in Mr. Roosevelt's One World without encountering the two-thirds consent of the senate—unless the Constitution is amended.

Mr. Roosevelt has extraordinary powers over persons and property which a subject in a totalitarian state would recognize as unfortunately familiar to him; he also has had at his disposal sums of money which no totalitarian state ever could give its dictator. The national debt reveals the scope of Mr. Roosevelt's spending in peace and war. Money attracts a strange following, but it can be a powerful one. When you hear Mr. Guffey of Pennsylvania whooping it up for the fourth term with a religious zeal you have one illustration among many.

The Constitution needs an amendment. It is one limiting the tenure of office, putting bounds to over-reaching ambition, and removing the opportunity to use office for permanency in it—not one increasing the power of the executive to rule by the "spontaneous emanation of his will."

NEWS FROM HOME.

A personal letter that arrived a few days ago from our correspondent in Africa, Seymour Korman, contained a thought that we believe should be shared with our readers. He was saying that the Stars and Stripes, the army newspaper, gives the soldiers a condensation of American news, but that they want something more than that. As he put it:

"It doesn't tell them of things they'd like to know: just how the Sox and Cubs are faring, what the word is around Randolph and Clark, whose orchestra is topping the town, whether they can figure on seeing the opening of the Chicago subway by the dawn of the 21st century, how Chicagoans feel about rationing, generally what la ville looks like, what the corn prospects are in Iowa, the fishing in Wisconsin, the dunes in Indiana, life and love in the Illinois hinterlands, and such sectional stuff."

We're sure that Si is right about this. In the last war we established a European edition of THE TRIBUNE to fill the need and would like to do the same thing again, but we have been prevented from doing so by circumstances over which we have no control. As a substitute we suggest to our readers that they clip items from the paper that they think will prove of interest to their relatives and friends in service at home or abroad, and inclose the clippings with their letters. Unless we miss our guess, the graphic and picture sections of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE will be greatly enjoyed, also.

AT $50 PER PAGE.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Congressman Compton I. White of Idaho is running in instalments in the Congressional Record these weeks an address on the subject of money purportedly given by Sen. Francis Marion Cockrell of Missouri way back in the dim past. We say "these weeks" because the issue of the record for May 26, which has just come, presents the 26th instalment. We say, "purportedly delivered" because one wonders necessarily who listened to a speech of such proportions.

The instalments vary in length. The 26th is seven columns; the 17th is six columns, and so on. This would be an average of about six columns or two pages per instalment. Twenty-six instalments thus would run to some 51 pages. Allowing $50 a page [that was the cost of the Congressional Record a few years ago, but it is undoubtedly much higher now], this silly business has already cost the taxpayers around $2,550. How much more it will cost will be determined only by the number of instalments yet to run.

We mean no slight to Sen. Cockrell. For years his corncob pipe and the linen duster on his tall, commanding figure were symbols of integrity and ability, familiar—not to say idolized—thruout Missouri. Quite to the contrary. We resent that he should now be identified with this waste of money and paper and labor to promote some monetary fancy of Congressman White of Idaho.

THE U. S. CONSTITUTION

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. M'CORMICK.

This is the third lecture on the Constitution of the United States.

That this Constitution was little concerned with the rights of man was evidenced by Article I, section 9, paragraph 1, which provided for the continuation of the slave trade. The Constitution, however, was firmly phrased to preserve the government it created by forbidding acts of congress which would break it down, as follows:

Paragraph 2—"The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it."

This was to prevent the imprisoning of political dissidents.

Paragraph 3—"No bill of attainder or ex post facto laws shall be passed."

A bill of attainder was an act of parliament ordering the execution of a citizen and the confiscation of his property, or his imprisonment. The full severity of this parliamentary tyranny has not recently been applied in the British empire, but its lesser penalties have been invoked in the not distant past.

An ex post facto law was, in the words of our Supreme court, "every law that makes an action done before the passing of the law and which was innocent when done, criminal and punishes such action."

An effort to bring this principle into American usage has just been defeated in the District court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

"5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state."

"6. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another, nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

"7. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."

This provision was to prevent looting of the national treasury by the men in office. It has not been very successful.

"8. No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince, or foreign state."

These were provisions to prevent that corruption of public officials and powerful men in private life which is customary abroad.

Section X forbids the states from encroaching upon the nation.

"1. No state shall enter into any treaty, or confederation, grant letters of marque and reprisal, coin money, emit bills of credit, make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts, pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility."

In this paragraph note well that the states, as well as the nation, were forbidden from granting titles of nobility.

When we consider the many attempts that have been made to break up our country and to break down our Constitution, we may consider this to be one of the indispensable articles for our liberties.

Having enumerated the powers of the legislative branch of the government and having made provisions to prevent the overthrow of the republic, the constitutional convention addressed itself to the executive.

There was strong support in the convention for a plural executive in order to make sure that a single executive should not make himself a dictator. In the end it was decided that only a single executive could efficiently carry out the laws of congress and the administration of government.

It was then proposed that the tenure of the executive should be definitely limited by law. This, in turn, gave way to an elective tenure of four years and no more without reëlection. For one hundred and fifty two years the precedent set by Washington that two terms were the most that a President could occupy was observed by his successors. Now that the precedent of our great men has been broken, we have a movement to put this limit in the Constitution.

In that day of primitive communications, it was not conceived that the people of the entire nation could effectively vote for a President, and so the electoral college was conceived, and is still in the book altho election has actually been by popular vote from almost the beginning.

To further control the executive, the Constitution provided that he must take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear [or affirm] that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The President's powers are those of commander in chief of the military forces, to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, to make treaties with the advice and consent of the senate provided two-thirds of the senators present concur, to appoint public officers with the consent of the senate, to commission all officers of the United States, and to recommend legislation to congress.

The greatest of Presidential recommendations, now forgotten, was that of President Jefferson to abolish the slave trade.

The final control of the executive by congress is in article II., section IV.:

"The President, Vice President, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for and conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors."

Article III. of the Constitution concerns the judicial department. Says paragraph 1:

"The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme court, and in such inferior courts as the congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall at stated times receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office."

Section 2 concerns jurisdiction. In general, the court has jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution, in all treaties, controversies between different states or citizens of different states.

Paragraph 3 provides that:

"The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crime shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed."

This section, as I have said before, has been circumvented by the misuse of a statute aimed at conspiracies. Congress or the Supreme court should reëstablish it.

Section 3 concerns treason and is as follows:

"1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."

This section has also been circumvented by a sedition act which in turn has been abused. There is a bill to reëstablish it now before congress.

SAFEGUARD CHILDREN WITH SEX EDUCATION.

By and large, parents exhibit an embarrassed reticence with their children when it comes to a frank discussion of sex. Those who are able to approach the problem in a sensible fashion are to be commended.

It stands to reason that war conditions usually lead to a letting down of moral standards. Family life is frequently disrupted with the absence of parental guidance. Furthermore, the employment of young people establishes new associations, some of which may be undesirable. In Great Britain, for example, the number of new cases of so-called social diseases last year totaled 70,000 among civilians alone.

Education is the answer because the situation involves not only health but the adoption of standards of conduct which will make for a strong virile race.

At the outset we must admit that the sex urge is the most powerful of all primitive instincts. It must be recognized as such and handled without gloves. The topic can no longer be treated from the standpoint of "Hush, hush." Our young people can be reared with full awareness of the functions of their own bodies and of those of the opposite sex. There is nothing secretive or vile about the subject.

Curiosity, which is the open sesame to knowledge, must not be smothered. To do so is to stimulate the search for "outside" and unreliable sources of information. If a lad can learn the simple facts of reproduction long before adolescence—the flowering of his emotions—he will be able to comprehend the basic reasons for self-control. He will then realize how his future happiness may be augmented. Furthermore, he will be strengthening his character.

A part of his instruction may well deal with the unfortunate consequences which sometimes attend venereal infection. But to be held within the narrow path of rectitude thru fear alone is to produce a generation of weaklings. In other words, the bugaboo of long invalidism and premature death—true, in all too many instances—need not be stressed. Nevertheless, it must be made clear that this type of disease is serious and may be accompanied by dangerous complications.

We would no more invite syphilis deliberately than we would scarlet fever or smallpox, altho the former carries the greater menace. Reliance upon ethical teaching alone is not enough. We must inculcate logic, common sense, self-respect, and pride—with the thought that every boy and girl is building for the future.

The closer our offspring can live to nature the more naturally and easily will these lessons come. Plant pollen is the fertilizer in the production of seeds. Hens may lay eggs but, unless they are fertile, they will not produce chicks. All life depends upon the union of the male and female elements.

Perhaps we may envy youngsters who, reared on farms, develop to maturity with full understanding of animal breeding. Live stock experts have long accomplished what parents have shunned with their own progeny.

WATER ADDICTS.

Mrs. A. M. writes: My two boys, 6 and 15 months old, crave water constantly. They seem normal in every other respect. Can you offer any suggestions?

REPLY.

Nothing to worry about unless diabetes is present. If the urine shows the presence of sugar, that is another matter.

GLOW-CHILD.

Mrs. E. writes: Is there anything wrong with a child's eyes that reflect the light and glow red?

REPLY.

No. Greatly enlarged pupils allow the retina to show thru.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

WHY WE HAVE FLOODS.

Cleveland, O., May 26.—Your editorial today on floods and woods is shallow, does not go deep enough. It has been shown long years ago that it would be cheaper for the government to pay the would-be water shipper the difference between boat and rail transportation than to maintain the present enormous expense of dikes and levees of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, and the continual deepening of the river beds.

The earliest of the American Indian traditions bear witness that these rivers overflowed their banks, sometimes by as much as 100 miles. Let Louisville and other Ohio river towns abandon their lower levels as "down towns." And surely, Pittsburgh should abandon its Golden Triangle for good, rather than demand that the government come to its rescue in every spring freshet. Like the Nile of Egypt, nature intended that these rivers should overflow their banks, thus enriching the soil for the farmer.

If improvident settlers and short sighted industries will move into these lowlands, let them not howl for federal aid when the spring floods force them out. One thing is sure: In the old home town, Nashville, Tenn., no one thought of demanding, or even expected federal aid when the Cumberland river went on a rampage.

STANLEY A. CHASE.

EISENHOWER CHANGED HORSES.

Brookline, Mass., May 29.—Among the thousands of words of propaganda advocating a fourth term for President Roosevelt, the most effective are the few which won him a third term. "We must not make a change in these difficult times. Never swap horses in the middle of a stream." Very old stuff and very timid.

Gen. Eisenhower has shown us how it may be done successfully. In the midst of the fiercest battle in this war he changed two generals. Each had somehow during the shifting scene got into a wrong place. And by the light of his genius and courage he placed them rightly. So the American army acquitted itself famously and brought about the final victory.

Swap horses in the middle of the stream? Why not, if one gets a better horse?

VETERAN REPORTER VOLUNTEERS.

Chicago, June 1.—Tell me, if you can, why the military intelligence organizations don't use our old time newspaper reporters, instead of these young college graduates? Young men of this same type come each year to the newspapers to work as reporters. They have to work from three to five years to become good reporters.

There are many veteran reporters in Chicago. Thirty of these men could clean up this town in 90 days.

NEWS OF THEIR SON.

Oak Park, Ill., May 25.—My wife and I have been greatly thrilled and pleased with the information which we have learned from time to time of our son, Staff Sergt. Clarence E. Winchell Jr., as the stories and pictures have appeared from time to time in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. As a matter of fact, we learned more about what he is doing from your story than we do from his own letters, for he is allowed to repeat very little of what he is doing.

C. E. WINCHELL.

FM PROGRAMS.

Oak Park, Ill., May 5.—When Eric Leufstedt Jr. dreamed his dream of the perfect broadcasting station he describes in this morning's Voice of the People, he must have drifted into the realm of frequency modulation. At any rate, two of Chicago's FM stations come very close to attaining the perfection he described.

FM station W51C, operated by the Zenith Radio corporation, meets his specifications in every respect except that it does broadcast an occasional period of vocal music and does not have coded station identification. From 11:30 a. m. to 11:30 p. m. it broadcasts a continuous program of fine music, with nary a commercial program, broken only at 30 minute intervals with brief announcements, which are characterized by restraint and dignity.

W59C, W-G-N's FM station, does not hew so closely to Mr. Leufstedt's line, for it broadcasts news and other spoken comment, but almost every evening I listen for an hour or more to a program of superlative music broken only by station announcements.

I believe that if Mr. Leufstedt listened to these stations, with their complete freedom from raucous spot announcements, he would revise his distaste for the human voice.

WATER FOR VICTORY GARDENS.

Chicago, June 1.—I had a time to secure a garden plot big enough for four families. We were assured water for sprinkling. As things turned out, after our gardens were almost finished they were converted to a pool. Now, after doing all the work over, I find that we might not get the water after all. Before I started I went to the city hall and went home with the instructions to get permission from the owner, call a plumber, and have a pipe put in the lawn [the water is there]. My plumber now tells me he cannot get a permit to do so because the city fathers have not yet decided if we shall have water as yet. Why not charge a fee, but let us have water? I cannot carry it from home; it is 20 blocks. Why all the red tape?

PARTY DESIGNATIONS.

South Bend, Ind., May 22.—For the benefit of the people back home who elect congressmen, the American press should substitute the letters A. and E. for the letters R. and D., so that after speeches and voting we would know if Congressman So and So was an American or an Englishman. This will be far more important from now on than whether he is Republican or Democrat.

LESLIE E. YODER.

KNOW THEM BY THEIR SMEARS.

Rockford, Ill., May 29.—One of the outstanding characteristics of a true New Dealer is the tendency to attack the character of an opponent, especially when the New Dealer has the worst of an argument. He will call you "reactionary, pro-Nazi, an agent of Hitler," and what not. So, as we tell a cynic by his sneer and a jackass by his ear, we tell a New Dealer by his smear.

J. P. GRIP.

START THE CAMPAIGN NOW.

Long Beach, Cal., June 1.—If and when Mr. Roosevelt instructs the 1944 Democratic national convention to draft him for a fourth term, it would clarify the issue if he would tell the country which of two possible reasons fixed his decision to run. One reason could be that Mr. Roosevelt wishes to continue to enjoy the power, prestige, and perquisites of the Presidency. The only other reason would be that Mr. Roosevelt is convinced that no other American can perform the Presidential duties so well as he.

Mr. Roosevelt was discreetly silent about his third term ambitions until convention time, when he sent Mr. Hopkins to Chicago to see that the cogs in his nominating machine were adequately greased and oiled. Apparently he plans to repeat the 1940 tactics, but the Republicans can smoke him out this time. All they have to do is to start their 1944 campaign immediately, and consider Mr. Roosevelt as the Democratic nominee.

It is hard to conceive of a more vulnerable candidate than Mr. Roosevelt, but his blunders have been so numerous and huge that much time will be needed to adequately remind the people of them. However, the Republicans will not waste any ammunition, even if Mr. Roosevelt should suddenly change his mind about running when faced with a licking. The Democratic party has so supinely indorsed all of Mr. Roosevelt's policies, domestic and foreign, that any other Democratic candidate will be equally vulnerable.

OSCAR A. BIGLER.

JAP AT ANNAPOLIS.

Chicago, May 28.—In looking thru old copies of Leslie's Weekly recently I noted in the July 27, 1899, issue two interesting pictures of cadets at the Annapolis naval academy in that year. One that arrested my attention was of two seniors fencing. One of the fencers was a Jap cadet by the name of Temura and under the picture it states: "Naval Cadets Kress and Temura, the latter a Japanese, the crack swordsman of senior class."

Can any one tell if this Jap, Temura, who would be about 65 years of age today, fits into our war with Japan? No doubt after graduating from the academy he returned to his native land and it can be assumed that he became an officer in the Japanese navy. Is it possible that Temura used knowledge gained at Annapolis against us at Pearl Harbor?

RENT FORMULA.

Chicago, May 25.—I have a simple, easy to apply formula for rent control which would treat all property owners and all renters on the same basis.

Take 54 per cent of the assessed value, which in turn is 37 per cent of the real value. This would allow a gross return of 20 per cent a year and about a 6 per cent net return on the money invested.

WAR NOISES.

Chicago, May 29.—[Friend of the People.]—There are two blower systems which face this neighborhood. They operate 24 hours a day, 6 days a week, and the noise they emit is so annoying and continuous that we have to keep the windows closed at night. Sometimes we are forced to go out to sleep. We realize their work is very important at this time, and who knows it more than I, with two boys overseas and myself trying to work? But my neighbors and I cannot rest at night because of the everlasting noises. Cannot something be done about this nerve-racking situation?

M. A.

"The man in charge of one plant was interviewed in regards to the blower system operating 24 hours a day which causes a humming noise. He stated that he would have a mechanic try to cut down the noise in some manner.

"The other blower also operates 24 hours a day and is owned by another company. The noise from it is considerably louder than the one at the former plant. The maintenance foreman stated that he would thoroly check the blower with a view to cut down the noise.

"Both of these plants are doing war production work."

LIST 460 MILLION PROPOSED STATE POST-WAR WORK

Planners Urge Highway and Airport Projects.

Springfield, Ill., June 5 [Special]. — The state planning commission presented members of the legislature today with copies of a report recommending and outlining a 460 million dollar post-war public works program for Illinois.

The report, received by Gov. Dwight H. Green several weeks ago, covers ground expected to be examined in detail by a proposed new 24 man post-war planning commission which would be set up under an administration favored bill pending in the legislature.

This bill, introduced by Rep. David Hunter [R., Rockford], would authorize the governor to appoint 15 commission members, with other members to be heads of state departments and three members of each house of the legislature. A $100,000 appropriation is included in the bill to finance the commission's work.

Call for Highway Work.

Extensive highway construction and modernization, construction of numerous buildings, and establishment of a state-wide system of 25 major airports were among the major proposals in the report of the present planning commission, headed by Robert Kingery, Chicago.

The commission estimated the cost of a 15 year highway program at 371 million dollars. The probable over-all cost of 25 airports was placed at $18,925,000, and it was stated 15 of these could be finished in four years. The legislature was asked to appropriate $5,829,175 this session to cover the cost of preparing detailed engineering plans for the various projects.

Would Build 11 Armories.

Other suggested projects included: Construction work at 5 normal schools, $9,883,000; new construction and modernization at the University of Illinois in Urbana and Chicago, $6,031,250; 11 new armories, $7,008,800; 5 tuberculosis sanitaria, $7,350,000; 6 laboratory and health centers, $1,895,000; construction and modernization programs at 11 hospitals and 5 schools or branches under the welfare department, $16,344,670, and construction and modernization at 5 prisons and penal farms, $3,626,924.

The report did not cover methods of financing the projects, altho it was noted that federal aid could be expected in the highway program and suggested the airport construction might be carried on as a combined federal-state-local operation.

PUT STRIKERS IN ARMY, DEMAND YANKS IN AFRICA

ALGIERS, June 5 (AP).—The Stars and Stripes, American soldier newspaper, published today a survey of comments of United States troops on the strikes back home.

"Almost 90 per cent of the men urged drastic government action against the strike leaders as well as against the strikers themselves," the army newspaper said. Its staff writers conducted a "great many personal interviews" in which the question was asked: "What do you think of the coal strike?" Hundreds of unsolicited letters were sent to the newspaper office.

"Fully 70 per cent declared the strikers should be inducted into the army and returned to work on 'C' army rations," the article said. "None of the soldiers had any use whatever for John L. Lewis. Almost without exception the soldiers offered to change places with the strikers."

LEWIS DECREES JUNE 20 LIMIT ON NEW COAL PEACE

for underground travel time]. Their original demand was for a $2 a day increase. The operators offered approximately 80 cents to $1. Lewis turned that down, but then suggested a temporary agreement at $1.50, which the producers so far have refused to accept.

The UMW policy committee made today's announcement of the deadline. UMW locals received the following telegram:

"The national policy committee, by unanimous vote, has authorized a return to work on Monday, June 7, up to and including June 20. This action was taken to protect your union and its membership. Let each member coöperate with this policy.

"By order of the national policy committee."

Deny Wish to Impede War.

The telegram was signed by Lewis, John O'Leary, UMW vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer.

The committee asserted that the miners recognize their responsibilities in the war program, adding:

"It is not the United Mine Workers of America's purpose in pressing for proper and equitable compensation for services rendered to hamper the war effort, but a simple desire of American coal miners to obtain and maintain an economic footing consistent with other Americans.

"The United Mine Workers of America want to make a full contribution to maintain a continuity of coal production adequate to meet every war requirement."

Call Coal Supply Ample.

The committee asserted that there is ample coal on hand, and that "even the present situation has not impaired our war productive effort."

Meanwhile, negotiations were brought to a standstill by the WLB's insistence that bargaining cannot be resumed until the men actually are back at work. When this announcement was made, UMW representatives and spokesmen for the mine operators forgot their differences and turned on the board in wrathful criticism.

Since midnight Monday, when the last truce expired, the conferees have been waiting impatiently for the WLB to give them a nod to continue their discussions, and the operators told a press conference after the mine union's new order for resumption of work that they hoped to get WLB approval of renewed negotiations. Later they asserted that the WLB is wrong in demanding strict compliance, even after the miners agreed to call off the strike, with the order suspending negotiations.

Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the northern operators, termed the board's action a "grave mistake." Edward R. Burke, chairman of the southern operators' committee, said the operators believed the UMW work order was sufficient to warrant resumption of negotiations today.

They were echoed by a blast from Lewis, who said:

"We regard the action of the board as mischievous, malicious, and complete justification of our previous appraisal of the board's actions and the qualities of the individual members. Their action is destructive and not in the public interest."

Wayne L. Moorse, WLB member representing the public and the board's compliance officer, said the decision reflects the WLB's established policy that bargaining may not be continued during a work stoppage. It is expected that the board will decide Monday whether there has been a sufficient return of miners to warrant lifting the ban.

Indications were that Lewis' order would bring full scale mining operations Monday.

Report Byrnes Asks Legislation.

During the day, it was reported that James F. Byrnes, head of the office of war mobilization and No. 2 man to President Roosevelt, is prepared to use his influence to speed final enactment of the anti-strike legislation passed by the house yesterday.

The measure includes provisions for imprisonment and heavy fines for union chiefs interfering with war production.

Byrnes' support of such a measure, which would be an important factor among his friends in the senate which passed a much milder version, would not be unexpected in view of his record as a legislator. He opposed the Wagner act while a member of the senate.

13 BLAST FURNACES CLOSE DOWN; COKE CUT OFF BY STRIKE

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 5 (AP).—Vital steel felt the effects of the coal strike today, the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation reporting 11 of its blast furnaces had been closed down because of the lack of beehive coke—the source of which was choked off by the coal production stoppage.

Beehive coke derives its name from the fact it is produced in ovens shaped like beehives.

This brought to 13 the number of blast furnaces shut down. One had been closed by the Republic Steel corporation at Birmingham, Ala., and another by the Shenango Furnace company at Sharpsville, Pa.

The announcement by a Carnegie-Illinois spokesman came as other steel companies reported sufficient supplies on hand.

H. M. Wilson, vice president of the Shenango company, said he hoped another mine crisis would not develop when the United Mine Workers' June 20 deadline expires "because it would be disastrous." He added:

"The steel making industry won't be able to accumulate any stocks of fuel in the meantime."

2,000 ILLINOIS MINERS CALL IT UNLUCKY TRUCE

Follow Lewis, but Resent Lack of Contract.

BY JOHNSON KANADY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Taylorville, Ill., June 5.—Two thousand bewildered, angry miners in the Taylorville coal field today received definite instructions that they are to resume work Monday for what many called an "unlucky 13 day truce."

Many members of the United Mine workers in this area expressed dissatisfaction at being expected to work without a contract. It was clear that they were preparing to return to the mines only because John L. Lewis, their president, said they should place the national interest above their own interest. It was evident also that unless an agreement is reached by June 20, Lewis' deadline, they will leave the diggings again.

Most of them are stung by the epithet "unpatriotic" which has been applied to their organization, its leadership, and its membership, but they stubbornly maintain that their cause is right, and that the war labor board, the operators, and President Roosevelt are wrong.

Talk Bares Discontent.

Conversations with the men today in their union hall, on streets, on buses, and in taverns disclosed the following attitudes underlying unrest in the coal fields:

1. The miners feel that the dispute is a grudge fight between President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis.
2. They believe that the favor which Mr. Roosevelt traditionally has been regarded as showing labor has shifted to favor the operators.
3. They fear such a shift constitutes a threat not only to their own union but to all organized labor after the war.
4. The miners resent the "interference" of the war labor board in the matter.
5. They feel that the government, since taking over operation of the mines, has directed all its attention to "telling the miners what to do, instead of telling the operators what to do."

Four large mines owned by the Peabody Coal company in the Taylorville area employ nearly 10 per cent of the UMW membership in Illinois. This for years has been a Democratic section—so much so that the Taylorville local repudiated Lewis' leadership in the last Presidential race and stuck by Roosevelt for a third term.

Now, with two large ordnance plants within 50 miles of here, the miners see untrained women earning higher wages in some cases than they do and high school boys going to work at wages nearly as high as their fathers have achieved in long years underground.

"It isn't fair," one 50 year old man said today. "We are asking for a raise because it costs us more to live. Up at Illiopolis they pay higher wages to untrained people than some of us get. The wife of one man I know who had never done a thing except housework in her life went to work at Illopolis. After two weeks she brought home a pay check for $7 more than her husband got for two weeks work at the mine. He is a "band picker' on top and makes $5.60 a day, but the check-off for bonds, union dues, and other things cuts that way down."

Calls Attitude Typical.

Coil Whitlow, pit committee man for Peabody Mine No. 9, who knows nearly all the men in his mine by their first names, said that this speaker's attitude was typical.

"We want to go back to work, but we want a contract to work for," he said. "We stuck by Roosevelt in 1940, and now it looks like he has let us down. The men think the whole thing looks like a grudge fight on his part against our president [Lewis], because he backed Wendell Willkie for President in 1940.

"We aren't unpatriotic. We have given up our holidays to work in the mines. We have bought bonds since the earliest drives. The men deserve a raise, and they certainly shouldn't be asked to work with no contract at all."

"They Won't Be Happy."

"The men will go back to work if Lewis tells them to," he said, "but they won't be happy about it.

"If we lose this fight it will give the operators the upper hand."

In interviews yesterday with union officials at state headquarters in Springfield the same sentiment was expressed. Hugh White, vice president of the Illinois union district, said the importance of Lewis' winning his struggle with President Roosevelt cannot be overestimated.

Fears Beginning of End.

"If we lose, it may be the beginning of the end for our union," he said.

The attitude of the officials appears general among the men, with one exception—not all the rank and file trust Lewis as completely as the mine czar's handpicked officers.

On a bus to Kinkaid, nearby mining town, a miner said today that "the union bosses have to tout Lewis all the way. Some of us don't feel that safe about him, but we do know that he is doing our job for us in this case."

In what was regarded as an example of the general attitude toward Lewis, a miner at a Taylorville tavern said:

"Lewis is doing what the miners direct him to do. I am sure there would have been a contract by this time if the war labor board and the President hadn't interfered. The President has lost face in this, not Lewis. The government took over the mines and ever since they did it, they have been telling us what to do. Why don't they tell the operators what to do?"

Most of the miners expressed anger over the public's attitude toward the mine trouble. Nearly every person questioned started his answer by saying, "I'm as patriotic as any one, but ——."

The miners admit they are caught in an awkward position, but they don't know how to do anything about it without fostering the bugaboo of the mine unions—letting the operators get the upper hand.

DIVISION OF AIR TROOPS TO JOIN 'D ARMY GAMES

st Test of Kind Will Open Tomorrow.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Field Hdq. 2d Army, Lebanon, Tenn., June 5.—Something new has been added for the final two weeks of the first phase of the 2d army maneuvers, which have been in progress here since April 26.

For the first time in any war maneuvers within the United States a complete air borne division will participate on a free basis—that is, neither side will know until the action develops whether the attack from the air is for or against it.

Taste of Real Warfare.

The airmen and their equipment—paratroopers, gliders for carrying personnel and equipment, transports for towing them, and all the paraphernalia necessary for supplying the men—are ready in surrounding camps. Whether they will swing into action as soon as the new problem opens Monday, or whether they will be held in reserve until the preliminary engagements indicate the point of greatest need is an open question.

This new problem is designed not only to give the air fighters the nearest taste they have yet had of real war but also to impress on the troops that they must take this modern threat to traditional military strategy into full account.

Foreign Observers on Hand.

Commanders hold that much information of vital military value will be gained in the coming operation. The terrain hereabouts is more rugged than that encountered anywhere by air borne troops in actual engagement.

So important are the maneuvers considered that 16 friendly foreign governments have sent their representatives here for the full period of the air phase.

SCIENTISTS SEEK WAY TO RECTIFY RUINED BEAN OIL

50 Million Pounds Are Threatened as Loss.

Research scientists are grimly hunting the chemical gremlin which threatens to bewitch 50 million pounds of soy bean oil into a worthless, cloudy emulsion that must be tossed down the drain, Marcus W. Hinson, war production board industrial specialist, disclosed yesterday.

The laboratory sleuthing is being conducted as part of the WPB's national program for the recovery of 500 million pounds of fats and oils by industry. Hinson was loaned to WPB by the American Chemical society to direct the program from headquarters in the National War Agencies building, 226 West Jackson boulevard.

"Twenty-two million bushels of the 1942 soy bean crop were damaged by excessive moisture and processors are encountering serious difficulties in extracting and refining the oil," Hinson said. "I am told that the damaged beans have cut the output of solvent extraction plants 20 per cent."

Produce Worthless Oil.

Hinson explained that the spoiled beans produce a cloudy impurity which mars the clear amber color of the soy bean oil and makes it worthless for further use. The chemists, notably Dr. Melvin De Groote of St. Louis, Mo., he said, are trying to determine the cause of the emulsion and to rectify the disturbance.

Soy bean experts traced the crop damage to excessive moisture resulting from persistent rainfall during the harvesting season last fall. They said a substantial part of the crop was not harvested until spring this year after lying in the fields all winter. The sodden beans spoiled during storage and, when brought to processing plants, impeded production and produced undesirable oil.

Beans Not Dried Properly.

Of the 1942 bumper soy bean crop of 210 million bushels, about 10 per cent was damaged, it was reported. Moisture content—which should not exceed 15 per cent of the beans' weight—rose to as much as 20 per cent on some farms.

Some farmers have blamed the damage on the policies of the Commodity Credit corporation which encouraged farmers to store the soy beans on the farms where facilities were inadequate to dry the beans properly. The CCC has purchased the entire crop, using soy bean processors as its purchasing agents. Soy bean trade spokesmen explained, however, that the CCC had no other choice because terminal grain elevator facilities were crowded.

THIEVES TAKE $950, BONDS.

Stanley Wesniewski, owner of a tavern at 4956 Loomis street, reported to police that thieves broke into his establishment and took $950 and four $25 war bonds.

SALTIS IS JUST ANOTHER GUY —NAMED JOE

Plays Second Fiddle in Musical Gathering.

Joe Saltis, the prohibition era beer runner and bad man, sat in a tavern at 7089 South Chicago avenue early yesterday satisfied with everything but the music. Jasper Garritano of 9226 University avenue, a steel worker, was strumming his guitar.

Saltis muttered that he was "going to do something about that guitar player." It was nearly 4 a. m.—closing time—and Saltis had had enough. He left the tavern.

Garritano, accompanied by two fellow workers at the Carnegie-Illinois steel plant, followed him out. They stood on the sidewalk, waiting for another friend to bring Garritano's guitar.

Steel Workers Go to Work.

Suddenly, Saltis appeared before them and whipped out a pistol. The steel workers didn't waste time. One tackled his legs, another went for the gun, kicking it across the street, and the third landed a couple of well placed punches. The gun was discharged twice in the scuffle.

Just then Michael Congelese, 27 years old, 9110 Greenwood avenue, the fourth troubador, emerged from the tavern with Garritano's guitar. He swung it high and brought it down on Saltis' head. Saltis fell into the gutter, guitar strings wrapped around his throat and blood streaming over his light suit and white shoes.

"Hey," cried another patron, running out to see the scuffle, "don't you guys know that's Joe Saltis you're beating up?"

The steel workers didn't wait for confirmation. They piled into a nearby car and executed a swift retreat. Woodlawn police found Joe in the gutter and took him to a hospital, where his scalp was repaired with nine stitches.

Police Trace Car.

Police obtained the license number of the steel workers' car from excited witnesses and brought Congelese, who owned the car, Garritano, and their pals, Joseph De Bartolo, 42, of 734 East 104th street, and Michael Santoro of 9110 Greenwood avenue, to the station.

When Lt. Edwin C. Johnson had heard their story, he permitted them to file information against Saltis charging him with assault with intent to kill, and sent them home. Saltis was lodged in a cell for questioning by the state's attorney's office. He gave his age as 55 and said he lived at the Park Manor hotel, 7086 South Chicago avenue.

Lt. Johnson asked Saltis what had happened.

"I don't know," the ex-beer baron said. "I might have fallen down."

COURT TO HEAR ARGUMENTS IN HAUPT APPEAL

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday will hear oral arguments in the case of six relatives and friends of Herbert Hans Haupt, executed Nazi saboteur. The six are appealing their convictions last fall in the first treason trial in Illinois history.

Three of the defendants, Hans Max Haupt, father of the spy; Walter Froehling, and Otto R. Wergin, were sentenced to death by electrocution. Their wives, Erna Emma Haupt, Lucille Froehling, and Kate Matha Wergin, received 25 year prison terms and fines of $10,000 each.

In an appeal brief filed in the appeals court, the defendant's attorney, A. F. Warnholtz, contended that error was committed by the trial judge in allowing prejudicial testimony to be introduced; that the closing arguments of government prosecutors was inflammatory, and that instructions given the jury by the court were improper. This the government denied in an answer brief filed by District Atty. J. Albert Woll.

FLARES OFFER HOPE FOR CREW IN PLANE CRASH

Austin, Nev., June 5 (AP).—Sheriff George Hammond of Lander county said tonight that a civilian air patrol pilot who sighted a crashed four engined plane in the mountains east of here reported flares burning in the area, indicating some of the occupants may have survived. The sheriff quoted the pilot as saying the plane appeared to be an army bomber and that four fires were observed about one-half mile apart in a straight line. The pilot saw one body lying in the snow near the demolished ship as he circled the mountain area.

Three persons died when the house and an adjacent garage apartment were destroyed by flames. The fourth was struck and killed by the backlash of the heavy fence as the plane burst thru it.

LONGER WORK WEEK ASKED BY 200 IN PARADE

More than 200 employés of the Oaks Products company, North Chicago, paraded thru the business district yesterday carrying placards and shouting demands for longer working hours. The paraders numbered more than half of the total force employed by the company, a branch of the Houdaille-Hershey corporation, manufacturers of automotive parts. The workers, officials of the United Automobile Workers' union [CIO] said, have been working only 32 hours, four days a week. Company officials made no comment, but previously indicated that orders were not heavy enough to justify a longer work week.

GUNMAN SEIZES POLICE PISTOL; CAPTURED TWICE

Two policemen yesterday captured Otello Day, 24 years old, Negro, 824 14th street, after a running gun battle that included the theft of a detective's gun, an attempt to hold up a doctor and covered several west side blocks. No one was shot, altho another Negro who was with Day eluded police.

Detectives Charles Kelly and Chester Kucharski were stopped by two laundry drivers who said that two suspicious Negroes were following their trucks. There have been several laundry truck holdups on the west side.

Kelly and Kucharski located Day and the other Negro at Hastings and Paulina streets, near the Clark playground. Both Negroes ran and the detectives saw Day throw an object, later identified as a .32 caliber pistol, over a fence.

At the detectives' squad car the two Negroes made another break for freedom and in the scuffle Day grabbed Kucharski's pistol and bolted. The detectives chased both men.

Meanwhile, Detective William Barton and Patrolman Walter Prochniak, who were riding to work at the Maxwell street station, saw the scuffle. Barton left his car and started chasing Day, pistol in hand. He lost the Negro as Day ran thru several back yards.

At 13th and Paulina streets a mail truck driver, John D. Narko, of 1700 19th street, hailed Barton and told him he had seen Day run up an alley.

Barton and Narko circled the block in the mail truck and saw Day run out to an automobile which was slowing down on Washburne avenue near Paulina street at the Douglas park elevated structure.

The driver of the car, Dr. Carl Joseph Champagne, of 745 East avenue, Oak Park, said he slowed to allow children to cross. Day jumped on his running board and ordered him out of the car, waving the pistol stolen from Detective Kucharski.

Barton fired five bullets at the Negro. Three of them struck the doctor's car. Then Barton leaped on Day, who had been firing back, and disarmed him.

STEPHAN GIVEN DEATH SENTENCE FOR THIRD TIME

Detroit, Mich., June 5 (AP).—Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, imposing the death sentence for the third time on Max Stephan, convicted of treason, today set July 2 as the date for his execution at the federal correctional institution at Milan, Mich.

Two previous death sentences imposed on Stephan were stayed pending disposition of appeals.

Stephan, convicted of aiding Oberleutnant Hans Peter Krug, Nazi flyer, in his flight from a Canadian prison camp in April, 1942, now has an appeal pending with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati from Judge Tuttle's denial of his petition for a new trial. This appeal was filed yesterday. The court has a regular session scheduled for June 27.

The United States Supreme court twice has refused to review his original conviction in federal District court here.

4th Termers Believe He Would Be No Help.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—Harry Hopkins, generalissimo of the fourth term campaign by virtue of his rank as corporal of the White House palace guard, is reported to have told intimates that Vice President Henry A. Wallace has been dropped as a possible running mate for President Roosevelt in 1944.

Henry A. Wallace.

Hopkins and his chief of staff, David K. Niles, White House executive assistant, are said to be confident they can pack the Democratic national convention with enough office holders to get President Roosevelt a renomination.

Many Democratic leaders are reported to believe the fourth term nomination can and will be blocked in the convention.

Wallace Seen as No Asset.

Hopkins and Niles are reported as doubtful that Wallace would do the ticket any good should he get the second place.

"Why nominate a man who can't even carry his own state?" Hopkins was quoted recently as having said in confiding that the former secretary of agriculture is a political surplus and marked for political death as he had marked a million surplus little porkers for slaughter in the early days of the New Deal.

In 1940 the President by almost 60,000 votes lost Iowa, Wallace's home state, which he had carried in 1936 by almost 40,000 votes.

Rayburn Possible Choice.

It is reported that Speaker Sam Rayburn is the choice of the White House palace guard for the second place on the fourth term ticket. It is felt Rayburn might hold the south, which is bolting the New Deal, into line.

Many political observers believe the revolt has gone too far to be stopped by any man in the Democratci party, with the possible exception of James A. Farley, former postmaster general and former chairman of the Democratic national committee, who put Mr. Roosevelt in the White House.

Farley broke with the President on a third term and upset White House plans to make the third term campaign a "spontaneous" draft. Is it expected Farley will make a more intense fight against a fourth term.

Farley May Enter Primaries.

Informed political observers believe Farley may allow his name to be submitted in presidential primaries in a number of states, not with the purpose of capturing the presidential nomination but for the purpose of halting the fourth term and driving Hopkins and other New Dealers out of the direction of the war.

Hopkins and Niles have recently adopted the strategy Farley employed to win Mr. Roosevelt the 1932 and 1936 elections. They have gathered from Farley's files in the Democratic national committee the names of various Democratic leaders.

They have been calling some of these to Washington for conferences on fourth term prospects. Niles and Hopkins have also been busy on the telephone wooing Farley's political friends.

BIG MACHINIST UNION TO KEEP INDEPENDENCE

St. Louis, Mo., June 5 (AP).—Harvey W. Brown of Washington, president of the International Association of Machinists which withdrew from the American Federation of Labor May 31, said today the union would continue to function as an independent and limit itself strictly to its own trade jurisdiction.

Brown is attending a meeting of the organization's business representatives. The machinists, with a membership of 560,000, quit the AFL following jurisdictional disputes involving the carpenter's union.

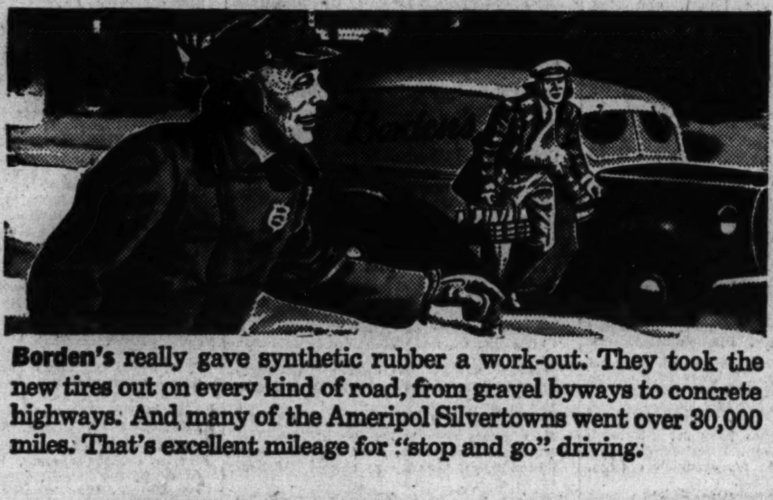
Three years ago America's car owners started an

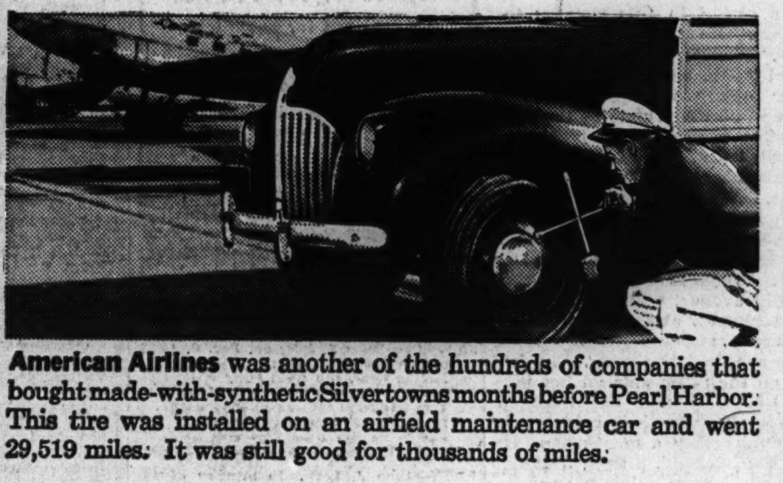
80,000,000 MILE ROAD TEST

of B. F. Goodrich synthetic tires

A few of the many companies that helped make the greatest tire test in history...



Borden's really gave synthetic rubber a work-out. They took the new tires out on every kind of road, from gravel byways to concrete highways. And many of the Ameripol Silvertowns went over 30,000 miles. That's excellent mileage for "stop and go" driving.



American Airlines was another of the hundreds of companies that bought made-with-synthetic Silvertowns months before Pearl Harbor. This tire was installed on an airfield maintenance car and went 29,519 miles. It was still good for thousands of miles.

Brink's, Inc., operators of armored trucks, tried these Ameripol Silvertowns on a convoy car. 26,892 miles were recorded—excellent mileage for this type of driving. Synthetic rubber was proving itself all over the country!

A Bond Bread vehicle was equipped with Silvertowns in which more than half the rubber was synthetic. The bakery reported getting 28,300 miles on them—and it was the toughest kind of driving on all kinds of roads—in all kinds of weather.

Grand Union put Ameripol Silvertowns on a light maintenance truck right alongside of natural rubber tires. Two of the Silvertowns outlasted the regular tires by 7,000 miles. There's proof synthetic rubber can take it—at least as well as natural rubber!

Standard Brands bought a number of Silvertowns made with synthetic rubber back in 1940. They were installed on company cars in several regions of the country. Some of these tires went more than 30,000 miles! Today we realize the importance of this road test!

THREE years ago this week men from all over America hurried to a meeting in New York. They had been told that an announcement of importance to the whole nation would be made. And it was.

B. F. Goodrich announced the first tire made with synthetic rubber ever sold to the public—the Ameripol Silvertown. People were asked to buy them in order to test them under driving conditions. (Laboratory tests had long since been made, during the years preceding this meeting.)

The result was the greatest road test in history—a test made by the car owners themselves. These Ameripol Silvertowns rode side by side with tires of natural rubber—through every state, under every condition of roads, seasons, speeds, and temperatures. Many are still in service.

Reports from drivers now show that these test tires have rolled more than 80,000,000 miles. And the verdict is: "At least as good as tires of natural rubber."

In those first Silvertowns more than 50% of the natural rubber was replaced by synthetic. Today B. F. Goodrich is making tires for our armed forces in which more than 99% of the natural rubber is replaced by synthetic. And these tires are being tested in a still greater test—under actual battle conditions all over the world.

When the day comes some time in the future when you can buy synthetic tires, remember a B. F. Goodrich Silvertown will be the only synthetic tire backed by the experience of an 80,000,000-mile road test that was made by the car owners themselves.

Some of the hundreds of B. F. Goodrich synthetic rubber products that are on the fighting fronts today

BULLET SEALING FUEL CELLS. Zero and Stuka pilots must rage when their bullets don't set fire to our boys' fuel.

AIRPLANE DE-ICERS with synthetic rubber coating make it possible for our bombers to operate in all kinds of weather.

WAR PRODUCTION AIDED BY MAIMED HALT AND BLIND

Chemical Company Hires Handicapped Persons.

While hundreds of employers are only now, under war time pressure, discovering the abilities of the physically handicapped, George Barr, 31 years old, president of G. Barr & Co., 1130 West 37th street, can cite eight years of enterprise based on an employment policy of discrimination for the disabled.

Established in 1935 as manufacturing chemists, the company has maintained a record of 75 to 90 per cent employment of the handicapped thruout its peace time personnel peak of 30 men and women. Now, converted to 95 per cent production filling army and navy contracts to mix and pack medical supplies, 73 of the 77 factory workers are physically disabled. The deaf, the blind, victims of polio and other infirmities keep up production in the large packing and assembling room.

Work One Shift a Day.

The plant operates one shift, 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., with a 48 hour week. Minimum salaries are $26 per week—50 cents an hour for 40 hours plus time and one-half for the remaining 8 hours. Average pay is $36 per week with maximums of $55 and $57. The company is up to schedule in production despite a policy of allowing workers to rest whenever they are tired.

The Barr plant is a reflection of its president's initiative in turning a handicap to an advantage. George Barr was but three months along in his position with a St. Paul, Minn., company, in 1935 when he was hit by an automobile and suffered a leg fracture. Resultant infections necessitated amputation.

When he came out of the hospital, he found his artificial leg made him a handicapped "unemployable." The young chemist came to Chicago with his $1,000 savings and went into business for himself. His only employé was a boyhood friend, Mitchell Echovitz, who is deaf. They developed formulas for liniments, hair pomades and creams to manufacture in their little near west side store—and the business prospered.

Lee Koeppen One Worker.

Later, Barr's brother, Mike, came in and is still at the plant as superintendent, one of the few able bodied employés.

Thus developed the business that now spells a steady job for such workers as Lee Wilbur Koeppen, 27 years old, 4117 Lake Park avenue, who was the 16 year old lad blinded in the explosion of a bomb thrown at the home of Judge John P. McGoorty, 929 East 45th street, on the night of Sept. 20, 1932. His Dobermann Pinscher, Vickie, is his lead dog to and from work. Of the seven blind workers that tip tubes faster than persons with sight, two others have dogs—German shepherds.

Performances of all workers, the 28 deaf mutes who are rapid on assembly and enjoy the companionship their jobs give them, the five with leg amputations, the trio who have only one hand—all prove a rehabilitation statement that came out of the last war: "It's not what's gone; it's what's left."

OPA ACCUSES TWO WISCONSIN GAS DEALERS

Max Sonderck, service station operator in Wausau, Wis., sold 700 gallons of gasoline without requiring customers to surrender ration coupons, and Edward Newtols, who owns a station in Green Bay, Wis., has sold 144 gallons without coupons, Alex Elson, regional attorney for the office of price administration, charged yesterday.

He filed complaints with W. M. McFarland, chief OPA hearing commissioner. McFarland will hear Sonderck's case June 19 in the Wausau courthouse, and Newtol's case June 17 in Green Bay. The hearing commissioner has authority to suspend the business of violators of OPA regulations for penalty periods.

Newtols is also charged with registering 515 gallons of gasoline on hand Dec. 1, while Elson alleges investigators found 783 gallons. A complaint against Lloyd W. Blaisdell of Rhinelander, Wis., states that he understated his inventory by 200 gallons. His case will be heard June 18. The Interstate Oil company of Sioux City, Ia., is alleged to have sold 8,595 gallons of fuel oil without coupons in a complaint set for hearing June 11.

SUE FOR RULING IN BOSTON FIRE VICTIM'S WILL

A suit was filed in Circuit court yesterday by the Northern Trust company to construe the will of Dorothea Felt Noyes, who with her husband, Lt. John High Noyes of the navy, perished in the Boston night club fire which took the lives of 500 persons last November.

Mrs. Noyes' will, leaving an estate of $450,000 to their two minor sons, John High Jr. and Nicholas, was filed in the Lake county court, as was that of her husband, who left an estate of $41,000. Both lived in Lake Forest.

The suit set forth that there is no evidence to determine whether the wife or husband died first and asked the court to fix the interests of the testatrix in a trust estate left by her mother, Mrs. Agnes Felt, who died in 1928. Besides, acting as executors under the wills of both Mr. and Mrs. Noyes, the trust company is guardian for both Noyes children under a previous appointment.

SHOW WAR FILM IN COSTA RICA'S REMOTE TOWNS

Jeeps, Planes, Boats Used to Reach Far Spots.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, May 28 [By Air Mail].—There has been some criticism of the office of the coördinator of inter-American affairs on the ground that it has failed to carry the allies' story of the war to the great masses of Central American people in terms those people can understand. In Costa Rica, however, there is no cause for complaint on that score.

By airplane, launch, army jeep, and camion [those terrifying omnibuses of the back country] the remotest settlements are being reached. Augmenting the broadcasts that go out from the republic's 21 radio stations, motion pictures, colored posters, and cartoon funny books tell the story. In Liberia, in Guanacaste department, talking movies still are amazing, and the coördinator went there to show a film.

Liberia, which means the white place, is so named because the soil is as white as lime. Liberia is only 120 miles from San Jose, but what a 120 miles! Ordinarily the traveler boards a train which carries him down off the meseta central [middle plateau] on which the capital is situated.

Film Crew Has Troubles.

At Puntarenas on the Golfo de Nicoya he takes a boat, landing eventually at a point in Guanacaste department, from which he travels by camion to Liberia.

The coördinator's crew found itself in difficulty almost as soon as it arrived at Liberia. The crowds arriving for the show were much too large for the town's tiny theater, the only hall equipped with electricity. It was determined to hold the show in the square, but the leaky extension line lost much of the voltage produced by the town's one horse power electric plant. Eventually, by turning off all the other lights in town, the power rose to the 110 volts required to turn the movie projector.

The throng packed in front of the screen was in rural costume for the most part. Many were barefoot. They stared intently at the screen as the Spanish titles flashed up, heralding the picture.

See Films of Stalingrad.

Newsreel shots of the battle of Stalingrad thrilled the audience most. Excitement was high while thunder of cannon, the roar of planes, and the hiss of flamethrowers filled the little square. After it was over the excited Liberians told one another it is a much better war than they had thought possible.

German shortwave radio broadcasts have been pretty well blocked out. Propaganda by undercover agents is more than overcome by Costa Rican radios.

Jeeps Reach Remote Spots.

After the successful show at Liberia, the movie crew was assigned to exhibit its films at Las Cañas, 33 miles away. The roads were too much for the camions and air transportation was impracticable. An army officer eventually came to the rescue and set out with the men and their equipment in a jeep. The jeep bogged to its hub caps, slid down embankments, and plunged into fender deep pools. But it kept going and reached Las Cañas in about four hours.

Jeeps also are used for reaching towns such as Palmeras, about 40 miles from San José on the meseta central.

Central Americans are most interested in movies of places unfamiliar to them, but it pleases them to see themselves, their cities and towns, and their countries included in the programs of world events.

Press and radio are both coöperative in Costa Rica, according to William Gaudet, executive secretary of the committee. Transcribed programs are supplied by the committee to the radio stations.

Capture 5 Navy Fugitives After Surrounding Woods

Five sailor prisoners fled the Great Lakes naval training station yesterday by climbing a seven foot steel wire fence. They took refuge in a nearby woods on the estate of Fred Poole, a Chicago broker. Sheriff's police and squads from Waukegan, North Chicago, Lake Forest, and Libertyville, and 20 shore police from the naval station surrounded the woods and captured them.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

H. S. A. asks: "Is the offer by the army to recommission men still open? I remember reading a long time ago in your column about this possibility. I believe the item was to the effect that men who formerly were commissioned officers would be sent back to school of some kind, then put into active field service. Does one have to have held a commission in some particular arm or branch of service?"

ANSWER: Probably you refer to the coast artillery corps requisition published late in March which has just been reopened. Candidates are required to be former commissioned officers in the army of the United States, United States army, officers' reserve corps, National Guard, navy, coast guards, or marine corps. Applicants must be able to present a working knowledge of trigonometry on the opening day of school; must be graduate engineers, preferably electrical, mechanical or civil; must have followed a profession in engineering or closely allied technical field, and be under 53 years of age. Accepted candidates will be placed at a harbor defense school for 10 weeks and, on successful completion of this training, they will be assigned to field duty. It does not make any difference in what arm or branch of service or reserve you held your commission so long as you have kept up on your mathematics or take sufficient refresher work to familiarize yourself with trigonometric processes before being accepted at the school. Apply, Chicago officer procurement district office, 20 North Wacker drive. We will presently begin a series of items describing commissions available in the transportation corps of the army and the provost marshal general's office [post-war military government].

E. H. asks: "When an appeal is granted is it customary for the appeal board in a foreign state to issue the new classification card, or does the nearest draft board issue the card?"

ANSWER: The appeal must be taken thru the draft board having original jurisdiction over the registrant and the decision of the board of appeals for that area is forwarded to the registrant's original board thru the offices of the state director of that state.

L. S. writes: I've heard that the physical requirements of the navy have been drastically reduced. Can you tell me what they are now?"

ANSWER: Color blindness is still a cause for rejection from the navy, but the vision requirements are: Uncorrected vision of 10/20 reading with both eyes with the poorest eye 6/20. Otherwise the requirements are about the same as for army general service.

S. J. B. asks: "Isn't there a real honest to goodness marine mothers' organization aside from the Marine Corps League auxiliary?"

ANSWER: Up to the present the M. C. L. A. has been the only outlet for this type of activity, but an independent organization is being formed to be known as Marine Mothers of America, who will hold their second meeting June 8 at 8 p. m. at the American Legion Civil Service post offices, 155 North Clark street. All Marine Mothers are invited. For further information telephone Radcliffe 6988 or write Mrs. Catherine Rogal, 9211 South Normal avenue.

BILL LICENSING CASH EXCHANGES STIRS PROTESTS

More than 60 "independent" currency exchange operators who are members of the Currency Exchange Operators' association will oppose passage of the bill voted earlier this week by the Illinois house which licenses and regulates currency exchanges, L. S. Edelberg, attorney for the association, declared yesterday.

Edelberg charged the measure gives "arbitrary power" to the state auditor, sets up additional costs of operation for small operators which will force them out of business, "and gives no added protection." Under enactment of this bill, Edelberg pointed out, druggists who write bank money orders would be forced to quit this practice, real estate firms would have to separate completely their currency exchange business, and no merchant could cash a check for which he charged a fee.

"No one ever lost a red cent in the 10 years currency exchanges have been operated," Edelberg declared. "This bill isn't aimed at fair regulation. It is aimed at forcing small operators out of business."

Rep. William G. Thon [R., Oak Park], sponsor of the bill, declared that some downstate exchanges had failed and that in Chicago losses of $40,000 were absorbed by the Chicago Currency Exchange association. A similar bill was passed by the legislature two years ago but was vetoed by Gov. Green on technical grounds.

ONLY ONE CLASS REUNION MARKS U. I. GRADUATION

Urbana, Ill., June 5 [Special].—Commencement week at the University of Illinois this year has been streamlined to a minimum as a result of the war. Alumni have not been encouraged to return for the commencement week-end, due to transportation difficulties. The customary alumni luncheon has been canceled because of food rationing.

Only one class had a reunion. The class of 1893 held its golden anniversary reunion tonight. The annual meeting of the alumni association was held during the morning, with nearly a score of directors on hand.

A reception was held in the afternoon at the college of law. Other units dispensed with gatherings. The president's band concert was held at night, after which Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard, president, and Mrs. Willard received members of the graduating class, alumni, and commencement guests in the Illini Union.

Class day and baccalaureate services will be held tomorrow. The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Heimsath, minister of the First Baptist church of Evanston, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon.

A war accelerated program enabled approximately 500 students in the Urbana departments and 160 from the college of medicine in Chicago to receive degrees at special commencement exercises earlier this spring. The midyear graduating class was the largest in the history of the university. Degrees conferred in the downstate department last June totaled 2,036, a decrease of 905 this year.

Commencement exercises for the colleges of dentistry and pharmacy will be held on June 18 at the First Congregational church in Chicago, where 208 degrees will be conferred. Last year 384 degrees were conferred. Dean Albert J. Harno, university provost, will deliver the commencement address. Dr. Willard will confer degrees.

United Medical Service has the doctors and all other necessary medical facilities for proper diagnosis and treatment of disease

Open Evenings for Those Who Work

The big problem in medicine today is not a lack of scientific information but a wider utilization of all the knowledge and facilities which are now available. Medical knowledge has grown so great that it is beyond the capacity of any one man to possess it. Many health authorities agree that the public can be served best only when all medical facilities, necessary physicians, and X-ray and laboratory technicians are accessible under one roof. The founders of United Medical Service recognized this fact over ten years ago. It was the basic principle upon which this institution was established. It made possible for the first time complete medical services in all fields of medicine and surgery at controlled low cost.

Today with over a third of the nation's physicians serving the armed forces there is an increasing need for medical protection and care. United Medical Service is fully prepared to provide all necessary medical care to those who need it. All medical offices and facilities, four floors of them, are located in one of Chicago's finer office buildings. A competent staff of physicians is in attendance during office hours. They have wide knowledge and experience in all fields of medicine and surgery. Extensive X-ray and laboratory services are used routinely in all medical examinations. These services are readily accessible by all transportation, railroad trains, street cars, buses, elevated trains, automobiles.

All medical departments are open from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. Monday through Friday; 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Saturday. Come when most convenient for you. The fees are moderate and the same to all. Information furnished upon request.

SOX TRIUMPH; CUBS OUST DODGERS FROM TOP

ALL-STAR GAME TICKETS TO GO ON SALE TODAY

Prices Range from $2.20 to $6.60.

BY ARCH WARD.

The ticket sale for the 10th annual All-Star football game in Dyche stadium the night of Aug. 25 opens today. For the next few weeks, orders will be accepted by mail only.

Like almost every other established enterprise, the All-Star game has been streamlined to meet war conditions. It will be played in a stadium that can accommodate only half the throng that saw each of the other nine contests in Soldiers' field. There will be no player poll. The price scale of tickets has been changed. One aspect of the game, however, is the same. It will bring together the best team from the National league, the Washington Redskins, conquerors of the Chicago Bears, and the strongest available squad of college players. Five of the nation's most successful college coaches will train the All-Stars.

Best Talent Available.

For all we know, this may be the finest group ever assembled to represent college football. Maybe it will be the weakest. One thing is certain. It will be the best talent America can produce without interfering with the war effort. There will be men from the army, the navy, the marines. There will be some who spend their days in industrial plants. Others will come from the undergraduate ranks. There may be a few who have been out of college more than a year. Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., sponsor of the event, will spare no expense or energy in its attempt to present an evening's entertainment that will measure up to its predecessors. Profits of the game will be donated to Chicago's Service Men's Centers.

Seats in the middle sections [between the 30 yard lines], both in the east and west stands, will sell for $6.60. All other locations in the permanent sections will cost $4.40. There will be 10,000 bleacher seats, divided equally behind the north and south goals, for $3.30. Temporary stands will be constructed at the corners of the field to bring the capacity of the stadium to 50,000 and seats in those areas will sell for $2.20.

First Come, First Served.

Applications should be directed to the All-Star Football Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower, Chicago. Checks or money orders must be made payable to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. There will be no limitation on the number of tickets a customer may purchase. They are yours as long as they last.

The Washington Redskins, with Slinging Sammy Baugh as their ace performer, will operate for the first time this year under A. J. [Dutch] Bergman, who has replaced Ray Flaherty as head coach. Flaherty now is a naval lieutenant. Bergman, who was a brilliant half back at Notre Dame in Knute Rockne's first year as leader of the Fighting Irish, was recognized as one of the most competent coaches in the east in his 10 years of service with Catholic university. George P. Marshall, owner of the Redskins, attributed much of his team's success against the Bears in last year's championship game to Bergman's expert scouting. Washington will train for the All-Star game in San Diego, Cal., where the team is under contract to play a charity game for the Shrine's fund for crippled children.

The All-Stars, as always, will train at Northwestern university. The players will report for first practice on Aug. 7.

Track Digs Up $15,912 to Pay $2.10Minimum

New York, June 5 [Special].—Count Fleet breezed thru a mile and one-half workout before 19,200 at Belmont Park today, and was paid $35,340 for the effort, which boosted his earnings to $250,300.

For the records, however, he won the 75th running of the Belmont Stakes by 30 lengths to become the sixth horse in turf history to win racing's triple crown—the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, and Belmont Stakes.

Not only that, but his name now goes down alongside of that of Sir Barton as winner of the "quadruple crown"—which includes the Withers with the big three events for 3 year olds. Sir Barton accomplished his feat in 1918.

Track Digs Up $15,912.

Fairy Manhurst, the son of Man O' War, and Deseronto, an Omaha colt, finished second and third in that order a length apart, behind the son of Reigh Count, owned by Mrs. John Hertz.

Some thought that Johnny Longden might let Count Fleet out in an attempt to set a world record for the mile and a half, held by Bolingbroke at 2:27 3-5, but Johnny was content to saunter home with his charge in 2:28 1-5, still the fastest time ever recorded for the Belmont Stakes.

A total of $261,787 was bet on the Belmont, with $249,516 of it riding on Count Fleet. The mutuel payoff was $2.10, the legal limit, which caused the track management to dig in its pocket for $15,912, the amount minus in the legal pool on the winner. There was no betting for place and show. Actually, Count Fleet was 1 to 100.

A Workout, and Nothing More.

The Belmont Stakes was a workout and nothing more. But the fans really didn't expect anything more than that, and gave the Hertz horse and Longden a big hand as they came breezing across the finish line.

The Foxcatcher Farms, owner of Fairy Manhurst, collected $5,000 and Beverly Bogert, owner of Deseronto, $2,500, for letting their horses perform. There was a fourth prize of $1,000 which went back to the racing association because there was no taker.

Other great horses of the past who won the triple crown were Sir Barton in 1918, Gallant Fox in 1930, Omaha in 1935, War Admiral in 1937, and Whirlaway in 1941.

Whirlaway Scratched.

Whirlaway, incidentally, was supposed to make his eastern debut of the season in the $5,000 Henry of Navarre handicap, which followed the main event. But he was an overnight scratch along with Kingfisher, leaving 11 of the top sprinters in the country to answer the starter's bell in the six furlong race.

Longden made it two in a row aboard With Regards, which battled most of the way with Aerial Lad and won by a neck in the final stride. Van Prince came from far back to take third. With Regards, a son of Jack High, stepped the distance in 1:10 1-5, a fifth of a second off the track record, to reward his surprised backers with $14.

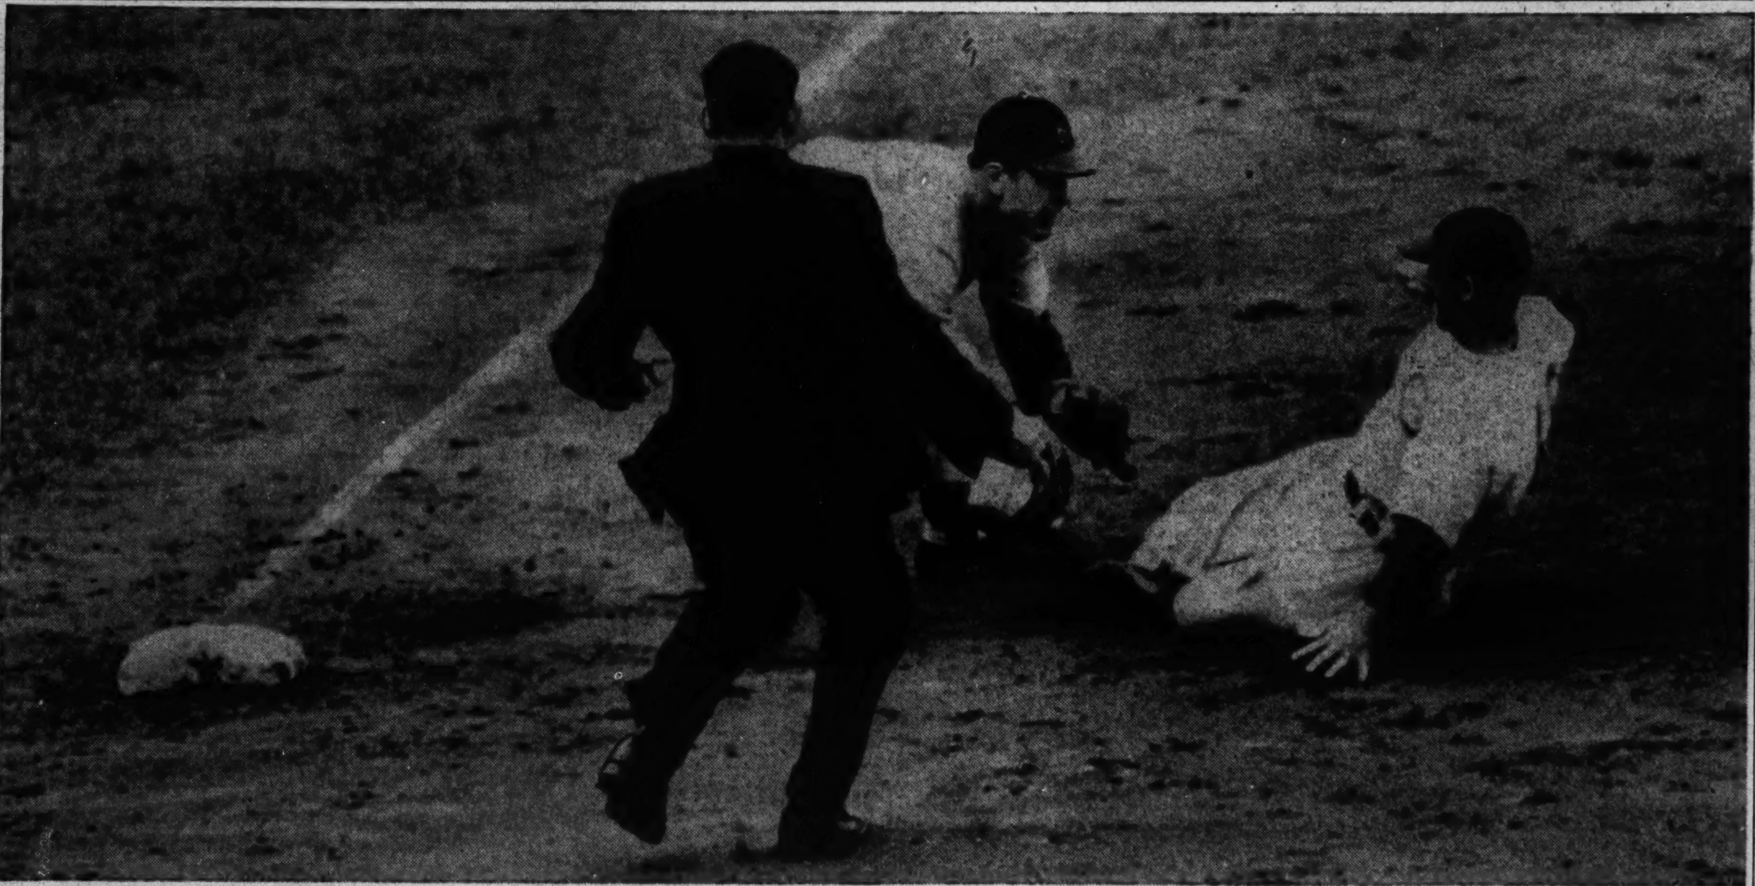
CUBS LOSE TWO DECISIONS, BUT WIN GAME



Dom Dallessandro of the Cubs is out by the proverbial mile at third base in the sixth inning of yesterday's game with the Brooklyn Dodgers in Wrigley field. Dallessandro was trying to reach third from first on a single by Chico Hernandez, but Right Fielder Dixie Walker's throw to Third Baseman Dee Moore was perfect. Larry Goetz is the umpire. The Cubs won, 3 to 2.

Eddie Stanky, Cubs' second baseman, is waved out of the game in the sixth inning by Umpire Al Barlick for protesting too vigorously Barlick's ruling that Stanky, middle man in a projected double play, had failed to touch the base to retire Arky Vaughan, altho his throw to Phil Cavarretta retired the hitter, Joe Medwick. Seven of Stanky's mates joined him in his protest.

MISS DOGWOOD WINS STEGER AT LINCOLN FIELDS

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Miss Dogwood, a smooth striding little filly owned by Brownell Combs of Lexington, Ky., raced away with the $5,000 Steger handicap which headed the Lincoln Fields program yesterday at Hawthorne. This 4 year old daughter of Bull Dog and the sensationally fast mare, Myrtlewood, withstood repeated challenges from her veteran rivals during this six and a half furlong dash. She came right on home three-quarters of a length in advance of her most persistent pursuer, Daily Trouble. Burnt Cork was third.

In winning her second victory in two starts this season, the Combs filly looked particularly impressive because she was carrying second highest weight of 116 pounds against considerably lighter imposts on her sturdy male rivals. The only contender more heavily burdened was Signator, which weakened in the drive under his impost of 121. Miss Dogwood and William Woodward's Vagrancy, were regarded the best 3 year old fillies of last season and both have given indications that they'll be just as good this year.

Miss Dogwood Is Favorite.

Miss Dogwood was the 3 to 2 favorite in the field of nine, Signator being held to second choice at 2 to 1. She paid $5 to holders of winning tickets after running the six and a half furlongs in 1:20 3-5 over a slow track.

Jockey Freddie Smith moved Miss Dogwood out of the gate swiftly but encountered unexpected fast opposition from Burnt Cork. When it became apparent that Miss Dogwood wouldn't be able to conquer her rival immediately without too early an expenditure of energy, Smith took her under restraint and let Burnt Cork move into the lead of a length on the turn.

Daily Trouble Moves Up.

Meanwhile Signator was striding along powerfully in third place and Daily Trouble was moving up from among the trailers until he was fifth as they approached the stretch.

Burnt Cork led the way by a length into the straightaway with Miss Dogwood and Signator battling head and head for second place. As they headed home, Miss Dogwood began to move in earnest. Quickly she overhauled Burnt Cork while Signator was weakening and dropping back. Miss Dogwood held an advantage of two lengths in midstretch, but here the fast closing Daily Trouble came on with a resolute bid. Miss Dogwood was equal to it, however, and she held him at a safe distance to the finish.

The crowd of 15,000 bet $711,879. On the third Saturday of last year's meeting $487,983 was bet.

Occupy Wins First Start.

Occupy, a full brother of Occupation, the nation's leading money winning juvenile of 1942, launched his career in brilliant fashion yesterday. Making his first start in a five furlong maiden race, he was backed down to 3 to 5 in the betting, and he vindicated fully the confidence in his speed and breeding. He came home seven lengths ahead of his nearest rival, Bolo Babe. A nose farther back was Zaca-

HAEGG, SWEDISH DISTANCE STAR, ARRIVES IN U. S.

New Orleans, La., June 5 (AP).—Gunder Haegg, Swedish distance runner, landed here today and immediately worked 2,000 meters over the Municipal stadium's cinder path. He left by plane at midnight for New York.

Haegg, who speaks no English, was met at the safe conduct tanker Saturnus by Sven Dahlman, first secretary of the Swedish legation, and disembarked at 7 p. m. Others in the welcoming party were Robert Plant, acting Swedish consul, and Lawrence Di Benedetto, president of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Says He Is Okay.

"He looks like a nice runner," Di Benedetto said. "He has a nice stride and after his legs limber up he really should go places." After the workout, Haegg was given a thoro rubdown and when asked how he felt, replied "Okay," the only English word he knows.

Dahlman said the runner would hold a press conference in New York at 2 p. m. tomorrow, at which it would be decided whether he would run in the A. A. U. championship meet in New York June 19 and 20.

Expects Him to Run.

The Swedish fireman, who built up his stamina by running thru the snow banks of his homeland, is reported to have said that he would not be in the best of condition for the national meets in which he is scheduled to oppose Gil Dodds of Boston in the metric mile and Greg Rice of New York in the 5,000 meters.

Dan Ferris, executive secretary of the A. A. U., who is reported to be in New Orleans, however, has said that Haegg had promised to compete in the nationals and that he expected the runner to keep that promise.

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—Comdr. Thomas J. Hamilton, who organized the navy's toughening program for aviators, has been put on duty at sea, it was officially announced today, and associates said the action was in accord with Hamilton's own desires.

He was succeeded as director of the naval aviation physical training program by Lt. Comdr. Frank H. Wickhorst, one of the navy's all-time athletic stars who for the 10 years ending in 1941 was line coach and director of intramural sports at the University of California.

Named Hamilton's Assistant.

In March, 1941, Wickhorst, who was a graduate of the naval academy but was actually in reserve status, went on active duty to teach navigation to young reserve officers at California. A year later he was assigned here to assist Hamilton in the formation of the physical training program.

There was no information available from the navy on the nature of Hamilton's sea assignment. Friends said, however, that having been on shore duty for about two years he was eager to get to sea and that the current assignment fitted in with his desires. He is an aviator.

Transfers to Naval Academy.

Wickhorst played freshman football at the University of Illinois in 1922 with Red Grange and Earl Britton. The following year he transferred to the naval academy. In his second year at the academy he became first string tackle and held that berth for the next two seasons.

Graduated from the academy at a time when there was no pressing need for many new officers, Wickhorst accepted a position as coach at the University of Iowa and remained there four years. Then in 1931 he went to California.

WHITE SOX AND LEE BEAT HUGHSON IN BOSTON, 4-1; FOURTH STRAIGHT!

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 5.—The currently up and at 'em White Sox bowled along to their fourth straight success today, the power for the pleasant ride being supplied by a few well timed base hits and some super-charged southpawing by the erstwhile mound invalid, Thornton [The Goon] Lee. Under Lee's treatment the Red Sox succumbed, 4 to 1, in the third of the series, a count that gave Jimmy Dykes' tourists a clear claim to fourth place in the American league.

The Chicagoans, having in mind that a favorable decision would give them their seventh triumph in eight games, clubbed Tex Hughson, last season's 22 game winner, in a hurry. They made a run in the first inning, Don Kolloway furnishing the important hit, and they nicked him for two more in the third, Kolloway again carrying the load. After this they did nothing much until the ninth, when Lee personally took charge of driving in the fourth run at the expense of Mace Brown, the ex-Pirate.

Lupien Prevents Shutout.

In his second start since his arm was stretched to eliminate adhesions in the shoulder, Lee looked every bit as good as he did when he held the Senators to one run last Sunday. The man who now may be raised from his $1 per year wage was in difficulties three times in the first eight innings, but skipped over them with such ease that he had a shutout going into the ninth. Then Tony Lupien, the Harvard alumnus, sailed a homer into the right field seats.

Hughson started the first inning by fanning Jim Grant and ended it by doing the same to Luke Appling. But in between these incidents the Chicagoans were exceedingly busy. Thurman Tucker walked and stole second. Guy Curtright flied to Pete Fox but Kolloway punched a single thru short to send in Tucker. Wally Moses also singled, but it went to waste. The Red Sox threatened to grab back the run in their half, Dee Miles opening with a triple. A double play on Jim Tabor's grounder after Bobby Doerr had walked with one out lifted Lee out of the jam.

Kuhel Wastes Double.

The Chicagoans passed up a chance after Joe Kuhel had led off

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The resilient Cubs yesterday bounced right back from the 18 to 5 jolting they took Friday at the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers and proceeded to kick said Dodgers out of first place, a berth in which the Gowanus lads had held uninterrupted tenancy since the first day of the season. This joyous accomplishment was achieved by Ray Prim's 3 to 2 victory, plus the St. Louis Cardinals' 1 to 0 decision over the Phillies, a welcome development for the Chicagoans, perhaps, tho it left them 12 games behind the new leaders.

It was Prim's second start and his second victory. He received stellar relief from Henry Wyse but little encouragement from Umpires Larry Goetz and Al Barlick, a couple of notoriously touchy gents who set new hair-trigger highs in the time it took them to boot Chico Hernandez and Eddie Stanky out of the game. Goetz did his stuff in a big jam just after Wyse had rushed in to action in the eighth. Barlick had chased Stanky awfully fast in the sixth, but it may be said that the decision which stirred up Stanky obviously was correct.

Higbe's Wildness Helps Cubs.

The Cubs scored in two innings. They made the first two runs of the game off Kirby Higbe in the fourth on a triple by Stan Hack, passes to Phil Cavarretta and Bill Nicholson which loaded the bases with one out, Lou Novikoff's force out which missed being Lou's second double play only because of a faulty relay by Bill Herman, and an infield single by Dom Dallessandro. The Dodgers scored in the fifth on singles by Dee Moore and Dixie Walker and Nicholson's wide throw past third.

So the score was 2 to 1 when Barlick cracked down on Stanky in the sixth. Arky Vaughan opened with a single to right and Joe Medwick bounced to Hack. Hack threw to Stanky and Eddie obviously missed the bag on his effort to force Vaughan. He relayed the ball to Cavarretta to get Medwick easily, but when Stanky discovered that Barlick had called Vaughan safe the young second baseman started toward Barlick to protest. Barlick, who knew he was right, was very tough, of course, and the spot gave him a chance for one of the foghorn roars he affects. Eddie went away and Stu Martin took his place.

Prim Scores Winning Run.

Prim scored the winning run in the seventh at the expense of Ed Head, first of the three successors to Higbe. Prim, first to face Head, walked. Hack sacrificed and when Moore threw the ball into center field, Prim went to third. Martin lined to Herman, but Cavarretta singled to left, scoring Prim with the payoff counter. Then Max Macon appeared on the mound. Nicholson bounced to Dolph Camilli and Novikoff was given an intentional pass to load the bases. Peanuts Lowrey was sent up to bat for Dallessandro and Les Webber replaced Macon. Lowrey forced Cavarretta at third, Moore unassisted.

So the Cubs were leading, 3 to 1, going into the Brooklyn eighth.

Niggeling Shades Wensloff in Mound Duel.

New York, June 5 (AP).—The New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns played their third straight nip and tuck battle today, but this time the Browns came out on top, 3 to 2, in 10 innings.

The American league champions were charged with four errors, but the chief reason for their defeat was the pitching of Johnny Niggeling, veteran knuckle ball hurler. He limited the Yanks to five hits and struck out eight to run his season strikeouts to 33.

Charley Keller's eighth homer of the year tied the game in the ninth, but the visitors got a reprieve in the first of the tenth when, with one down, Nick Etten messed up Milt Byrnes' bounder. A wild pitch by Charley Wensloff put Byrnes on second from where he tallied when Chet Laabs singled thru short for his third hit of the game. Score:

Philadelphia, Pa., June 5 (AP).—Bunching their seven hits effectively while Orie Arntzen kept Cleveland's 12 scattered, the Athletics nosed out the Indians today, 6 to 5. Altho they gained ground on the American league leaders, the A's dropped into fifth place, three percentage points behind the White Sox.

A home run by Elmer Valo furnished the winning run in the seventh inning.

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—The Senators hit in the pinches and took advantage of Detroit lapses to defeat the Tigers, 6 to 3, today and move back into second place in the American league.

Early Wynn registered his fourth straight victory in bringing the Senators within striking distance of the New York Yankees. Wynn's season record is four triumphs against three losses. He was relieved by Milt Haefner in the eighth. Hal Newhouser worked five innings for Detroit and was charged with the loss. Johnny Gorsica finished.

Sox Name Wade, Grove to Face Boston Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 5.—Jake Wade and Orval Grove will pitch tomorrow when the White Sox close the eastern portion of their tour with a double header. The Red Sox plan to start Yank Terry and Oscar Judd.

Manager James Dykes continues to wonder what has happened to Eddie Smith. The southpaw last was seen on Wednesday, when he started for his New Jersey home to consult with his draft board.

By way of avoiding week-end travel, the White Sox will remain here until Monday afternoon, reaching Detroit the following morning. They will open against the Tigers in a twilight game Wednesday.

in the second with a double, but made amends for this neglect with their two run third. Tucker set this incident in motion by singling to center, after which Curtright popped to Doerr. Kolloway stepped into the proceedings with his triple, a drive to the wall in right center, Tucker streaking around to the plate. Kolloway scored under cover of Moses' long fly to Fox.

The Boston third put a little extra pressure on Lee's arm. Skeeter Newsome opened with a double down the third base line and Hughson walked. A pop foul handled by Mike Tresh took care of Miles. Fox forced Hughson at second, barely escaping a double killing. Doerr ended the inning with a tall fly to Tucker. The Red Sox also had two on bases because of a pass and single with one out in the seventh. With two out, Manager Joe Cronin picked himself to bat for Hughson and flied to Curtright.

Lee Drives in Appling.

Appling finally got to base in the ninth, the fare for the ride being a fumble by Tabor. Then Luke stole second. Neither Kuhel nor Tresh could aid Luke, but Lee whistled a single past Doerr and the shortstop cashed in at the plate.

Lee had little trouble other than Lupien's homer which opened the ninth. With one out, Roy Partee walked and Newsome was credited with a double when Tucker stumbled trying to get under the fly ball. Lee dispatched the next two batters on infield taps.

Augie Galan executed his second strikeout of the afternoon, but Vaughan socked his second single. After Medwick flied to Nicholson, Camilli singled to center, Vaughan stopping at second. Herman whizzed a single into right, scoring Vaughan and putting Camilli on third with the tying run.

Hernandez Is Chased.

It was at this juncture that Wyse went in. He got the count on Mickey Owen to two balls and two strikes. Then he came in with a low curve which appeared to be a perfect strike. Goetz didn't think so, and Hernandez was the first to express his surprise at the ruling. Before Chico could think of the English words he wanted to say, the hot headed Cincinnatian, in a frenzy of anger, had Chico on his way. Al Todd went in and Wyse this time threw one that Owen thought was a strike. Mickey bounced it gently to Martin and the Dodgers' last threat was over. Wyse retired Moore, Walker and Al Glossop easily in the ninth.

The victory gave the Cubs a 2 to 1 edge in the series which ends with a double header this afternoon. The series started with Lon Warneke's cheering 8 to 1 blistering of the then first-placers. Then there was that 18 to 5 accident Friday.

The Cubs and the Brooklyn Dodgers will meet in a double header this afternoon in Wrigley field. Hi Bithorn and Claude Passeau, both still smarting from cruel treatment at the hands of the Phillies, are slated to pitch for the Cubs. It is to be Whit Wyatt and Curt Davis or Rube Melton for the Dodgers.

The Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds will play a morning game in Wrigley field next Friday. The Cub office announced the contest would start at 11 o'clock as an experiment in response to request of war workers on shifts that preclude their attendance at afternoon games.

The Friday game will be the next National league game in Wrigley field after today's double header.

RHEINGOLDS WIN OVER PARICHY GIRLS, 3 TO 2,

Catherine Fellmeth won a pitching duel with Laura Bishop and the Rheingolds defeated the Parichy Bloomer Girls, 3 to 2, last night in Rheingold stadium in a Metropolitan Chicago Girls Major Softball league game. Fellmeth yielded only three hits. The Gold Crowns beat the Tungsten Sparks, 6 to 4, in Shewbridge field and the Rockolas shut out the Benda Coals Co-eds, 5 to 0, in Rockola stadium on Lonnie Stark's three hit pitching. Tonight's schedule:

Rockolas vs. Gold Crowns in Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets; Tungsten Sparks vs. Rheingolds in Rheingold stadium, 75th street and Euclid avenue, and the Benda Coals Co-eds vs. Parichy Bloomer Girls in Parichy stadium, Harlem avenue and Harrison street.

Negro Giants Face Memphis RedSoxToday

The Memphis Red Sox, one of the top attractions of colored baseball, will invade Comiskey park this afternoon to play the Chicago American Giants in a Negro American league double header, starting at 1:30.

The Red Sox were the last team to win the league championship—in 1938—before Satchel Paige's Kansas City Monarchs started a four year reign. The American Giants, incidentally, trounced the Monarchs last Wednesday night in Indianapolis for their most important victory of the year.

Against Chicago, Memphis will pit a lineup including Larry Brown, manager and catcher, formerly with the American Giants in the same dual rôle; Porter [Ankleball] Moss, pitcher; Jelly Taylor, flashy first sacker here on an army furlough, and Neil Robinson, center fielder and for three seasons the league's champion home run hitter.

It is expected that Ted [Double Duty] Radcliffe, Chicago's versatile manager, pitcher, and catcher, will start on the mound against Moss in the first game, with Gentry Jessup the home team's choice against Willie Hudson in the second game. The lineups:

Hubbell Wins 250th for Giants; Yields 1 Hit.

St. Louis, Mo., June 5 (AP).—The world champion Cardinals took over first place in the National league for the first time this season by shutting out Philadelphia, 1 to 0, today as the Brooklyn Dodgers were defeated by Chicago.

Stan Musial's one hit of the day—a single in the sixth—was an all-important one. It drove in the Cardinal tally to give them a half game margin over Brooklyn and extended the slugging outfielder's hitting streak to 22 consecutive games.

Called Under Protest.

The contest was called after 7½ innings. Bucky Harris, manager of the Phillies, protested the game because he said the Cardinals had made no effort to keep the field in proper condition for play during the time out.

Musial's hit broke up a pitching duel between young Howie Krist and Philadelphia's Jack Kraus. Krist allowed only four hits while Kraus limited the Red Birds to six. Neither hurler walked a man, nor did either yield an extra base hit.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 5 (AP).—Carl Hubbell, 39 year old master of the screw ball, hurled one hit ball in defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 1, today to hang up the 250th victory of his career for the New York Giants.

The veteran southpaw silenced all of the Pirates except Elbie Fletcher, who drove the ball into the right field stands in the seventh inning for his second homer of the season. Hubbell struck out two and walked four.

Two Strings Broken.

The performance broke the Giants' losing streak that had reached six defeats in their last seven games. The other was a tie. At the same time he snapped the Pirates' string of five triumphs.

Hubbell had tried twice before this season to become the only active pitcher to score 250 victories. But both times he was driven from the mound—the first time by the Cubs and the second by the Cards. Today he was backed up by an 11 hit attack that scored three runs in the first inning and two more in the second. Score:

BRAVES TRIP REDS, 6-4.

Cincinnati, O., June 5 (AP).—Butch Nieman, former half back for the University of Kansas, broke up an up and down ball game today with a ninth inning triple that gave the Boston Braves a 7 to 5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Nieman took full advantage of a set-up provided by Lonnie Frey's fumble on a double play ball. After Tommy Holmes had singled with one out, Johnny McCarthy sent a grounder to Frey and the inning should have been over. Instead, two men were on and Nieman was up to deliver his drive to the right field corner. Score:

Obtains Army Leave to Play in Detroit.

Seymour Greenberg, who won the national clay courts tennis championship in St. Louis last year, will defend his title in the 33d annual tournament starting June 14 in Detroit. Greenberg said yesterday he has been given an eight day leave from his duties as an army instructor in radio communications in the Stevens hotel.

Greenberg, the Northwestern southpaw star who long had a grip on Western conference honors, will pass up the Illinois state tournament which will be held June 12 to 20 at the Fullerton Tennis club, 2315 Sheffield avenue.

Strong Field in National.

He selected the national tournament because it will have a strong field. Many of the stars who will compete in the national intercollegiate tournament in Evanston June 21 to 26 will be in the national clay courts field. In this group will be Bob Odman of the University of Washington. He is a ranking player in the Pacific northwest. Jimmy Evert of Notre Dame hopes to compete in the Detroit event.

In an exhibition match at the Fullerton club yesterday, Greenberg defeated Evert, 6-2, and then won from Max Davison, 6-3. Evert won from Davidson by the same score.

Francisco Segura, ranked fourth nationally, will represent the University of Miami in the collegiate meet. His entry was received yesterday by Coach Paul Bennett, Northwestern tennis coach.

Ohio State to Compete.

Coach Bennett also reported entries have been received from Ohio State, Big Ten champions, U. C. L. A., Princeton, and Texas. Naval Aviation Cadet Roger Downs of Northwestern, winner of the Big Ten singles title, may not be available for the national intercollegiate meet since he is awaiting orders for assignment to a new base.

Chicago tennis circles perked up further yesterday with the arrival of Bobby Riggs from Minneapolis, where he terminated a tennis connection.

Set Limit on Field.

Officials of the national clay courts tournament plan to limit participants to 64 in men's singles and 32 in women's singles. Pauline Betz of Los Angeles, national champion, is the foremost contestant in her division. There also will be doubles. In winning the title last year, Greenberg whipped Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla.

Training in Navigation Is Provided.

Nearly 900 students, many of them yachtsmen, have been enrolled in the five classes held by the club since 1939, according to Commodore Harold F. Wood. Dr. Ralph B. Onaway, the racing-cruising yawl which Sam C. Pirie Jr. of the Chicago and Sheridan Shore Yacht clubs brought here two seasons ago, has been sold to Harry Ziemann, well known Milwaukee yachtsman. The 44 foot yacht made a good showing last year in the Mackinac race. Its former owner is now a lieutenant in the navy.

Normally, the funds used to purchase this equipment would have bought prizes for star pupils in the annual free TRIBUNE golf school. . . . This year, officials of the school and the Illinois section decided to divert the money to buy clubs and balls for soldiers, sailors, marines, and coast guardsmen stationed here. . . . The Locker Room today is happy to report that a surplus above the expenses of the party has been revealed by Stewart McCutcheon, U. S. O. director. . . . More than 200 reservations have been made for the first of the four stag tournaments to be conducted by Tam o' Shanter. . . Friday is the date.

Gene Battistoni, Former Ridgemoor Pro, in England.

Howard Davis, Ridgemoor professional, recently received a letter from his one-time assistant, Gene Battistoni, who now is stationed in England with the army medical corps. . . . The club was hard pressed last Monday, when Thornton High of Harvey, which supplies Ravisloe with about a third of its employés, kept school open. . . . Chick Evans of Edgewater won the recent Midlothian Derby using wooden shafted clubs. . . . They were made by Jerry Cooke from wood sent to Evans from Burma.

Elmhurst Country club will hold its annual blowout on Wednesday, June 16. A $5 ticket calls for 18 holes of golf, luncheon, dinner, entertainment and free potables at the 13th. . . . Beginning last Wednesday, Elmhurst inaugurated a "bus meets train" schedule for members. . . . The bus will meet two trains, one leaving the loop station of the Northwestern railroad at 11:55 a. m. and reaching Elmhurst at 12:33 p. m. . . . The other train will leave the loop at 4:35 p. m. and reach Elmhurst at 5:09 p. m. . . . The Inquiring Golfer

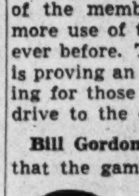
THE QUESTION.

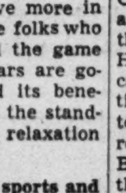
What effect do you think the war will have on golf in this second wartime season? [Asked at Tam o' Shanter Country club.]

THE ANSWERS.

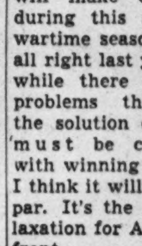
George S. May, president—Judging from the first session of activity at our club, it's going to help us. Last month was the first May in the club history to show a profit despite the fact that it was a rainy one. The club's location is convenient for a majority of the members, who are making more use of the club facilities than ever before. The new club directory is proving an ideal base for car pooling for those members who wish to drive to the club.



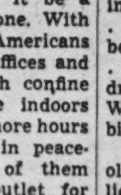
Bill Gordon, professional—I think that the game has the greatest opportunity it ever had to prove itself the No. 1 conditioner, mentally and physically. Golf should thrive more in 1943 because folks who have played the game in other years are going to need its benefits more than ever, from the standpoints of exercise and relaxation during this war year.



Arch Matson, chairman sports and pastimes—I am convinced that golf will make out well during this second wartime season. It did all right last year, and while there are new problems this year, the solution of which must be consistent with winning the war, I think it will be up to past seasons' par. It's the perfect vehicle for relaxation for Americans on the home front.



Bob MacDonald—I don't think the war will have any effect on the game unless it be a constructive one. With so many Americans working in offices and in jobs which confine them to the indoors for several more hours a day than in peacetime, more of them are going to need an outlet for their free days, and golf is just the game to provide that.



Edward J. Weichmann—I feel that golf this year will come into its own far more than it did last year. There already is a trend toward more interest in participant sports than in sideline recreations, and there's no argument about the value of golf in this direction. In addition, there probably will be fewer extended out-of-town vacations, and war workers will spend more time at golf clubs in their home vicinities.

THE tournament committee of the Chicago District Golf association will open its 1943 schedule with one of its best events—the annual Champion of Champions battle—at Park Ridge on Friday. . . . . The entry fee of $3 includes luncheon, and should be forwarded to Tournament Chairman Robert B. Emery, Room 1844, La Salle hotel. . . . Play will be at 36 holes, unless weather conditions prevent, in which event it will be at 27. . . . The tournament is open to the club champions of ANY years, providing they still are members of the C. D. G. A. clubs. . . . Par at Butterfield now is 36—35—71. . . . The original first nine, a par 35, of the handsome 27 hole layout is not being used, but it is being maintained. . . . The old third nine, a par 36, now is the first playing nine, and added to the second nine's par 35 makes the 18 hole card a 71. . . . The club will hold its annual Cruise day, one of the better invitationals, next Saturday.

Johnny Lehman, former Western Amateur champion, had two shots on the 19th to win the flag tournament at Edgewater last Monday, but put both out of bounds. . . . Edgewater will conduct its annual Hy-Jinx on Aug. 18. . . . Frank Currier, who started as a bellhop at Ravisloe 10 years ago, now is the club manager. . . . Col. Bob Harris, former University of Chicago athlete, is back in town, stationed at the 11th corps headquarters. . . . He aims to get in a round this morning at his old club, Bryn Mawr. . . . June 18 is set for the first open day of the Chicago Women's District Golf association at La Grange. . . . Mrs. G. M. Mellor, president of the C. W. D. G. A., now may be reached by addressing mail to her "Clarendon Hills." . . .

Wally Must Have Decided to Stay at Medinah.

Seventeen years ago, a lanky kid reported to the then new Medinah Country club. . . . He was just going to work a couple of days, driving the club bus. . . . Within a few months he was working in the pro shop. . . . Followed duties as night desk clerk, assistant grounds superintendent, caddymaster and golf superintendent, locker room superintendent, and assistant manager. . . . Thru all those years, he could be reached by the call, "Wally!" . . . So now the kid who came to drive a bus for a few days is Wally Womeldorf, new manager of the big west side club.

The North Shore Golf league, oldest of Chicago's interclub families, will tee off on its 1943 season Wednesday at Westmoreland. . . . Charles Morrow is president and John A. Anderson is secretary. . . . Team captains are Hi Fargo Jr., Edgewater; Frank Haggarty, Evanston; George Le Mire, North Shore; Dr. A. O. Young, Park Ridge; Herb Wolf, Ridgemoor; Paul Curtis, Skokie; Warren Brown, Sunset Ridge, and Mel Hill, Westmoreland. . . . Two other matches will be played, on July 21 at Edgewater and on Aug. 18 at Skokie. . . . Instead of the Nassau system, one point will be scored for a win and a half point for a tie. . . . Each No. 1 man will tee off with three other No. 1 men and play the others simultaneously, followed by Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 in foursomes.

Citizens who feel that all golf professionals do is play the game should consider that Jerry Glynn, new pro at Park Ridge, was on the lesson tee 9 hours last Tuesday, 9 more on Wednesday, and 11 on Thursday. . . . Paul Schmainda, the new pro at Acacia, plans to organize a commercial golf league there. . . . Paul formerly was stationed at St. Cloud, Minn. and Grand Island, Neb. . . . A wedding reception for Mrs. Arthur Rech, formerly Jean Ruth May, daughter of Tam o' Shanter's president, was held Friday night at the club. . . . More than 500 friends of the family attended. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Rech, both graduates of Wheaton college, were married at the Ravenswood Baptist church. . . . They'll honeymoon in Mexico.

NEW YORK HAS NO CONTENDER FOR PEP'S TITLE

New York, June 5 (AP).—As far as the New York state boxing commission is concerned there is no leading contender for Willie Pep's featherweight boxing championship.

Chalky Wright, who knocked out Phil Terranova in the fifth round in Madison Square Garden last night, was supposed to be "it" but when his manager, Eddie Walker, failed to show up today to sign for a fight with Pep the commission said it had no other contender. Lou Viscusi, Pep's manager, was present with a pen in hand ready to sign on the dotted line.

Pep will meet Sal Bartolo in Boston Tuesday night in a fight designated by the Massachusetts commission as a title affair but regardless of the outcome Pep still will be the champion in New York state, since the New York body refused to put its stamp of approval on the fight.

4 CHAMPIONS TO DEFEND CROWNS IN N. C. A. A. MEET

Event Will Open Friday in Dyche Stadium.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Four champions are expected to defend their honors Saturday afternoon in the 22d annual National Collegiate track meet in Dyche stadium. These men are Harold Davis of California, Dal Dupre of Ohio State, Jack DeField of Minnesota, and Clifford Bourland of Southern California.

Davis won the 100 yard and 220 yard sprint titles last summer in Lincoln, Neb., and later ran a 9 and 5/10 second century on the track where he will compete this week. He will be the mainstay of the California Bears who have hopes of displacing Southern California as team champions of the N. C. A. A. The Trojans' triumph last year was their eighth consecutive victory and their 11th since the games were founded in 1921.

Dupre will compete in the broad jump which he won last June with a mark of 24 feet 3¼ inches. Dupre retained his Western conference championship last month with a broad jump effort of 24 feet 1 inch. Dupre, however, scarcely can expect to win in the N. C. A. A. since Ralph Tate of Oklahoma A. & M. won the Drake relay jump at 24 feet 7¼ inches and has done even better in the outdoor campaign.

Bourland Is 440 King.

Bourland won the 440 yard dash last year. His championship time of 48 and 2-10 seconds, duplicated this season, qualified him in the group of six collegians who have run a shade over 48 seconds this season. Five of them are entered in this meet. Of the group Bob Kelley of Illinois and Frank Cotter of N. Y. U. plan to challenge Bourland. The 440 field is mediocre compared to other years. The N. C. A. A. record of :46.5 was established by Archie Williams of California in 1936.

Defield cleared 14 feet 1 inch to take the pole vault championship at Lincoln, but the Minnesotan, declared eligible just before the Big Ten meet, has not bettered 14 feet this spring. He won the Western conference pole vault at 13 feet 10 inches and then conquered the Central Collegiate field at the very mediocre height of 13 feet.

Thirty-five colleges and universities placed in the 1942 N. C. A. A. meet. The number of teams entered probably will not exceed this total Friday when the preliminaries get under way, but the caliber of the championship performances in each of the 14 events is expected to compare favorably with last year's marks.

Ollie Hunter of Notre Dame, the best two miler of the collegiate season, will compete Saturday it was announced yesterday. Hunter previously had quit running after his graduation May 2. Notre Dame also will be represented by Jim Delaney, the best shotputter in the midwest.

Illinois Improves.

Ohio State, 1942 Western conference champion, finished second in the National Collegiate, but the Buckeyes will fall far below that high standard this week. To compensate, Illinois, scoring only 8½ points last year at Lincoln, should place in the first five. The Illini were second in the Big Ten to Michigan and then won the Central Collegiate championship. Michigan, the Big Ten winner, altho failing to score an individual triumph, will be represented only by four men. They are Ross Hume, Bob Ufer, Charles Pinney, and Bob Segula.

Illinois' entry also will be abbreviated. Coach Leo Johnson probably will have five men in the National Collegiate, including Clarence Dunn, Big Ten mile champion, and Bob Kelley, half mile and 440 yard champion.

Dupre heads a group of five Buckeyes who already are listed in the N. C. A. A.

Bill Christopher Entered.

The broad jump will be livened by the presence of Bill Christopher of Rice, who holds the Southwest conference title. Rice institute also will send Bill Cummins and Bob Porter, who won the Southwest hurdle and mile championships, respectively.

New York university, champion of the I. C. 4-A, has entered seven of its team of 11 men who won the Eastern title.

Other teams in Saturday's meet are Virginia, Mississippi State, which will be represented by Mike Mikalic, Southeastern conference shotput champion; Missouri, Big Six champion; Cornell college, Marquette, Indiana, and Minnesota.

Capt. R. R. M. Emmet, commanding officer of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, will be the referee. Lt. Comdr. T. N. Metcalf will be Capt. Emmets' assistant.

Trials Set for Friday.

Trials will be held Friday afternoon in 10 events. The finals on Saturday will start with the mile run. The all-time National Collegiate records follow:

100 YARDS—0:09.4 by Simpson, Ohio State, 1939; Wykoff, Southern California, 1930; Metcalfe, Marquette, 1933, and Owens, Ohio State, 1933.

220 YARDS—0:20.4 by Metcalfe, Marquette, 1933.

440 YARDS—0:46.5 by Williams, California, 1936.

HALF MILE—1:50.3 by Woodruff, Pittsburgh, 1937.

TWO MILES—9:02.6 by Rice, Notre Dame, 1939.

120 YARD HIGH HURDLES—0:13.9 by Dugger, Tufts, 1940.

220 YARD LOW HURDLES—0:22.7 by Keller, Ohio State, 1932, and Hardin, Louisiana State, 1934.

POLE VAULT—14 feet 8¾ inches by Sefton, Southern California, 1937.

HIGH JUMP—6 feet 10¾ inches by Steers, Oregon, 1941.

SHOTPUT—56 feet ½ inch by Blozis, Georgetown, 1940.

BROAD JUMP—26 feet 1¾ inches by Owens, Ohio State, 1935.

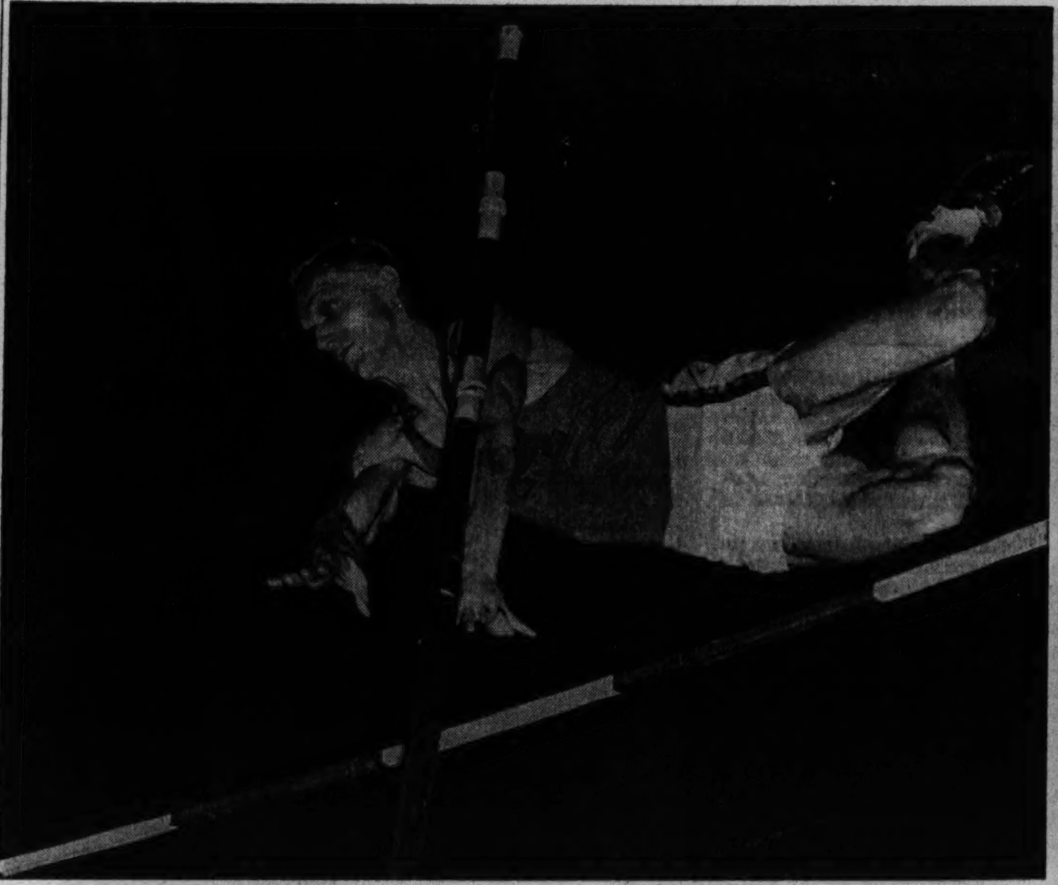
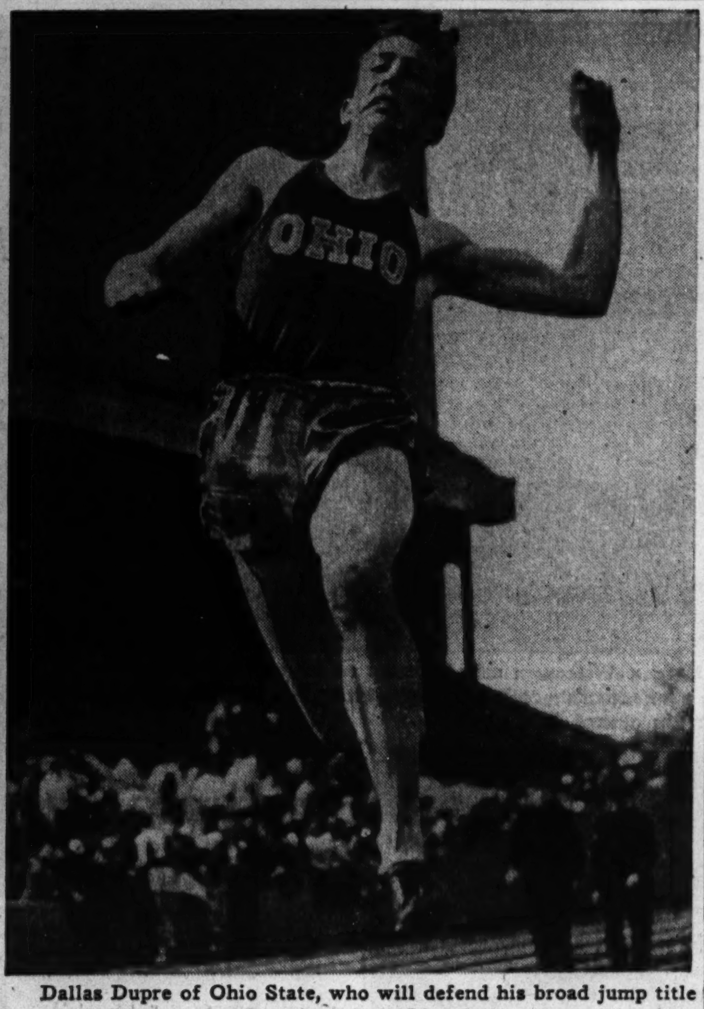
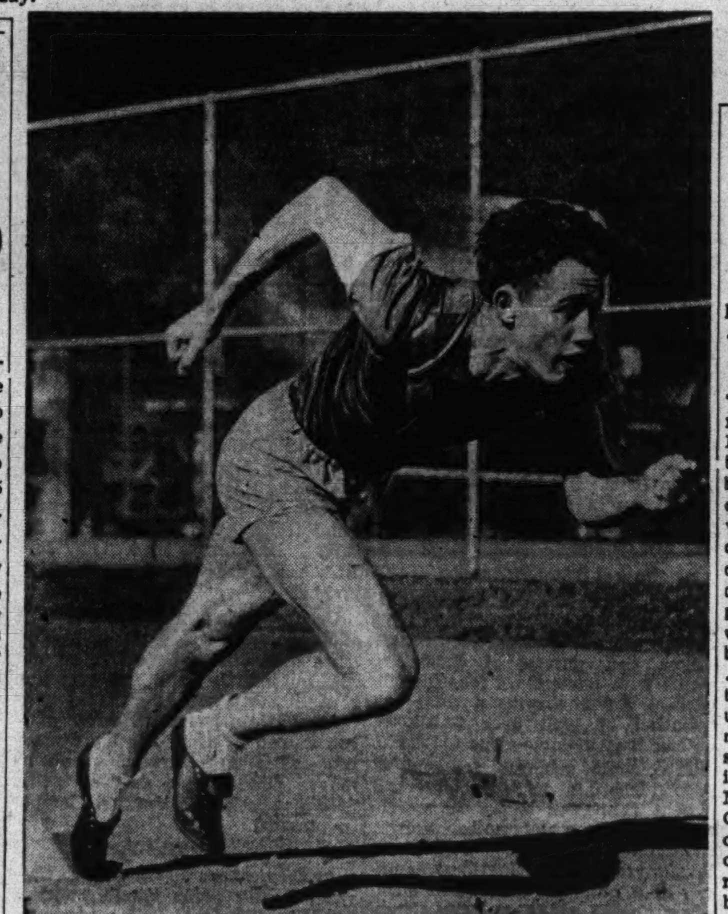
WILL DEFEND TITLES IN NATIONAL COLLEGIATE MEET



Jack De Field of Minnesota displays excellent form in the pole vault, and he'll defend his National collegiate championship in that event Saturday in Dyche stadium. De Field won the pole vault in last year's competition in Lincoln, Neb., with a mark of 14 feet 1 inch. Preliminaries in the 22d annual collegiate meet will be held Friday.



Dallas Dupre of Ohio State, who will defend his broad jump title Saturday. He won the championship in Lincoln last year with a leap of 24 feet 3¼ inches. Last month he retained his Western conference championship with a jump of 24 feet 1 inch.



The University of California's sprint champion, Harold Davis, who will defend his National collegiate honors in the 100 and 220 yard events Saturday. He will be the mainstay of the Bears who have hopes of displacing Southern California as team champions.

NOVIKOFF BACK; CUBS SWINGING TO SHOW HIM UP

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Bill Nicholson knocked two homers in the 23d game played by the Chicago Cubs in 1943. These two homers drove in four of the five runs which enabled the Chicago team to beat the Boston Braves, 5 to 1, but that wasn't why Nicholson's homers really were memorable. The first circuit smack by Nick was virtually historic because it was the first Cub homer of the season and terminated the team's dubious distinction, extending over a month, of being the only team in the majors not strong enough to bust at least one homer.

In the official figures issued May 27, three days before Nicholson's sudden outbreak of power, the New York Giants had a total of 17 home runs. This figure can be laughed off because the Polo Grounds is a spurious layout from a sporting standpoint. The Boston Braves and the Philadelphia Phillies had made 10 homers each and they play their home games in orthodox ball parks. The Cardinals boasted 11 homers and the league leading Dodgers six. The Pirates and the Reds, who play their home games in parks not designed for homer production, had four homers apiece.

Yanks Lead in A. L.

The American league didn't have a team with fewer than a pair of homers when the Cubs still were nursing their zero. The Yanks led with 13, the Browns were next with eight, and the Tigers third with five.

Nicholson came out of his long cramp against a good pitcher, Al Javery. Al had won four straight before Nick upset him. In addition to Nick's two homers, Lou Novikoff and Peanuts Lowrey socked triples, thus giving the Cubs a total of 20 bases on their eight hits. Against the Giants in the series immediately preceding the Braves' visit to Wrigley Field, the Cubs made 25 hits and none was for more than a single.

All season, Manager Jim Wilson has been hollering at his players to at least take a good swing every time they went to the plate, no matter what happened. But he won no attention till Lou Novikoff joined the team. Then the players expressed determination to show the public Lou could swing no harder than they could.

Novikoff Starts Hitting.

Novikoff went into the Cub lineup the day he joined the squad after his long holdout. He didn't do so well until he made two singles in his third game, then he hit the left field wall in the 13th inning of a game with the Braves. The Braves had gone ahead, 3 to 2, in the first of the 13th, so it was urgent that Lou start something when he went up with one out in the Cub half of the 13th. He hammed one off the left field wall, scored the tying run on two wild pitches and the Cubs went on in the inning for a greatly desired 4 to 3 victory.

The newspaper photographers took nothing but pictures of Novikoff, which appeared in the Sunday papers on the day Nicholson started swinging.

Nicholson knocked his first homers on his 133d and 135th times at bat. The whole team had been to bat 1,120 times, had scored 92 runs and made 261 hits before Nick clicked with the team's first homer of the year.

There may be better explanations, but if the Cubs keep slugging we'll ask permission to crown Novikoff the Cubs' power bellwether. Not because he is the idol of his mates, understand—because he isn't.

North Town Softball League to Open Today

The North Town Softball league will begin its fourth year today, according to its president, Mel Tillens. Included in the eight-team league are: The Great Rohdes, Glenview Naval Air Base, North Town Currency Exchange, and a team representing Alderman Orlikoski. All games will be played in North Town Currency stadium at Devon and Kedzie avenues.

American League Springs Surprise; All Clubs in Race

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 5.—It is now generally agreed that the American league is having quite a tight race, something it hadn't anticipated. Morover, the eight managers in the circuit don't dispute the contention. Each goes a little farther. None is willing to count himself out, which would seem to indicate they fully expect the pennant sprint is going to be a blanket affair right down to the finish.

Whether they all are going to be there or thereabouts when the final decision is reached is anybody's guess, but what is more interesting at this moment is what has caused this jumble of teams in a limited space instead of seven of them stretched out over a long piece with one thought in mind—catch the Yankees. Various factors have entered into the alterations and the league magnates naturally aren't sorry. A tight race means sustained interest in the shape of gate receipts.

Then, There's the New Ball.

First off, consider the ball which after the season opened was stepped up to make it as lively as anything in use for the last several years. If the ball was speeded up nobody has noticed much difference, altho there is no way of telling whether the manufacturers a few weeks hence might not quietly slip in a real jackrabbit and disarrange the present chummy setup, not to mention the close finish predictions.

From the ball, proceed to the fact that some of the long distance hitters of last season are serving with Uncle Sam. They did pretty well in a home run way last year and the ball was supposed to be far deader than the article now employed. What they'd do with the present ball is questionable, but anyway, the homer isn't the dominating factor in competition today. That's what's making a big difference. The teams that had no home run hitters to lose are able to maintain the approximate pace of those who had 'em and until they lost 'em were able to win a ball game on one swing of one man's bat.

Playing for One Run.

Take the Red Sox and Yankees. Last season Ted Williams would clout a homer or even a double, a batch of runs would score and the Red Sox would win. Joe DiMaggio would do the same with similar results for the Yanks. But now the Red Sox and Yanks, just like all the other teams, have nine men working to get one run and they are having difficulty with the system. Some of the other teams had to handle their affairs this way before because they had no home run specialist on whom to rely. They know the system and are doing better, the result being the tight race.

One league manager, whose name is Jim Dykes, not long ago declared that if you combed the eight clubs for talent the result wouldn't be a great ball club. That probably is a slight exaggeration and can be attributed to nothing more than a misguided belief the home run is a hallmark of quality.

Standard of Play the Same.

Has the absence of the home run brought on any noticeable depression in the standard of play? It hasn't. Isn't the fielding just as good as it was in recent years, and doesn't the larger percentage of fans get just as much of a belt out of spectacular defensive work as out of a homer which in many parks is nothing more than a lazy fly ball?

LOYOLA ALUMNI TO HONOR SACHS' MEMORY TODAY

The alumni association of Loyola university this morning will unveil a bronze plaque honoring the late Lennie Sachs, who led the Loyola Ramblers to national fame during his 19 years as their head basketball coach. The plaque will be dedicated during the annual alumni Communion breakfast, and will be installed in the alumni gym.

Tribute will be paid to Sachs by John [Hicks] Connelly, his successor and a player on his first team, the Rev. William A. Finnegan, S. J., and Chicago sports writers.

LEE HANDLEY TO REPORT TUESDAY TO MAPLE LEAFS

Peoria, Ill., June 5 [Special].—Lee Handley, former third baseman for the Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates, will report to the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International league Tuesday. Handley was purchased from Toronto last winter by the New York Giants but must work out with Toronto until he proves to the Giants that his arm is sufficiently recovered from an auto accident to play major league baseball. Handley until recently was employed by a synthetic rubber concern in Los Angeles, Cal.

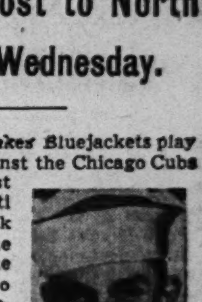
CUBS WILL PLAY GREAT LAKES IN IOWA TOMORROW

Sailors Host to North Siders Wednesday.

The Great Lakes Bluejackets play two games against the Chicago Cubs and one against the Cincinnati Reds this week and there's one member of the sailor squad who has a special desire to smash out base hits against major league pitchers. He is Earl Bolyard, tall, likeable Hoosier, who for 11 years, man and boy, has played on minor league clubs in all sections of the United States.



Earl Bolyard.

Bolyard, regular Bluejacket center fielder, is 31 years old, the "grandpappy" of the team. As a company commander at the naval training station, Bolyard several times won the "rooster flag," highest award in recruit training. Now he serves as a rigger, teaching recruits in rope tying.

Bolyard, who played on nine teams in eight minor league organizations, says he always kept his traveling bag within reach during his long career in the minors. When he's asked to name the clubs he has played with, he replies:

Always on the Go.

"It's easier to tell you the leagues I didn't play in. It seems that I changed uniforms as soon as a train stopped for more than a few minutes."

Bolyard started his career in organized baseball in his home town of Fort Wayne, Ind., with the club which belonged to the old Central league in 1932. For the following six years his contract was owned by the New York Yankees, but he saw service with Yankee farm clubs at Binghamton, N. Y., Norfolk, Va., Oakland, Cal., Kansas City, Newark, N. J., and Baltimore.

He left the Yankee organization to play for four years with Little Rock and Chattanooga in the Southern association and Dallas in the Texas league, his last stop before enlisting in the navy. Bolyard never received that coveted chance to play in the majors, altho he consistently batted and fielded brilliantly. In his final year at Dallas he finished with an average of .320.

Loses to DiMaggio.

Bolyard explains that he never was on Lady Luck's starboard side. He waited several times for advancement to the big show without success. The most notable incident occurred in 1936 when Yankee scouts rushed up and told him the parent club needed an outfielder and that he appeared the logical choice to join the New Yorkers.

However, other Yankee scouts on the Pacific coast informed the home office they had the slugging outfielder the club needed. His name was Joe DiMaggio.

Batting .340 for Sailors.

Bolyard, who has played every position except shortstop and second base, is currently batting .340 for the Bluejackets and he hopes to add a few points to his average against the Cubs in Davenport, Ia., tomorrow and at the training station Wednesday and against the Reds on Constitution field Thursday.

Before signing with the Fort Wayne Central league team in 1932, Bolyard starred in baseball, football, basketball, and track at Fort Wayne South Side High school. He has six brothers. Bob, 21 years old, is an army private and stationed at Camp Perry, Ohio. Another brother, Glenn, 40 years old, plays semi-pro baseball in Fort Wayne.

CUBS GET MACOMB ACE.

Macomb, Ill., June 5 [Special].—Bob Peck of Galesberg, ace righ hander of the Macomb Teachers nine which won the Illinois Intercollegiate pennant this spring, is to get a tryout with the Chicago Cubs.

FISHING CAMPS IN NORTH OPEN FOR BUSINESS

War Time Angling Called 'Civilian Furlough.'

BY BOB BECKER.

All of the fresh water game fish except black bass now are on the open list in the midwestern states. Camps in the north country have had to make adjustments in their service to the public, but the majority are open for business, this year faced with the serious job of providing rest and recreation for the people who need such a relaxing break in order to keep fit for arduous war work. In 1943, these days away from war jobs to get fresh air, sunshine, and perhaps some fishing may well be called "civilian furloughs," because to thousands of war workers that's what they are.

Right now it's muskie, pike, and trout time in the north country. If a muskie fisherman likes to cast his lures before the weeds get heavy in the lakes, this is the time for him to get busy. With ordinary weather early in June, there are plenty insect hatches of flies on the trout streams so that the fly fisherman can have fun with his Cahill, Coachman, Montreal, Professor, and other fly patterns. The wall-eyed pike, the most coöperative of all fresh water game fish, started to hit last month and will not slack off much until the weather gets hot. Then they'll be in deeper water and the fisherman has to put some live minnows down deep in their hangouts.

Trolling in Lake.

This is the month when the "deep sea" fishermen can sally forth on Lake Superior for lake trout with their trolling outfits. [As a rule this sport gets under way around the middle of the month]. This has become a very popular sport along the south shore of Lake Superior from Bayfield in the Apostle Island country eastward thru the towns of Houghton, Munising, Marquette, and other points along the south shore. [A fisherman really hasn't completed his fresh water experiences until he connects with several 10 to 25 pound lake trout out of one of the big lakes.]

Those who expect to take the train this year to a vacation spot will find just about the same fishing program as in recent years, except that there won't be cars and gasoline to run around the country to try the fishing in three or four different lakes in a day. This is the year of the "stay put" vacation.

Transportation from Depot.

But every vacation area that we have contacted reports that somehow or other they will provide transportation from the depot to a given lake for vacationists who came by train.

For June muskie fishing we have had our best luck with spoons and bucktails, and plugs. A medium or stiff action five foot rod, a line testing from 15 to 20 pounds [15 for the experienced muskie fisherman and 20 for the novice fisherman who may hang on and try to snub his fish], and a wide assortment of lures are the principal items in the outfit. Plugs are easier to cast than spoons and bucktails, but it's a good idea to keep switching lures for you never know what old man Muskie will hit from one day to the next.

PURDUE DEFEATS BUNKERHILL AIR STATION TWICE

Lafayette, Ind., June 5 [Special].—Purdue's baseball team added a double header victory over the Bunkerhill Naval Air station this afternoon, 5 to 4 and 9 to 7, in a final tuneup for the Big Ten final with Ohio State at Columbus Friday and Saturday. The twin triumph gives the Boilermakers a record of 9 victories in 12 starts this season. Jim Jennings' double to right field, which eluded Condon to enable the Boilermakers first baseman to circle the sacks, gave Purdue the initial victory in the last half of the "extra" eighth inning of the first game. It was Navy vs. Navy in the second game as George Leftwich of the Purdue naval training station took the mound for the Boilermakers and limited the Bunkerhill crew to three hits. Both teams fielded poorly. Score:

Bunkerhill ....000 030 01—4 9 4
Purdue ....300 001 01—5 5 2
Batteries — Berry and Lynn; Claseman, Hisselhorn and Wright.

SECOND GAME.

Bunkerhill ....302 002 0—7 3 7
Purdue ....032 040 *—9 9 7
Batteries—Balsbaugh, Condon, Kline and Klee; Leftwich and Wright.

NAVY DISCLOSES SOME DETAILS IN KINNICK'S DEATH

Washington, D. C., June 5 [Special].—The navy said today that Ensign Nile Kinnick, whose death was announced yesterday, was killed when a plane he was piloting made a forced landing at sea on Wednesday.

In first disclosing the death of Iowa's All-American football half back, the navy did not give any details.

The navy said a crash boat reached the scene where Kinnick's plane went down within minutes, but that Kinnick had disappeared below the surface of the water, altho he had succeeded in getting out of the cockpit. The scene of the crash was not given.

JUNE IS FISHERMEN'S MONTH

Yes, it's muskie fireworks! Here a Wisconsin muskie comes to the top of the water to do his fighting—and how he fights! June is a fisherman's month and they're biting hard and fast in the northern states. The muskie season in Wisconsin opened May 25.

Here's the kind of a pointless meal that several million fishermen will bring home this summer. The fish held by this Minnesota boy are crappies, one of the most popular pan fish in midwestern waters.

Morton to Play Thursday for State Crown

Peoria, Ill., June 5 [Special]. — The championship game in the Illinois High school baseball tournament between East St. Louis and Morton of Cicero was postponed tonight because of weather. The game will be played in or near Chicago Thursday afternoon.

There was much scurrying around before the postponement. The game originally was set for 8 p. m. on Peoria Central's field. When it was found the diamond was not in condition, there was a feverish hunt for a substitute grounds. The only other available site was Bradley Tech's field, which does not have lights. Then it was decided to start the game there at 5:30. When the weather persisted, the game finally was postponed.

Playing fields for Thursday under consideration are Evanston, Waukegan, and Concordia High in River Forest. Because the Morton players must return to their classes tomorrow the game was transferred to Chicago. The East St. Louis school semester has been completed.

NEW TEAM SEEKS GAMES.

The Royal League Rangers soft ball team has organized for the season, and is seeking games. Representatives of other teams are asked to call Alex Trostrud, business manager.

3 CHICAGOLAND STAKES RAISED TO $50,000 EACH

Arlington, Washington Purses Increased.

The Arlington Park and Washington Park Jockey clubs yesterday announced increase in stake values which will give Chicago five $50,000 races during their 67 day combined meeting at the Washington Park course in Homewood from June 21 to Sept. 6.

Benjamin F. Lindheimer, executive director for both organizations, announced the decision to increase the added money in Arlington's Stars and Stripes handicap and the Arlington and Washington Park handicaps from $30,000 each to $50,000 each. With the Arlington Classic and the American Derby, the 3 year old fixtures, already carrying $50,000 added money, the two meetings will present five races offering a total of a quarter of a million dollars in added money.

Seven Major Events.

These and the two Futurities each with $20,000 added and a rich sum in nomination and eligibility fees, will mean that seven of the major racing events of America in 1943 will be decided in Chicago.

The three events for which the fees are increased all are for horses 3 years old and over in the handicap division. The distance of the Stars and Stripes is a mile and an eighth and the other two will be decided at a mile and a quarter. The Stars and Stripes will be run on Monday, July 5, and the Washington Park handicap on Labor day, the two big charity days of the meeting. The date of the Arlington handicap is Saturday, July 31.

The increased purses assure Chicago race fans that they will see the finest horses in America this summer. Warren Wright, owner of Calumet farm, has announced that the world's champion money winner, Whirlaway, will campaign in Chicago. Mrs. Albert Sabath's Alsab, winner of last year's American Derby, already is training at Washington Park. Rounders, which beat Whirlaway in the Arlington handicap in 1942, and Valdina Orphan also are on the Chicago scene.

Purses Total $1,309,900.

The increase for the three handicaps brings the total of Arlington Park's and Washington Park's stakes and purses to $1,309,900, which with horsemen's fees for the various stakes assures a total distribution of well over $1,500,000, with a daily average close to $20,000.

The whole program for the 67 days' meeting is studded with events that will make it worthwhile for the best handicap horses. Arlington's Equipoise mile and Washington Park's Sheridan handicap at a mile and an eighth each, carry $10,000 added and the Grassland and Meadowland handicaps on the Turf course, each carry $7,500.

WOODFORD LAD TAKES SUFFOLK DOWNS FEATURE

Boston, Mass., June 5 (AP).—Albert F. Plock's Woodford Lad drove down the home stretch to catch H. Guy Bedwell's Sollure in the last 20 yards and go on to win by a nose today in the $5,000 added Commonwealth handicap at Suffolk Downs before 17,123. Mrs. Sidney Zell's Unchallenged was three lengths back while Black Grip, owned by Alfred Vilone and Frank A. Parulli, was fourth.

Woodford Lad ran the six furlongs in 1:12 2-5 and paid $10.40, $5.80, and $4.20. Sollure paid $15.40 and $8, while Unchallenged returned $3.80.

Mrs. A. R. Smith's Through Bound, Black Grip, and Unchallenged battled for the early lead. Sollure came up to pass them at the top of the stretch and appeared a winner until Woodford Lad surged up on the outside with a late rush.

pet. Occupy ran the five furlongs in 1:01, fastest time of the meeting.

Like his famous brother, Occupy was bred by his present owner, John Marsch, Chicago contractor, at Thomas Carr Piatt's Crestwood farm near Lexington, Ky. He is a son of Bull Dog and Miss Bunting.

Occupation numbered the Arlington Futurity, Washington Park Futurity, Belmont Futurity, and Breeders Futurity among his triumphs.

Occupy didn't waste much time showing who was boss in yesterday's race. Jockey Lyle Whiting got him out alertly from the gate and sent him up with a rush as they careened into the turn. After gaining a lead of two lengths, Occupy was taken under restraint and he moved along at an easy swinging gallop with Bolo Babe and Zacapet in pursuit.

$100,000 to War Funds.

As they came into the stretch they reached the point where many a precocious looking first starter begins to falter. But Occupy kept right on going like an old timer. Bolo Babe challenged in the straightaway but Occupy came on steadily. He had increased his lead to three lengths in mid-stretch. Then in the last furlong he came away fast and nothing was anywhere near him at the finish. His mutuel payoff was $3.20, $2.20, and $2.20.

Matt J. Winn and Stuyvesant Peabody, officials of the Lincoln Fields Jockey club, yesterday presented checks totaling $100,000 to representatives of Red Cross and the Chicago Service Men's Center. This sum constituted the proceeds raised by the racing association out of last Monday's program at Hawthorne.

Tracks Raise $183,000.

Presentation of the checks was made in the Hawthorne private dining room where Martin Kennelly of the Red Cross and Robert Dunham, representing the Service Men's Center, were luncheon guests of Winn and Peabody. Two-thirds of the sum went to the Red Cross and one-third to the Service Men's Center.

This brought to $183,000 the sum raised so far this season by Chicago tracks for war and local charities. Earlier in the spring $83,000 had been brought in at Sportsman's Park by a week of racing sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities. Arlington Park has announced that it will donate the proceeds of July Fourth and Washington Park will turn over the Labor day receipts to war relief agencies. Hawthorne also will make a contribution during its fall meeting. During the Churchill Downs meeting Winn and his associates donated $50,000 to the Red Cross.

Detroit, Mich., June 5 (AP).—Likeasnot gained a head victory over Mabe Monday in the $5,000 Detroit handicap before 13,393 today at the state fairgrounds track.

Jumping into a narrow lead with the early strides, Likeasnot had a good ride under Jockey Kempton Knott and held off a late challenge by Mabe Monday. The winner's time for the six furlongs was 1:12 4-5 and he paid $22.40 straight. Little Wizard was third, and the 7-5 favorite, No Wrinkles, finished fifth.

In the $2,500 Mackinac handicap, By Conscript gained his third successive stakes victory here with a three and a half length triumph over a mile and a sixteenth. Jockey Johnny Adams, who rode five straight winners here a week ago, was aboard By Conscript, which returned $4.40 for $2.

Three Cricket Matches Will Be Played Today

Slovaks Play Vikings Today for Peel Cup

BY OFFSIDE.

The Vikings, who lost to the Slovaks in the National Open Soccer cup series early in the season, will have an opportunity today to get even when the teams meet in Winnemac park stadium in a game for the Illinois State Peel cup. Starting time is 2:30.

Vikings' Best Seaman.

The Vikings' season has been the best in the club's history, due in part to the acquisition of Jimmy McDermott, former Sparta goal scoring center forward, who has played brilliantly in all of the Vikings' contests. Last Sunday the team captured the International major league championship after having scored a victory over the El Reys of St. Louis, Mo., in a Midwestern association game. Next week the club hopes to clinch the championship of that organization when it plays the Falks of Milwaukee in Chicago.

Since their meeting in the National cup series, both the Vikings an the Slovaks have lost valuable men to the services, but capable replacements have been made. The St. Louis four referee system will be tried out today for the first time in Chicago. The officials will be stationed on the goal lines and the sidelines.

Peel Cup Nation's Oldest.

The Chicago Historical society, which eventually will be custodian of the Peel cup, oldest soccer trophy in the United States, will present certificates to today's contesting teams.

In a curtain raiser, the Swedes, winners of the first league division title, and the Schwabens, runners-up to the Vikings, will meet at 12:30. No other soccer games are scheduled. The lineups:

ENSIGN BREAKS WORLD DISCUS RECORD IN N. Y.

New York, June 5 (AP).—"Ensign Hugh S. Cannon today broke the world discus record with a toss of 174 feet 10⅛ inches in the Metropolitan A. A. U. track meet.

Performing before only a few judges and his fellow competitors in a lot outside the Randall Island stadium, the 29 year old former Brigham Young athlete got off the toss that wiped out the 174 foot 2½ inch record set by Willie Schroeder of Germany in 1935. He never had thrown the platter more than 154 feet previously. Cannon now is the assistant supply officer at the navy section base, Staten Island. The recognized American record, which had not yet won approval as the world standard, is 174 feet 8¾ inches by Archie Harris of Indiana, at Palo Alto, Cal., in 1941. Ernst Lampert of Germany has sought recognition for a throw of 175 feet 5½ inches, made last year.

BOLDEN, FIDUCIA TAPER WORK FOR 10 ROUND BOUT

Open Marigold Outdoor Season Tomorrow.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Freddy Fiducia, Newark heavyweight, and Nate Bolden, former Chicago intercity Golden Gloves middleweight winner, ended gymnasium workouts in the loop yesterday for one of three bouts of 10 rounds each featuring the first major show of the open air season in Marigold outdoor arena tomorrow night.

Neither did any boxing yesterday, confining their drills in the Ringside loop gymnasium to light loosening up exercises. Fiducia will do roadwork in Lincoln park this morning, while Nate will rest until time to appear at the weighing-in ceremony in the Illinois Athletic commission office tomorrow afternoon.

Bolden to Weigh 172.

Bolden weighed only 169 pounds yesterday, but expects to be at 172 for the fight. That is the weight he carried when he scored that surprise victory in 10 rounds over Tony Musto of Blue Island in Chicago Stadium on April 16. Nate registered two knockdowns in the process, Tony being sent to the canvas for an eight count in the second and a two count in the eighth.

Fiducia appears to be more skilful than Musto, but Bolden is not worried. However, he refused to be quoted on his chances of beating his eastern opponent, who will outweigh him 20 pounds.

"I'll just go in and do my best," he said.

Dorazio, Padlo Spar.

Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia heavyweight, and Mayon Padlo, his welterweight stablemate, each sparred three rounds in final drills yesterday for additional 10 round events on the card against Lem Franklin and Tommy James, respectively. They will attend the Cubs-Brooklyn double header this afternoon in Wrigley field.

Dorazio scaled 194½ pounds after yesterday's training session, the mark he expects to carry against Franklin. He weighed 193¾ when he defeated Joe Baksi in Philadelphia on May 10. Gus, durable-appearing fighter, who goes where the fighting is, is a slow starter. If he survives the first two or three rounds he likely will deal Lem a beating. One of Gus' most outstanding performances is his conquest of Bob Pastor five years ago, he flooring Pastor twice, once each in the fifth and ninth rounds.

Chicago Debut for Three.

Padlo, like Dorazio and Fiducia, will be making his Chicago debut, but he probably will be the strongest opponent James has been asked to face. James, 1942 city Golden Gloves 147 pound champion, extended Al [Bunny] Davis, seasoned Brooklyn slugger, in the stadium two months ago despite the fact it was his first start at 10 rounds and only his tenth professional appearance. Padlo, a terrific right hand puncher, beat Marvin Bryant and Carman Notch in recent weeks.

A near capacity crowd of 6,000 may turn out to see the big show. Last night Co-Promoters Irving Schoenwald and Jack Begun said the advance sale had reached $8,500.

1882 MILE STAR DIES; TRAINED ON BEER, CHEESE

LONDON, June 5 (AP). — Walter Goodall George, first great world track star at the mile and two-mile distances, died yesterday in his home in Mitcham, Surrey, after a brief illness. He was 84 years old.

In 1882 George set a world record of 4:21.4 in the mile, and in 1884 established a two-mile mark of 9:17.4. His most remarkable feat, however, occurred in 1886, after he had turned professional, when he ran a mile in 4:12 3-4.

Altho the mark did not go down as a world record because of George's professional standing, it was not beaten for 29 years—until Norman S. Taber ran the distance in 4:12.6 in 1915.

George's favorite training diet was beer with bread and cheese. The veteran said recently in reminiscing over his track career that he would have run the mile much faster if he had known anything about modern training methods.

Truckers Warn of 'Alarming Wear.'

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Fred A. Schleifer.

The midwest shippers advisory board chairman, Fred A. Schleifer of Chicago, yesterday appealed to James F. Byrnes, director of the office of war mobilization, to see that the war production board releases enough materials to the railroads for their minimum repair requirements. Unless the roads get more supplies, transportation facilities will crack under the war strain, Schleifer declared.

Meanwhile, the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association warned that trucks "are wearing out at an alarming rate" and said new equipment and a larger supply of spare parts must be made available if an already "dangerous situation" is to be remedied.

Appeal Bypasses WLB.

The midwest advisory board's appeal direct to Byrnes over the heads of WPB officials is the first major move by shippers to support the railroads publicly in their attempt to get additional maintenance supplies and new equipment. Railroad officials have warned repeatedly that the roads need more rails, cars, and locomotives, and that they cannot keep their lines in an efficient condition on present allocations of supplies.

Schleifer asserted that the carriers have not received enough supplies to meet essential needs despite assurances given by WPB.

Unless the policy is changed and the roads are permitted to keep their rails and equipment in shape to carry the increasing war time load, the nation will have a transportation catastrophe on its hands, Schleifer wrote Byrnes.

Lose Man Power Also.

The roads not only are having difficulty with maintenance because of lack of materials, but they are losing man power to the army and navy, and will become less efficient as the drain continues, he warned.

Shippers are demanding action by Byrnes' office now, and will disclaim any responsibility if railroad transportation fails "as a result of disregard of the railroads' needs at this time," Schleifer wrote.

"As shipper and railroad employés are called to the colors, shipper and railroad efficiency will diminish," his letter said. "With a diminution of man power occurring simultaneously with deterioration of the railroad plant, it does not require a sage to sense ultimate catastrophe.

"We urge that you arrange immediately for the delivery of the minimum requirements of the railroads as presented to the war production board by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the office of defense transportation. Our reason for this request is that the 1,600 major shipper members of this board situated in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, western Indiana, and the northern peninsula of Michigan are scraping the bottom of the barrel as far as new means of increasing efficiency are concerned.

Experts Serve Voluntarily.

"We have 900 traffic and transportation experts who are serving voluntarily on these committees in the principal cities thruout the midwest because they believe that voluntary coöperation in free enterprise is the only true American way to a solution of transportation problems.

"We propose to continue to put forth every effort to accomplish the most with the least, and to continue to give full coöperation to the ODT, the interstate commerce commission, the army, the navy, and the railroads, but the railroads and shippers cannot do the impossible."

Schleifer told Byrnes that the railroads and shippers had a "brilliant" record of performance in 1942, but he added:

"This record cannot be repeated unless the essential materials for railroad maintenance actually are delivered to the roads. What the situation will be in the winter of 1943-'44 will depend almost entirely on the action you take at this time."

The truck operators' association, thru Walter E. McCarron, general manager, said that motor transportation in the Chicago area "faces a complete breakdown" unless more new equipment of all types is made available soon.

Boat-a-Week Keeps Seneca Yard Hustling

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Seneca, Ill., June 5.—The spectacular rise of a shipyard, built just a year ago on a stretch of cow pasture on the banks of the Illinois river and which now has a production capacity of one boat a week, was celebrated today with the launching of another massive tank landing and supply freighter.

Christened only with the cryptic LST 211, the 300 foot vessel slid down the ways broadside amid the shrieking of fog horns and factory whistles and shouts of nearly 10,000 spectators who were showered with spray as the boat hit the water.

Built by the Chicago Bridge and Iron company, the LST 211 is equipped to carry a large number of tanks, men and other equipment making it a complete invasion unit in itself. It is so constructed that it can run almost to dry beach before it becomes grounded.

Welded in Sections.

The shipyards produce the boats in a novel fashion. Completely lacking is the intricate scaffolding usually seen around rising hulls in other yards. Whole sections of the vessels are lifted into place by giant cranes and welded together.

The ways are built in a herring bone fashion, emanating at right angles from the main or launching way. The keels are first laid on the angle ways and then as they are completed they are moved on little trucks running on railroad rails into the center way for launching.

This method of construction is made possible by the strata of sandstone which is found beneath a surface soil layer about three feet thick. The sandstone provides a solid and unshifting surface over which the ships may be moved.

First Launched Dec. 13.

The company launched its first boat last Dec. 13. The number launched since is a military secret, but Merle J. Trees, vice president, said the present one-a-week schedule would be maintained or even increased.

Trees officiated at the ceremony and the boat was sponsored by Mrs. Charles S. Pillsbury, wife of the company's vice president and executive director of the yards. Speakers included Comdr. Paul S. Coen, assistant supervisor of shipbuilding for the navy in this area.

MINESWEEPER LAUNCHED

Mrs. E. U. Titus, 445 Greenwood avenue, Glencoe, was the sponsor yesterday at the splash launching of a minesweeper at the Grebe shipyards, 3250 North Washtenaw avenue, where her husband, Lt. Comdr. Titus, is supervisor of shipbuilding. Capt. Wallace R. Dowd, United States navy supervisor of shipbuilding in the Chicago area, was speaker at the ceremony, in which Henry C. Grebe, president of the shipbuilding company, participated.

Motor and Steel Issues Lead General Rise in Stock Market

New York, June 5 (AP).—Stocks rose to the highest level since late 1939 in a general recovery today. Motors and steels led the comeback and gains ranged from fractions to more than a point.

"Peace" issues retained much of their recent popularity, but most "war" stocks also managed to finish a shade higher. Top marks were reduced here and there at the close.

The renewed buying was attributed partly to the Argentine military coup, the new coal labor truce, continuance of mild inflation psychology, and renewed pressure of idle funds seeking profitable investment.

Many Traders Take Day Off.

The lull in European war news again was a restraining element for some traders. Others took a holiday, and boardrooms were sparsely occupied. Out of town orders accounted for most of the two hour volume of 732,950 shares.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 0.3 at 52.2, a peak since Nov. 6, 1939, and a net gain of 0.2 for the week.

Prominent on the advance, with some at new peaks, were General Motors, Chrysler, Yellow Truck, United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Southern Railway, Great Northern, Morris and Essex, National Power and Light, Remington-Rand, Nash-Kelvinator, United Electric Coal, Oliver Farm, Deere, Westinghouse Electric, and United Aircraft.

RAIL BONDS MAKE GAINS.

New York, June 5 (AP).—Fractional gains were scattered thru the bond market today, with reorganization rail issues the leaders. Some advances ranged to about a point.

In a mixed foreign list, two Argentine issues added fractions as traders studied political developments in the South American nation. United States government loans were quiet and steady.

The Associated Press index of 20 rails gained 0.1, as did industrials, and the utility and foreign sections were down 0.1. Volume was $4,329,000, face value.

CHICAGO PRICES CLIMB.

Chicago Stock exchange prices advanced yesterday on turnover of 24,000 shares. Among the more actively traded issues were Libby, McNeill & Libby and Kellogg Switchboard, each up ¼; Midland United, unchanged; Peabody Coal, up ⅜ to a new 1943 high of 5; Armour, up ⅛, and Nash-Kelvinator, up ⅜ to a new high of 14. Ten other stocks touched new peaks.

STOCK IS EXCHANGED FOR A LARGE PART OF ARMOUR DEBENTURES

Holders of 7 per cent guaranteed cumulative preferred stock of Armour & Co. of Delaware have taken about 20 million dollars par amount of the company's new 35 million dollar issue of cumulative income debentures, George A. Eastwood, president of Armour & Co. of Illinois, parent concern, disclosed yesterday. The exchange offer became effective May 19 and expired Thursday.

Eastwood previously had told stockholders retirement of the subsidiary's preferred stock was desirable as a step toward merger of the subsidiary with its Illinois parent, which guarantees the dividends and principal of the Delaware preferred.

"The entire issue of debentures was underwritten by a banking syndicate headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of New York, and it now appears that only about 15 million dollars of debentures can be sold thru the syndicate," Eastwood said.

"The transaction will permit the retirement of 35 million dollars of the Delaware company's outstanding 52 millions of guaranteed preferred stock."

The banking syndicate of 90 underwriters is expected to put the remaining 15 million dollars of the preferred on sale tomorrow morning at $110 a share.

RULES POWERS OF U. S. EXTEND TO INSURANCE

Subject to NLRB, Court Decides.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday held in effect that an insurance company is subject to the jurisdiction of congress, under its interstate commerce powers, and to the provisions of the national labor relations act, and rejected a petition of the Polish National Alliance of America challenging a ruling of the national labor board. The finding, which is believed to be the first of its kind by any court, is certain to be appealed to the Supreme court, attorneys said.

Specifically, the court held that the Polish organization, which has headquarters in Chicago and 1,817 lodges in 26 states, the District of Columbia and the province of Manitoba, Canada, owning assets of $30,090,835 on Dec. 31, 1941, is subject to the act of congress and to the labor board. It denied the contentions of the alliance that as a fraternal organization, formed not for profit under Illinois law, it is therefore not engaged in commerce, and also, that if it be held to be an insurance company, it also would be exempt from federal regulation on the ground that insurance is not commerce.

Held Similar to Mutuals.

"Notwithstanding that the petitioner is incorporated as a fraternal association, we think the conclusion is inescapable that it is engaged in the insurance business in a manner similar, if not precisely the same, as mutual life insurance companies," the court ruled in an opinion written by Judge J. Earl Major and concurred in by Judges Evan A. Evans and Will M. Sparks.

On Oct. 7, 1941, 27 office employés of the Polish alliance which has its headquarters at 1520 Division street, went on strike and remained out until Jan. 27, 1942. They then applied for reinstatement, which was ordered by the labor board, which ruled that the alliance was guilty of unfair labor practices. The employés were members of Office Employees' Union No. 20732, American Federation of Labor. As of Dec. 31, 1941, the alliance had outstanding 272,897 benefit certificates for a face aggregate amount of $159,683,583.

Powers of Board Cited.

The court, in taking up first the question of whether the alliance was subject to the jurisdiction of the labor relations act, quoted from section 10 [a] of the act which provides:

"The board is empowered as hereinafter provided, to prevent any person from engaging in any unfair labor practice affecting commerce."

Before reaching the "inescapable conclusion" that the alliance is engaged in the insurance business, the court pointed out that the Polish organization holds direct control of Alliance Printers and Publishers, Inc., located in Chicago, which publishes the Zgoda, which is mailed to members outside the state.

In respect to the contention of the alliance that insurance is not commerce, the court referred, among other cases, to that of the Associated Press against the NLRB, stating that a comparison of the alliance's activities with those of the AP "makes that decision of persuasive and perhaps controlling importance.

"There the court considered the activities of a coöperative organization of 1,350 members, which did not operate for profit, altho its members were representatives of newspapers which did operate for profit. Its means of communication in receiving and transmitting news consisted of telegraph and telephone wires, messenger service, the wireless and mail."

Lay Vanishing Beefsteak to Policy of OPA

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

The story of the vanishing beefsteak is almost complete, spokesmen for live stock commission firms in the Chicago stockyards said yesterday. Tighter restrictions on the sale of beef to civilians, with point values on popular cuts raised to a level prohibitive to the average family, were inevitable in view of production trends and the handicaps created for the corn belt cattle feeders in the last year by the office of price administration, these spokesmen said.

Production of beef has been falling steadily for more than six months while military requirements increased rapidly. No official figures on army buying are given, but private estimates place it at more than twice the tonnage taken at this time last year. Lower beef rations for civilians are primarily due to the failure of production to maintain the tonnage farmers were turning out when this country entered the war, distribution experts asserted. Some contended that if this tonnage had been maintained no beef rationing would be necessary.

Billions of Pounds Lost.

In a recent letter of protest to James F. Byrnes, former economic stabilization director and now head of the office of war mobilization, Charles R. Rice, president of the Chicago Live Stock exchange asked "Why in the world should every effort be made, as has been made by the OPA, to discourage and curtail meat production?"

Rice said that the curtailment and discontinuances of feeding that have occurred as the result of announcements from Washington have resulted in the loss of several billion pounds of beef that otherwise would have been available for the army and navy, lend-lease, and civilians.

His letter read in part: "The OPA erred first in selecting March instead of April as the base period for their wholesale and retail meat prices. This, together with OPA releases regarding possibilities of ceiling prices on live animals, kept a substantially large portion of the corn belt's feedlots empty during the summer of 1942."

Output at 2 Year Low.

Current beef production is the lowest in more than two years and 25 per cent smaller than in December, 1941, the month this country entered the war, the department of agriculture figures show. The output is running 35 per cent behind the record set up eight months ago.

It was estimated that packers under federal inspection are now turning out 45,000 tons less beef monthly than six months ago, 70,000 tons less than in December, 1941, and 110,000 tons less than in October, 1942, when an all-time record was established.

Ninety-five new prime contracts were allotted to 72 companies, seven of which previously had not been engaged in war production. Since the beginning of the war production program, 2,021 Chicago area companies have been awarded a total of 11,411 prime contracts, Lyon said.

KEESHIN SEEKS TO ENTER AIR FREIGHT FIELD

Prepared to Spend 2 Millions.

John L. Keeshin.

One of the nation's largest interstate motor trucking companies, Keeshin Freight Lines, Inc., Chicago, is seeking to extend its operations to air freight transportation, John L. Keeshin, president, disclosed yesterday.

An application was filed with the civil aeronautics board in Washington by Keeshin Air Freight, Inc., newly formed subsidiary, for a certificate of convenience and necessity to operate as a "common carrier for hire by aircraft in the transportation of property in interstate and foreign air transportation."

Keeshin said the company was prepared to expend approximately 2 million dollars on the enterprise.

Service Termed Vital in War.

In urging prompt CAB approval of the application, Keeshin said air freight expansion was vital in war time and that his organization, experienced in freight handling, was ready to set up the proposed system immediately.

Keeshin said plans call for the use of big cargo planes with twice the capacity of the line's present motor trailers. Air freight operations would be integrated with the existing motor facilities to furnish fast pickup freight service to any point in this country as well as many foreign cities, he said.

Because of increased volume the company could haul any type of freight now handled by motor lines at lower rates than are charged by existing air express systems, he asserted. The service would be especially attractive to shippers requiring fast deliveries, he said.

As an example, he said, a shipment for the east coast could be put aboard a Keeshin motor truck at 7 p. m. in Rockford, arrive at the company's Chicago terminal at 11 p. m., be transferred to a plane leaving at midnight, and be delivered in the east early the next morning.

Explains Operating Plan.

Plans for the system, as explained in the application filed with the CAB, include a basic area which covers all territory in which Keeshin motor lines operate at present, mainly in the midwest and east. Keeshin feeder lines would transport freight by truck to the terminal points, from which it would go by air to other terminal points and be delivered to the ultimate destination by Keeshin motor trucks. The basic terminals serve by motor truck an area within a radius of approximately 250 miles.

So called "gateway" points would serve as outlets to other parts of the country where other Keeshin air terminals would be established. Shipments then would be delivered thru connections with other truck lines.

ODT Bars Hiring Trucks to Make Extra Deliveries

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—Merchants cannot exceed the number of deliveries allowed under office of defense transportation orders by employing for hire trucks, ODT ruled today.

BRITISH DISCUSS MERGERS TO AID POST-WAR TRADE

Combines Urged to Meet World Competition.

BY LARRY RUE.

LONDON, June 5.—The trend toward industrial combination and possible mergers in consumer goods industries as a result of the experience of concentration for war is a topic of active discussion in business circles here. The prosperity of England and her own standard of living depend largely on her export market after the war, it is conceded, and many contend that amalgamation in several fields must be maintained for efficient production if she is to be able to meet world competition.

During the last war concentration proved so successful that marked amalgamation occurred in the chemical, oil, aluminum, and rayon industries, railways, and banks. In this war the lesson is said to be even more apparent, with the increased demand for mass standardized production to save man power and material.

Trade Bodies Utilized.

It is thru trade associations that the government facilitates its measures for control and consults on post-war planning. It has frequently been suggested, even in conservative circles, that after the war ends the government may monopolize imports of raw materials, allocate them to factories, and even tell factories what goods they may produce.

The Financial News this week said mergers already are beginning in the capital goods industries, among them steel, cables, coal, and many branches of engineering, shipping, building, and public works contracting.

Hugh Dalton, president of the board of trade, has disclosed that 170 companies account for 75 per cent of textile production. The Financial News said they have learned to coöperate under the requirements of the board, and during post-war difficulties are expected to continue their present collaboration in most cases.

Civil Aviation Is Argued.

Both houses of parliament this week have been urging upon the government the necessity of preparing for civil aviation, so that Britain will not be caught napping after the war and be outdistanced by the United States. The Economist, however, contended that "there is no reason to believe that British civil aviation will require protection against the Americans or anybody else."

One-third of the cost in maintaining such service is in "labor and personnel," in which "British lines would have a distinct advantage over the Americans," said the publication. The cost of aircraft, both in this country and in the United States, depends on the military air forces that are maintained, it added.

Crude Oil Supplies Rise 2 Million Barrels in Week

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—The bureau of mines reported today stocks of crude petroleum on May 29 totaled 245,752,000 barrels, a net increase of 2,092,000 barrels compared with a week earlier.

RAILROAD MANAGEMENT.

Some time ago the Investors' Guide discussed the importance of sound management to the success of a business enterprise, and enumerated some of the criteria of sound management, including reduction of debt and strengthening of resources so that a serious depression could be weathered.

How aptly this criterion applies to the railroads is illustrated by studies made by Patrick B. McGinnis, expert in railroad securities.

Of the 56 companies that handle 93 per cent of the nation's railroad business, 18 retained their credit standing during the last decade, 12 became borderline cases, and 26 went into bankruptcy. McGinnis found fundamental differences in the capital structures and financial managements of these groups.

The 18 lines with good credit had an average ratio of 54 per cent debt to 46 per cent stock, compared with 67 per cent debt and 33 per cent stock for the borderline roads, and 71 per cent debt and 29 per cent stock for those that went into bankruptcy.

Between 1924 and 1929 when business was good and the roads with weak financial structures had an opportunity to strengthen them, the record shows that the opportunity was neglected. Out of each dollar available for fixed charges and dividends, the top group of railroads paid 35½ cents in fixed charges, the next group 44½ cents, and the subsequent bankrupts 53½ cents. These payments were necessary, of course. But, adding to fixed charges the dividends paid on preferred and common stocks, the strong roads paid out 69½ cents of each dollar earned [before fixed charges on debt], the borderline roads 73½ cents, and the weakest roads 85½ cents. In other words, the strongest roads were saving 30 cents of every dollar earned, the borderline roads 26 cents, and the bankrupts-to-be 14 cents.

The 18 financially strong roads were able, as a group, to cover their fixed charges 1.50 to 1.75 times even in the worst years of the depression of the 1930s, according to McGinnis' study. The middle group of lines earned only 90 per cent of their fixed charges at the low point, and those in the third group failed to cover charges by 20 to 30 per cent, and went into bankruptcy.

The costly lesson taught by the depression has not gone unheeded. Solvent railroads are retiring debt as rapidy as their resources permit. Heads of several roads not now paying dividends have said that notwithstanding current high earnings, no dividends will be distributed until there has been further retirement of debt.

GRAIN FUTURES END WEAK AFTER EARLY ADVANCE

Oats Climb to New Peak Before Reaction.

Grain futures closed fractionally lower on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday after an early advance had carried July oats up ½ cent a bushel to 65¼ cents, a peak since 1925. Wheat was up about 1 cent early, but profit taking sent it down to finish off ¼ to ⅜ cent. Oats closed unchanged to ¼ cent lower, and rye was down ⅛ to ¾ cent.

Reports that there had been no decrease in the demand for cash oats and that shipments from Canada by both lake and rail for the week ending May 29 had been only 2½ million bushels figured in the early advance. Moderate sales of Canadian oats that had been taken in on May contracts were made to shippers at a premium over the July delivery.

Wheat Touches Peak.

Closing of spreads between wheat and rye was a factor in the wheat rise as were purchases by Chicago and Minneapolis mills. July wheat sold at $1.46⅝ at one time, a peak since mid-March. Hedging pressure developed on the rise and reports from the southwest indicated that farmers were selling some grain carried over from the 1942 harvest.

More optimistic crop comments were received from sections of the southwest that had said wheat was deteriorating because of lack of surface moisture.

A government loan rate on the 1943 wheat crop is expected to be announced this next week. Brokers predict that it will provide a national average to farmers of $1.23½ to $1.24½ a bushel, which would be the highest price to farmers since the $1.43 7/10 average for the 1925-'26 season. The farm price of wheat averaged only 38 2/10 cents a bushel in the 1932-'33 season.

OPA Gives Corn Ruling.

Reports were heard that a revision in the price of ceiling on corn is possible, but were not taken seriously by brokers. The office of price administration yesterday handed down a legal opinion that buyers of cash corn at country points who prepaid the freight were not entitled to sell the grain above the ceiling prices at leading markets. Brokers said that the effect of this would be to reduce bids on No. 2 yellow corn by 1 to 1¼ cents a bushel.

Announcement that the OPA had revoked its inventory order on corn, effective June 30, had little effect on the market, altho it was intended to help provide more supplies.

Civilian Rayon Supply Faces New War Cut

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—Prospects of a growing squeeze on civilian supplies of rayon were emphasized today by disclosure that the war production board has agreed to furnish an additional 68 million pounds of high strength rayon fibre for cord in synthetic rubber tires in 1944.

This big allocation will be provided, WPB officials said, by the conversion of civilian rayon facilities to the high tenacity, superduty fibre used in tires for military vehicles. It brings total WPB commitments for the fibre to 174 million pounds in 1944, which still is 32 million short of the request presented by Rubber Director William L. Jeffers on behalf of the army, navy, air forces, and other government claimants.

Army to Demand More.

WPB has concluded, however, that no more rayon producing facilities can readily be diverted to the military type cord needed for combat vehicles and heavy military equipment.

The other 32 million pounds, one WPB official said, would have to come from plants "built from scratch," and despite emphatic statements of need from the military claimants, WPB so far has not approved the allocation of critical materials to create the new plant capacity.

There is every indication, however, that the expansion proposal will be pushed strongly by the military claimants, who assert every month's delay means the withdrawal of thousands of tons of natural rubber from the country's dwindling stock pile.

Necessary in Synthetic Tire.

Rayon is a "military necessity," it was asserted, if synthetic is to replace rubber on combat vehicles and other military transport. The greater heat generated by synthetic tires burns out cotton cordage more quickly than rayon, rubber experts said.

Experiments are being speeded up in the use of nylon and steel wire, either of which seems superior even to rayon, but also scarcer.

FIRE INSURANCE PATROL REPORTS REDUCED LOSSES

How the Chicago fire insurance patrol has been instrumental in reducing fire loss was indicated in a report yesterday which disclosed the loss in 1942 was slightly less than $2 per capita, among the lowest for large cities thruout the country. The average annual loss for the city formerly was $5 a person, and homes today are said to be more than four times safer from fire than they were before 1900.

The report was issued by the Chicago Board of Underwriters, which organized the patrol in 1871. Created to salvage property and save lives from fire, the patrol, under Chief Frank C. McAuliffe, is regarded by authorities as one of the finest organizations of its kind in the country.

In the last 15 years the patrol has recorded 391,985 alarms, about half of which it has answered, the remainder being covered entirely by the Chicago fire department. Records show that of the total number of alarms no insurance was carried in 187,073 cases.

Contract Renegotiation to Delay Zenith Meeting

Zenith Radio corporation announced yesterday that because of its inability to determine earnings accurately for the year ended April 30 before renegotiation of war contracts is completed the annual stockholders meeting scheduled for June 22 merely will convene and then adjourn for approximately 30 days.

EXPECT LARGE QUOTA FOR WAR HOME BUILDING

NHA Head May Act Soon on Chicago Priorities.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago may get a permanent quota of priorities for war home building before the end of the month, Joseph E. Merrion, president of the Metropolitan Chicago Home Builders' association, said yesterday. Merrion, who is just back from Washington, where he testified before the Lanham congressional committee which is studying the housing situation, based his prediction on statements made to him by John B. Blandford Jr., administrator of the national housing agency.

"Blandford intimated that he believed the only safe thing is for the NHA to program more housing for Chicago," Merrion said. "He expects within two or three weeks to be in a position to make a decision and he implied that it would be favorable to Chicago's demand for a permanent and larger quota of war home priorities."

Chicago Suffers from Delay.

Merrion said the Chicago metropolitan area has suffered from the inability of governmental agencies to make up their minds and also from the conflict of overlapping surveys by these agencies.

NHA has been waiting for some time for reports from the Chicago offices of the war man power commission and the office of defense transportation on labor and transportation factors relating to war housing. Theoretically, NHA cannot program more housing for Chicago until it has the reports.

It has been suggested, however, that NHA ignore the WMC and ODT and announce a permanent quota priorities based on the actual needs as outlined by the big war industries. This quota should be between 20,000 and 30,000, Merrion said.

May Act Independently.

If WMC and ODT continue indecisive independent action by NHA may be taken, it was said.

At present Chicago has an "interim quota" of 3,000 home priorities awarded it by NHA several weeks ago, after a similar delay while WMC and ODT made up their minds.

The first allocation to builders of part of these 3,000 priorities for use in the Douglas plant sector probably will be announced this week by the federal housing administration.

REPORT CANADA CAN KEEP UP ITS NEWSPRINT RATE

U. S. Needs Prevent Rise in Dominion Use.

TORONTO, Ont., June 5 (AP).—The Financial Post said today that with the lifting of restrictions on use of electric power by the newsprint industry in Quebec province, "Canada's present rate of newsprint production can be maintained until the end of 1943, but only at the cost of eating into inventories."

A Montreal dispatch by John E. Langdon, eastern editor of the publication, said:

"The only way in which there could possibly be any increase in the supply of paper during the months ahead is for the industry to reduce the amount of pulp which it has agreed to deliver to the United Kingdom and the United States."

Major Inroad Reported.

In New York, paper industry circles said a major inroad into Canadian pulp supplies was being made by the United States, for use in manufacturing paper other than newsprint, to compensate for shutting off of eastern shipments of pulp from the Pacific northwest which is plagued by a man power shortage.

Developments affecting electric power supply included an announcement by H. J. Symington, power controler, that power taken away from the pulp and paper industry was being restored, but the Financial Post said, "Manufacturers have been informed that this return of power applies to Quebec mills only."

Thorold Mill Is Curtailed.

This would appear to leave the big Thorold, Ont., mill of the Ontario Paper company, Ltd., a subsidiary of the Tribune company, Chicago, the only important mill in the Dominion now curtailed because of claimed electric power shortage. This mill has been cut to about 40 per cent of capacity since last autumn.

Another development was an announcement from the newsprint administration eliminating the staggering of operations of Quebec mills, which went into effect last year to save power. The Financial Post said estimates place the return of power to the paper industry at about 100,000 horsepower.

Pulp Deliveries Fall.

Washington, D. C., June 5 (AP).—Deliveries of wood pulp to United States paper mills in the first four months of this year fell 22 per cent under receipts in the same period of 1942 and may drop to 25 per cent below by the end of the year, the WPB reported today. Paper output probably will fall off to about the same extent.

The lake states region showed the largest decline, losing 45 per cent. Deliveries in the Pacific northwest dropped 30 per cent, the Appalachian region 21 per cent, the south 14 per cent, and the northeast 8 per cent.

PACKARD STRIKE END HOPED FOR ON UNION APPEAL

Detroit, Mich., June 5 (AP).—Company, union and government officials were hopeful tonight that a strong ultimatum from R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, would result in full production being resumed Monday at the plant of the Packard Motor Car company, crippled since Thursday by an unauthorized stoppage.

An estimated 35 per cent of day shift workers went back to work today, the first substantial turnout since the walkout begun in a dispute over racial relations at the plant. About 5 per cent of the normal force worked yesterday.

A company spokesman said the walkout started in protest against the upgrading of some Negro workers to higher skilled jobs. Those who walked out said they objected to mixing of whites and Negroes on the same job.

Pay-As-You-Go!

Under The New Tax Law

EMPLOYERS MUST ACT AT ONCE

1. To lighten costly burdens imposed on your bookkeeping and record-keeping by the new withholding system, which requires you to "withhold" 20% (less exemptions) from the pay of most of your employees, starting July 1.
2. To obtain all the tax "forgiveness" to which you are personally entitled, and to reduce to a rockbottom minimum your personal taxes for 1943. NOTE: Most taxpayers will have to file a "Declaration of Estimated Tax" for 1943. This new form, which is practically an entirely new tax return, must be filed by Sept. 15.

FREE! 3 Vital Handbooks that will save you taxes, time and trouble

② "How to Prepare Your 1943 Declaration of Estimated Tax"
③ "New Ways to Obtain Refunds and Reduce Taxes"

How To Handle The WITHHOLDING TAX The Easy Way
How to Prepare Your 1943 Declaration of Estimated Tax
New Ways To OBTAIN REFUNDS AND REDUCE TAXES

These valuable Handbooks will come to you without any charge, in conjunction with an Introductory Subscription to "What's Happening in Taxation"—the unique weekly letter now providing quick, practical tax-saving guidance to over 25,000 business and professional men.

These questions, correctly answered, can save you money, time, mistakes

1. THE NEW WITHHOLDING TAX

The new tax law requires you to "withhold" 20% (less exemptions) from the pay of most of your employees. WARNING: This new withholding tax will be your Number One headache in 1943.

- COMPUTING THE TAX: What is the most economical and efficient method of computing the tax, from the bookkeeping and payroll angle? Are tax tables available which will simplify calculation of the tax?
- EXEMPTIONS: How will you determine the personal exemption and credit for dependents for each employee? Must you get a "Withholding Exemption Certificate" from each employee? When the dependency status of an employee changes, must you get a new "Certificate" from him at once, and immediately change the amount withheld from his pay?
- KEEPING RECORDS: What additional payroll records must you keep? What records and forms must you file with the Treasury Department? What receipts must be furnished to employees, and when? What do you do when an employee leaves?
- VICTORY TAX: Must you continue to withhold from your employees' pay the Victory Tax as well as the new tax?
- PAYING THE TAX WITHHELD: On what dates must you pay to the Collector of Internal Revenue the taxes that you have withheld from your employees' pay? How can your bank help you make these payments? What return form must you file with payment of the tax? Are adjustments permitted for over- or under-payment?
- PENALTIES: What severe penalties are you subject to under the withholding tax? Are you responsible for false or inaccurate information supplied to you by an employee on his "Withholding Exemption Certificate?"

Questions like these will be answered for you through the pages of "What's Happening," and in the new Handbook, "How To Handle the New Withholding Tax . . . the Easy Way."

2. YOUR PERSONAL TAXES

Possible savings in personal income taxes must be watched more closely than ever before. It is worth your while to pay special attention to such savings as—

- FORGIVENESS: What specific steps should you take to be sure of getting all the "forgiveness" to which you are entitled? When must you pay the unforgiven portion of your current tax liability? How should you compute these payments to insure paying the lowest possible tax? Will you have to pay the June 15 installment of your 1942 tax without reduction?
- FILING RETURNS: Must you make a declaration of estimated tax on your 1943 income? What should be included in this estimate? How should it be prepared? When must it be filed? When must payments on the estimated tax be made? In order to avoid over-estimating or under-estimating (which involves a severe penalty), you should revise your declaration quarterly. When should you file such revisions? When will you file the final income tax return for 1943?
- MEDICAL EXPENSES: What items are deductible on your tax returns as medical and dental expenses? Cost of eye glasses? Vitamin pills? Artificial teeth? Convalescent and travel expenses? Accident, health, or hospitalization insurance? How can the time at which medical expenses are paid result in tax savings? Is it better for husband or wife to pay such expenses?
- INVESTOR'S EXPENSES: What deductions can you take for fees and expenses in connection with investments and property held for production of income? Travelling expenses? Accountants' and attorneys' fees? Are refunds still available where a deduction for investment expenses was not taken in previous years?
- FEDERAL, STATE TAXES: When are State taxes deductible by the purchaser, even when they are imposed on the seller? Are Federal taxes on jewelry, cosmetics, and furs deductible? On railroad, Pullman, airplane, and steamship tickets?
- ENTERTAINMENT: Many entertainment expenses are properly deductible, while others are not. What deductions should be taken? What records should be kept?

Such savings will be reported both in the special Handbooks and in brief, pointed articles featured in "What's Happening," enabling you to pare your personal taxes to the minimum.

3. YOUR COMPANY TAXES

With corporation taxes reaching new highs in 1943, every saving assumes greater significance. You should consider such possibilities as—

- LOSS CARRY-OVER: A 1941 carry-over of net operating loss to the extent not needed against 1942 income is available as a 1943 deduction. How does this provision of the law operate? How can the two-year carry-back of unused excess profits credit benefit you?
- EXCESS PROFITS: What events or conditions entitle you to reconstruct your base period income for excess profits tax purposes, and thereby materially reduce excess profits, taxes? A strike? Flood? Fire? Temporary depression? Price-cutting competition? Change in the character of the business? Change in management?
- BAD DEBTS: Changes in the provisions of the law with regard to bad debts make many refunds immediately available. How can these refunds be obtained?
- CAPITAL GAINS: How does use of the alternative method of figuring the tax where there is a net long-term capital gain result in substantial tax savings? For individuals? For corporations?

In answering these questions, the Handbook "New Ways to Obtain Refunds and Reduce Taxes"—and the weekly issues of "What's Happening"—are indispensable.

THE NEW WITHHOLDING TAX LAW marks the beginning of a brand-new system of taxation—a system which lays heavy accounting and bookkeeping burdens on every employer—which multiplies a hundred times over the difficulties encountered in handling the 5% Victory Tax—which demands careful reckoning to insure maximum "forgiveness" to every taxpayer.

To help you avoid errors and confusion in setting up the withholding system in your company—and to help you pare the taxes you and your company will have to pay this year—Prentice-Hall has ready for you a set of handbooks consisting of:

1. "HOW TO HANDLE THE NEW WITHHOLDING TAX—THE EASY WAY," giving a clear-cut explanation of the new law. This Handbook not only suggests the best payroll techniques—shows what reports must be filed—anticipates and answers the day-to-day questions that will arise—but also outlines, step by step, just how to compute your own personal tax liability so as to insure receiving maximum "forgiveness" and paying the lowest possible tax.
2. "HOW TO PREPARE YOUR 1943 DECLARATION OF ESTIMATED TAX," which will show you exactly how to prepare your estimated tax on 1943 income for filing on September 15—how to file necessary revised declarations later on—when to pay the tax on your 1943 income.
3. "NEW WAYS TO OBTAIN REFUNDS AND REDUCE TAXES." The result of a special study made by P-H field men of favorable provisions in the present tax law which are commonly overlooked, this exclusive Report shows you what savings are available right now, and how to get them.

A limited number of sets of these Handbooks is available without any charge in conjunction with an Introductory Subscription to "What's Happening in Taxation"—the 6-page weekly letter especially designed for the business man who wants quick, low-cost guidance on tax-saving opportunities for himself and his company.

Where the Handbooks give you helpful basic information on withholding and on cutting 1943 taxes, "What's Happening" will give you quick, weekly guidance on all important developments in Federal and State taxation, payroll taxes, job-freezing, and wage stabilization. Typical of the practical, tax-saving help provided by "What's Happening" are the answers to questions such as those listed in the column at the left.

The Organization Behind The Letter . . .

The Prentice-Hall service organization is an AAA1 corporation, with 700 employees, a staff in Washington, branch offices in 27 principal cities, and representatives in all state capitals.

For more than a quarter of a century, companies in every section of the country and in every type of business have relied on Prentice-Hall for help with business problems stemming from taxation and government regulation.

The Federal Government itself is the largest user of Prentice-Hall services, with such bureaus and agencies as the Treasury Department, the War Labor Board, the Supreme Court, the O.P.A., the Army and Navy among Prentice-Hall subscribers.

Tool and Diemakers

For the past three generations this company has had the distinction of having unusual prosperity during depression periods. This we feel is mainly due to the fact that our products, because they are low in cost, reach every home in America and the four corners of the earth as well. From time to time as we take on new lines, we are compelled to increase our staff of tool and diemakers. It has always been a source of much concern that we obtain the right men in order that our products might retain the same high standard that they have enjoyed all these years. Right now we are looking for men who have very definite domestic responsibilities and wish to settle down to a permanent job. On all of these jobs the men themselves will decide on how much overtime they will put in. Please give complete details in first letter as every applicant will receive honest consideration. This company not only preaches the Golden Rule but practices and enforces it as well.

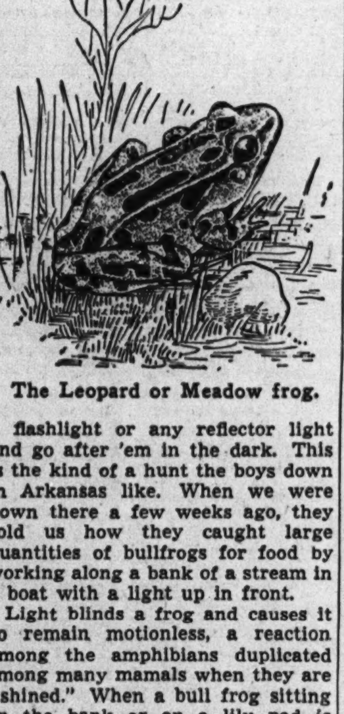
DAY BY DAY ON THE FARM

The FARM by Bob Becker

June 5, 1943.

ALTHO there is a shortage of fresh water fish in the markets this year there isn't any shortage of frogs, and frog legs grilled, fried or creamed, not only make a mighty tasty dish during the summer months, but also save the food coupons. This is a great year for amphibians of all kinds because so much acreage is flooded, giving them ideal living conditions.

We have hunted frogs in several different ways. Undoubtedly the most interesting method and one that is highly productive is to take a flashlight or any reflector light and go after 'em in the dark. This is the kind of a hunt the boys down in Arkansas like. When we were down there a few weeks ago, they told us how they caught large quantities of bullfrogs for food by working along a bank of a stream in a boat with a light up in front.



The Leopard or Meadow frog.

Light blinds a frog and causes it to remain motionless, a reaction among the amphibians duplicated among many mamals when they are "shined." When a bull frog sitting on the bank or on a lily pad is blinded by a light you can get him with a small spear or gig, sometimes reach out and grab him, or drop a light landing net over him without any trouble.

Hunt frogs with baited hook.

On Otter lake [near Delavan, Wis.] we tried another method to catch bullfrogs for food. This time we rigged up a cane pole with a short piece of stout fishing line and a small hook baited with a piece of red flannel. Wearing a minimum of old clothes we waded into the shallow water among the lily pads and other vegetation. When we saw a bullfrog we dangled out bait in front of his nose. As a rule the frog will snap at the red flannel bait and it was a simple matter to hook him, quickly extract the hook, and drop him in a sack. The common bullfrog here in the middlewest is the largest of all the frog family [body 7 to 8 inches long] so there is plenty of meat on his legs.

Another method of catching a mess of frogs is to use a long-handled, but light net which can be manipulated quickly. This net can be flipped over one of them on a grassy bank along the water's edge.

Use of rifle gets many.

On the Rock river we have gotten many a frog by shooting them with CB caps and .22 rifle. This system is out now because there is no ammunition. But we have a hunch that one of these high powered air guns shooting a hollow metal pellet of about .177 caliber will get frogs if one can shoot well enough.

We have eaten frog legs from two different species found here in the middle west. One was the leopard frog, a species that is strikingly spotted. It has a body about three inches long. It's very common around ponds, marshes and cat-tail pools. [It's the mainstay of the edible frog industry in this country.] The other species was the bullfrog.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

SECOND plantings of many vegetables and third plantings of some crops have been started in the two sample gardens on the Wheaton farm.

The gardener has harvested a full row of Bloomsdale spinach from the small garden, and in its place has seeded snap beans. The early radishes, partially harvested and partially destroyed by cabbage maggots, have been replaced with celeriac.

In the large farm garden the men have made second plantings of Big Boston head lettuce, and second and third plantings of radishes and spinach. In addition, the gardener has seeded one section of a row to edible soybeans [Bansei variety].

Gardeners growing spinach for the first time have a tendency to let it grow too large. For best texture and flavor, Bloomsdale spinach should be eaten when the plants are six to eight inches long. If left in the ground too long this vegetable becomes coarse.

HOUSEHOLD FINANCE CORPORATION.

MONEY FOR INCOME TAXES
DUE JUNE 15

Higher living costs and larger pay roll deductions may make it difficult for you to pay the 2d installment of your Federal Income Taxes on June 15th. If so, get the cash you need from Commonwealth. Our monthly rate is only 3% on balances of $150 or less, and 2½% on that part of the unpaid balance over $150, which makes the cost quite moderate for short term loans. Repay us in convenient installments . . . it is decidedly more convenient and far less burdensome than making a large lump-sum payment, and besides, you can rid yourself of other troublesome bills at the same time. Get any amount, $20 to $300.

Simulated air raids are resisted as meticulously as if they were the real thing. Round after round is fired speedily from the 40 mm. anti-aircraft guns at "enemy" planes. From camouflaged positions the 90 mm. weapons are aimed at ground or aerial targets. Constant practice and study enable the artillerymen to concentrate their fire with devastating accuracy, as the Germans and Italians already have discovered in Tunisia, and the Japs in the Pacific.

"Do You Think She Really Poisoned Him?"

Being the Strange Story of Florence Maybrick and a World-Famous Doubt

By DELOS AVERY

IN THE big hotel that stood high above the lake the woman who once had lived in a prison cell was giving a party.

All her guests were children, polite children who would not whisper disturbing questions about their hostess, such as "Do you think she really poisoned him?"

For many years men and women had been asking that question and trying to answer it. They were still asking it many years later, even after the woman who once lived in prison was dead and buried. They are asking it now.

But the first to ask it was a nurse at the bedside of a man who lay mysteriously ill in a house called Battlecrease in Aigburth, a suburb of Liverpool, in England, in the spring of 1889.

"I wonder," the nurse said, "if she has been putting something in his medicine?"

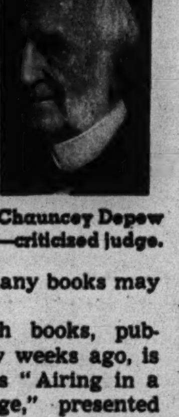
The sick man grew worse and died, and then all England was asking the question, "Did she do it?"

Her name was Florence Chandler Maybrick. She was tried for murder, convicted, and sentenced to hang.

But she escaped the noose, and many years later, having been freed from prison, here she was in Highland Park, Ill., giving a party at the Hotel Moraine, choosing children for her guests because they would not whisper, "Do you think she did it?"

The story of Florence Maybrick is the story of a world-famous doubt, a doubt which seems destined to exist forever, no matter how many books may be written.

Lord Birkenhead —three opinions.



Chauncey Depew —criticized judge.

Latest of such books, published only a few weeks ago, is Joseph Shearing's "Airing in a Closed Carriage," presented under a mask of fiction, but with a foreword asserting historical authenticity. Shearing's conclusion is that Florence Maybrick was innocent.

There are many other unofficial verdicts, including the astonishing "solution" offered some years ago by Lord Birkenhead, who in one brief paragraph expressed no fewer than three separate opinions—and defended every one of the three.

"On the whole," he wrote, "I think that if I were a juror in a civil case, judging by probabilities, I should have found against her. But on a criminal charge, where reasonable doubt entitles to acquittal, I should have acquitted. But if I had to consider the case on appeal I should hesitate very long before I could see my way to disturb the verdict."

When such a mind as Birkenhead's can appraise the evidence as showing too much probability for acquittal, too much doubt for conviction, and not enough of either to upset a recorded verdict, is it any wonder the debate is endless?

Among the voices which already have been heard in that debate are those of a queen, Victoria; a famous churchman, Cardinal Gibbons; a British home secretary, Henry Matthews; a President of the United States, William McKinley; such statesmen as James G. Blaine, Robert Lincoln, and Chauncey M. Depew, and a throng of members of parliament, members of congress, medical men, criminologists, lawyers, professors, editors.

A hundred thousand men and women signed the petition which moved the British government to a double-action decision which halted the execution of Mrs. Maybrick because her guilt was doubtful but kept her locked up because her innocence was doubtful, too.

Saved from the hangman's rope and saved long afterward from her prison cell, she never did escape from the shadow of doubt, a doubt which made her one of the loneliest women in the world. Oceans and continents she could cross, decades of time she could traverse, but the hooked question mark remains even now above her grave.

One brief holiday from the siege of questioning eyes and voices she did enjoy at the party in Highland Park, where the children were so polite. And there was another respite on the day of her death, when she was surrounded by a fantastically different group that asked no questions. They were cats! A troop of them, her sole companions, rushed from her cottage when its door was forced and her body found.

Florence was born in 1862 in Mobile, Ala., the daughter of William Chandler, a banker, who died in the following year. His widow, financially well provided for, took the little girl to Europe and soon brought her a stepfather by marrying a German cavalry officer, Baron Adolf von Roques.

Florence spent the rest of her childhood and her adolescence in Germany and France, acquiring her education. After the baron's death Florence and her mother made several trips across the Atlantic, visiting relatives, and on one of these voyages they met a Liverpool cotton broker, James Maybrick. He was in his forties and Florence was just 18 when they married.

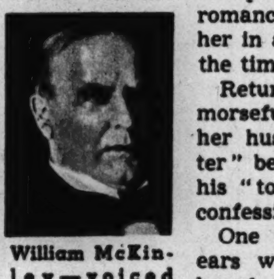
Maybrick took his bride to the great, dingy house at Aigburth, where for a few years they seemed happy. Two children were born, children who never saw their mother after her arrest.

Just when the estrangement between Florence and her husband began is not clear, for they both took pains to "keep up appearances." It is known that moods of gloom settled over the man, caused perhaps by his declining health. He was nervous, irritable, sharp of tongue, and he was constantly taking medicine.

He took the medicines that his doctors prescribed, but he also took other preparations of his own selection—"tonics," he called them. Usually he felt better after taking these unprescribed remedies, but the pleasing effect wore off and he increased both the size and the frequency of the doses.



William McKinley—voiced opinion.

Florence protested. Once, when he had gone to London to visit a brother, she wrote the brother, saying, "James is always taking white powders, and I think they are not good for him." Her husband was enraged when he learned of the letter. There was a violent quarrel, and he struck her.

There were other causes contributing to her unhappiness. She felt that the servants in the house were not her servants, but his.

He discouraged the visits of her mother, who was living in Paris, and he would not let Florence leave Liverpool. She felt she was surrounded by enemies.

But once she did get away, as far as London, and there she met a man, Albert Brierly, with whom for a period of three days she permitted herself an illicit romance—which told against her in an overwhelming way at the time of her trial.

Returning to Liverpool, remorseful, she chose a time when her husband was "feeling better" because he had just taken his "tonic," and she made her confession.

One of the servants, whose ears were always alert, overheard a scrap of the conversation, heard the husband say, "O, Bunny, Bunny, how could you?"

But whether this "how could you" referred to Florence's London adventure or to a complaint of tampering with her husband's medicine never has been made quite clear. Birkenhead, author of one of the best analyses of the murder trial, thought it probably referred to some trivial household incident, for, he argued, a husband would hardly choose so mild a protest as "O, Bunny, Bunny, how could you?" if he were speaking either of his wife's infidelity or her attempt to kill him.

Florence's London trip was near the end of March, 1889. It was May 11 when her husband died. The intervening days were studied closely by the lawyers on both sides when Florence was on trial for her life.

It was shown that on April 23 or 24 she went to a chemist's shop and bought some poison flypaper containing arsenic. She did this openly. On April 29, still without any attempt at concealment, she bought more.

Her explanation was that she wished to prepare a lotion for her complexion by soaking out the arsenic and mixing it with other ingredients. She said she had learned the technique for this in her early girlhood in France.

She wanted the lotion, she said, to clear up some "spots" in her complexion before going to a dance on the night of April 30 with her husband's brother Edwin, who had come up from London for a visit. She and Edwin did go to the dance, while James Maybrick, being indisposed, stayed at home.

The next day, May 1, he felt enough better to go to his office. He took a parcel of lunch from home and afterward reported that it made him sick. On May 2 he again went to his office, but on May 3 he stayed home—in bed.

His condition grew worse, and on May 7 a trained nurse was summoned. It was on that day, too, that a housemaid named Yapp, according to her testimony at the murder trial, "saw Mrs. Maybrick pour some medicine from one bottle to another." Yapp also testified that on that same day she found in the house a parcel labeled "Poison for cats." This proved to be arsenic.

By this time the whole household, including the brother-in-law, Edwin Maybrick, suspected that Florence was poisoning her husband. The suspicion was deepened when the maid Yapp intercepted a letter which Florence had entrusted to her to be mailed to Brierly, the man with whom she had shared her London romance. Yapp opened the letter, read it, never mailed it. Instead she turned it over to a Mrs. Briggs, who was described as a friend of the family, but who certainly was no friend of Mrs. Maybrick. The letter contained the tremendously damag-

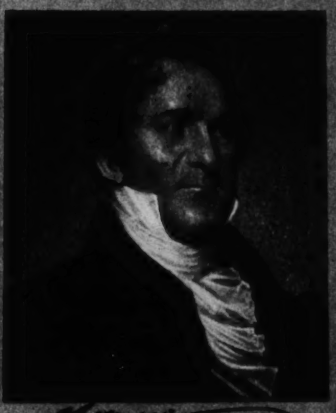
DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

● This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1835.



Wm. Wirt

WILLIAM WIRT, writer, lawyer, and cabinet member, was born in Bladensburg, Md., Nov. 8, 1772. His parents were innkeepers, his father a native of Switzerland and his mother a native of Germany. Both parents died while William still was a small child, and he became the ward of an uncle.

The boy obtained his schooling in Georgetown and Charles county, both in Maryland, and in 1783 was entered as a student in the grammar school of the Rev. James Hunt of Montgomery county, Maryland. In 1787 he became a private tutor in the home of Benjamin Edwards, the father of Ninian Edwards, who later was to become an important figure in Illinois history. Ninian Edwards had been a fellow student of Wirt in the Rev. Mr. Hunt's school.

At the age of 17 Wirt began the study of law in Montgomery County Courthouse, Md., in the office of William P. Hunt, son of his former teacher. A year later he moved to Culpeper county, Virginia, where after a few months he was admitted to the bar. On May 28, 1795, he married Mildred, the daughter of Dr. George Gilmer. The young couple made their home on the Gilmer estate in Albemarle county, Virginia. After the death of his wife on Sept. 17, 1799, Wirt went to Richmond, where he continued the practice of law. In May, 1800, he won distinction as one of the counsel for James Thomson Callendar in his famous trial under the alien and sedition act.

Elected by the Virginia legislature to preside over one of the three chancery districts into which the state had been divided, Wirt in 1802 moved to Williamsburg. That same year he married Elizabeth, daughter of Col. Robert Gamble of Richmond. In 1806 he moved to Norfolk, Va. In the meantime, however, he had entered the literary field, writing anonymously "The Letters of the British Spy," which were published serially in the Richmond Argus. A series of essays entitled "The Rainbow" was written by him and published in 1804. In 1806 Wirt went back to Richmond to reside, and in the following year he appeared as counsel in the prosecution of Aaron Burr.

Elected to the Virginia house of delegates in 1808, he served only one term. This was the only office to which he ever was elected by the people.

In 1810 he began a series of essays called "The Old Bachelor," which he continued until some time in 1813. For a short while after the British raid on Washington in 1814 he served as a captain of artillery. In 1816 he was appointed by President Madison to the post of United States attorney for the district of Richmond.

His "Sketches of the Life and Character of Patrick Henry" appeared in 1817, the first of his works to bear his own name. In the same year Wirt was appointed attorney general in the cabinet of James Monroe, a position which he held 12 years, until the retirement of John Quincy Adams as President. Appearing for the government and also as private counsel in a number of important legal cases during his service in the cabinet, he still found time to write. In 1826 he was appointed president of the University of Virginia, but declined to accept the honor.

After quitting the cabinet in 1829 Wirt removed his residence to Baltimore. Being opposed to Andrew Jackson for President in 1831, he used his influence in favor of Henry Clay and was chosen as one of the delegates to the Whig convention. Before this convention met, however, the Anti-Mason party staged its convention and nominated Wirt as its candidate. He accepted the nomination in the belief that, since the Anti-Masons would not support Clay, he might be nominated by the Whigs and thus unite the two groups against Jackson. But the Whigs nevertheless nominated Clay. Wirt then wished to withdraw his candidacy, but could not do so without deserting those who had supported him. In the election that followed in 1832 Jackson was returned to the White House.

Shortly after returning to private life Wirt attempted unsuccessfully to establish a colony of German immigrants in Florida. After a brief illness he died in Washington on Feb. 18, 1834.

DANTINE IS DANDY!

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1943: The Chicago Tribune.)

THERE IS NONE so blind as he who refuses to see. That truism has been proved over and over again in our town, and most recently demonstrated in the case of Helmut Dantine. Failure to see under the Nazi uniform he wore as the wounded flyer in "Mrs. Miniver" has cost Metro the services of a promising leading man and, if given the right rôles, a star—one who can be as charming out of that uniform as he is horrible in it. To me the idea of his part in "Miniver" was "but for the grace of God." And but for the difference in upbringing he could have been Greer Garson's son instead of Richard Ney.

Warners grabbed Dantine soon after he crawled out of Mrs. Miniver's garden and signed him to a long-term contract. Because his rapidly improving English was still imperfect, and because, in common with the rest of Hollywood, they would cast him naturally in the medium which had first won him attention, Dantine was put right back into German uniform and given the meanest rôle in Hollywood in many a long day.

As commandant of the German forces of occupation in a Norwegian village in "Edge of Darkness" Dantine spills out all the venom he built up and suggested as the wounded soldier in his first production. He plays the nasty Nazi with an abandon that can be excused only in a picture of the trials and tribulations of the once proud Quisling country.

Meanwhile Dantine himself has been getting around in our town, and more particularly at Warners. Out of uniform, it was discovered he had neither horns nor a tail, that he was a quick-witted, good-natured Austrian whose greatest ambition was to become an American citizen and to play an American lover on the screen.

He had, in fact, signed two other long term contracts. One was with Gwen Anderson, an American actress he met at the Pasadena Community theater, where he used to appear, and whom he married. The other was with the United States of America, which accepted his application for citizenship with enthusiasm because of his marriage to an American.

Dantine was tried out in a short straight rôle in "Casablanca." The Nazi mannerisms were absent in that, and Dantine's appetite for nonenemy rôles was whetted. In "Mission to Moscow" he did a sympathetic rôle as Colonel Kameney, who explains the military backwardness of Russia to Ambassador Davies (Walter Huston).

Meantime the Americanization of Mr. Dantine was proceeding rapidly. He asked Mushy Callahan, a trainer on the lot and one time a champion fighter, to train him as a boxer. Mushy, a mighty popular character, took to Dantine as a producer takes to a sweater girl. They've become pals.

"He's the most polite guy I ever met," says Mushy. "He asks me about a certain blow, and when I hit him — pretty hard sometimes—he stops everything to bow from the waist and say, 'Thank you, Mr. Callahan.'

"He's the first player I ever trained who thanks me for hitting him, and certainly the first to call me Mr. Callahan. And even a pug gets a kick out of being treated like a gentleman!"

So now the studio has revised its plans for him. He'll play one more war drama—"To the Last Man"—and will wear the uniform he hates.

After that it's mothballs for Dantine's Nazi trappings, at least for a spell. He'll have a straight and romantic rôle in "Passage to Marseilles." Eventually he may even be allowed to win the girl. "That," says Mr. Dantine, "will be a happy day."

Dantine recently made a flying trip to New York to see his wife, but stayed only 36 hours —during which time she played both a matinée and night performance.

He rented a house for her when they thought "Janie" would be closing; but the prolonged run has ended that love's young dream for the time being. He lives now in a bachelor apartment, from which he writes polite notes to those who do him favors.

In March Dantine celebrated the fifth anniversary of his first brush with the Nazis. A young diplomat in his native Austria, he'd learned to speak some English and was being prepared for the diplomatic service. His post was to be England.

Then on March 11 the Nazis marched into Austria and into his own Vienna. As a lieutenant, he reported to his regiment, ready to do what he could to save his nation from occupation.

But the' Germans came, he recalls, with a "blanket of air power" and "streets full of tanks and panzer divisions." He learned later—too late to be of use—that only every third or fourth tank was real. The others were built of wood and papier-maché, painted to resemble the real thing. There seemed to be no hope in the opposition to overwhelming power.

Dantine was thrown into a concentration camp, then given his choice of staying there or quitting the country. He chose the latter, and managed to get to America. Immediately he headed for California, where he entered the University of California. Before long he heard about the Pasadena Community theater, and his latent ambition to be an actor triumphed over his plan to study law and become a diplomat.

He wants eventually to direct. But then he's no different from all other actors. They all want to become directors, and how few have ever succeeded! They seem to think a director's life is easy, when, instead of having only one performance to think of, a director is responsible for the whole blooming thing. If the picture's good you're in; if it's bad you're looking for another job. Whereas the actor can blame a bad picture on the story, its director, its cast—in fact, any old thing — and get away with it.

Dantine is dark, of medium height, aggressive, but has charm. He takes his work seriously. His English is improving. Perhaps the world—which used to be waiting for the sunrise and which is now definitely hoping for peace—holds a warm welcome for the son of Austria who has worked his way up in pictures thru playing a Nazi—the men he loves to hate.

On the other hand, he may be blessing Hitler. But for him and his ruthlessness Dantine might have led a routined life instead of having the most exciting, adventurous time and living a life that in ordinary days would have been called fiction, not fact. Think of the tall true tales he'll be able to recite to his grandchildren — if he's ever lucky enough to have any!

HELMUT DANTINE as he is—a charming young man who wants to be an American citizen and play a romantic lead.

In "Edge of Darkness," with Nancy Coleman, Dantine pours out all the venom hinted at in his role in "Mrs. Miniver."

THERE is a story, probably apochryphal, that one night during his Chicago run of "My Dear Children" the late John Barrymore noticed a particularly attractive girl sitting across the room in one of his favorite night clubs. "Who," who-ed John in his best Shakespearean bellow, "is that captivating creature? I must meet her." "That," explained his companion, "is your daughter." And it was—Diana Barrymore. She had, the story goes, just arrived in town to appear in a stage production. They had not seen each other for a long time.

Diana is the daughter of Barrymore and Blanche Oelrichs (Michael Strange), John's second wife. She was born March 5, 1921, was schooled in the east, and made her professional debut in summer stock. She first appeared on Broadway in 1939 and made her film debut in "Eagle Squadron." Critics agree that the Barrymore talent is evident in this girl. Movie fans have seen her recently in "Between Us Girls," and in "Nightmare," with Brian Donlevy.

Dear Mae: Two or three or maybe four days ago you neglected to add, "See you tomorrow," at the end of your comment, and I, thinking you were gone for good, fainted completely away. Have just come out of my coma and happily see you are again normal. Please don't let it happen again.

Ardently yours, ME.

Dear "Me": Don't YOU let it happen again! You little ray of sunshine!

Dear Miss Tinée: I recently saw "Arabian Nights," featuring Maria Montez, and I was really delighted with her acting. Will you be kind enough to print a picture and tell me something about her? Thank you. Sincerely yours, AL MORSE.

Maria Montez.

Dear Mr. Morse: Pretty girl! Her full name is Maria Gracia, and she was born in the Dominican Republic. She's 5 feet 6½ inches tall, weighs 119 pounds, has reddish brown hair and brown eyes. She has five brothers and four sisters and is interested in astrology and palm reading. You're welcome.

Dear Miss Tinée: I just saw the picture "The Glass Key," in which you know Alan Ladd appeared. Could you please give me his address and something about him? And could you tell me how I could get an autographed picture of him? I hope that isn't too much to ask. Orchids to your column. Thank you very much. Yours truly,

AUDREY BESSA.

Dear Audrey: Address Mr. Ladd in care of Paramount Studios, Hollywood. He might send you a picture if you requested one and inclosed a quarter — and he might not. Glad you like the column!

Dear Miss Tinée: I saw Tim Holt in "Hitler's Children," and I think he did a remarkable job of portraying the rôle of a Nazi captain. Would you please tell me something about him and also give me his address? I enjoy your column very much, and I have already learned many things about movie stars I like. Thank you very much. Sincerely yours,

DAWN GOODSPEED.

Dear Miss Goodspeed: Tim certainly did do a grand job! But why shouldn't he? He's Jack Holt's son! He's 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. His hobby is raising cocker spaniels. Address him care of Central Casting Office, Hollywood. I'm so glad you like the column!

Dear Miss Tinée: Thanks for the address of Cary Grant. You asked what kind of a bird I have; a myna from India, the most wonderful in the world. He has both a male and female voice, says one sentence in Chinese, cries like a baby, barks like a dog, meows like a cat, whistles beautifully, and gives a perfect horse-laugh. He is about the size of a robin and black except for two white feathers on each side. E. PFISTER.

Dear Miss Pfister: Thanks ever so much for the information. I love birds! We have all sorts coming to our feeding pen in the back yard — but never a myna from India. Once I had a parrot—however, that's a long story——

Dear Miss Tinée: I saw Paul Henreid in "Now Voyager" not so long ago, and ever since he has been my favorite screen Romeo. I wonder if you would include his picture in your column, together with his address and a little about him?

Yours truly,
BABS.

Paul Henreid

Dear Babs: I can quite understand your interest in Mr. Henreid! Address him care of Warner Brothers, Burbank, Cal. The rest of his name is Baron von Wasel-Waldingau. He's becoming an American citizen. Was on the European stage. His first American motion picture was "Joan of Paris." He's 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 170 pounds. Is married.

Dear Miss Tinée: I know that Jennifer Jones plays the title rôle in "Song of Bernadette," but I don't know who else is in the cast. Could you tell me, please?

MARY ANN.

Dear Mary Ann: Included in the cast of "The Song of Bernadette" are Charles Bickford, Blanche Yurka, Vincent Price, and Mary Anderson. The entire cast will be printed when the picture is reviewed—so keep your eyes peeled. (Silly expression, isn't it?)

PUT YOUR KITCHEN INTO WAR WORK—SAVE FATS!

By MARY MEADE

ONE tablespoon of waste fat from your kitchen will make enough powder to fire five machine gun bullets. A pound of such fat will produce enough glycerin to fire 150 rounds from a light machine gun. Waste kitchen fats are needed by the government, and it is every woman's patriotic duty to collect all of her waste fats and turn them in to her meat dealer every month.

Use what you need for cooking. Bacon fat, for example, may be used in biscuits, corn sticks like those pictured, even refrigerator cookies. All of our fats are precious, and using bacon drippings in these ways will save on butter and margarine.

Use bacon and sausage drippings instead of butter to season vegetables. Forget about French frying for the duration. That kind of cooking uses too much fat. If you must have some fried foods, fry them in shallow fat, the drippings from meat, bacon, sausage, or ham.

Every drop of fat which you don't need in your cooking should be collected in a can to be turned in to your meat dealer once a month. The need is great. Fat makes glycerin, and a shortage of glycerin is a serious threat to our ability to carry on the war. It is estimated that if every family saves a pound of waste fats a month, and that if every restaurant turns in all of its surplus greases, these amounts, together with what the army and navy are making every effort to save, will insure us of enough glycerin to meet the quota we must maintain to win the war.

Strain your waste fats into a can. The big coffee cans we used when we first started to save fats are no longer available. Use tomato cans, corn cans, any kind of tin which you've emptied and washed. When you have a pound of fat saved, carry it to your meat dealer and he'll pay you a few cents for it. There is some talk of the possibility of his paying you in red points so that you can buy other fats more easily.

Strain fats, put them in clean tin cans, and carry them to your meat dealer.

What kind of fats should you save? Every kind. If you have a chicken to stew, chill the broth in the refrigerator and collect the fat which hardens on top of the kettle. This fat is excellent for use in cooking, so use what you need in biscuits, gravies, and sauces, then melt the rest and strain it into your fat salvage can.

Use some bacon fat for corn sticks and other good breads. Turn in the rest.

Drippings from roast pork, beef, veal, and lamb contain varying amounts of fats. Skim these off and pour them thru the strainer into the fat salvage can. All the bacon drippings which you don't need in cooking, all the sausage fat, all the trimmings from roasts and chops—save them all. Collect the fat left on the table after the family has dined on chops. Render it along with any other solid pieces of fat meat which you have saved, and pour these drippings into your can.

Women who think saving table scraps for their fat value is a nuisance should take a lesson from workers in our shipyards and munition plants. These men are saving the fat trimmings from the meats in their sandwiches when they bring their own lunches. These are rendered and turned in with cafeteria and restaurant waste fats to produce some of the glycerin so greatly needed by the men behind the guns.

If your guests leave butter, rescue it to use in cooking.

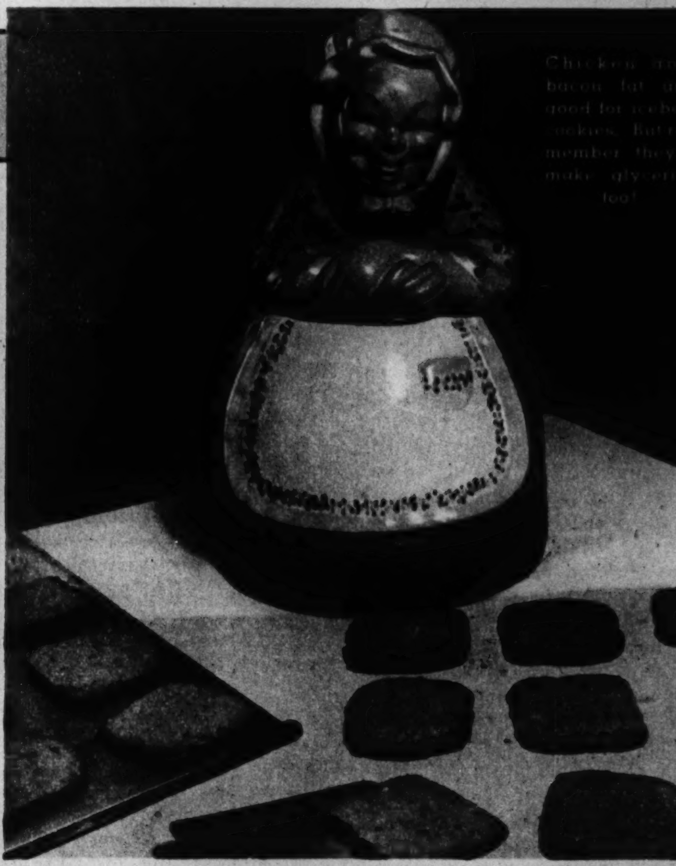
Render solid fats like meat trimmings by heating them in the oven or on top of the stove at moderate temperature. Don't let them scorch, for scorched fat won't yield as much glycerin as it would had it not been overheated.

Keep the can of waste fat in the refrigerator so that it won't grow rancid. (If you have any rancid fat, turn it in, too, altho it won't be quite as helpful as fresher fat.) Turn fat in regularly. Once or twice a week renderers pick it up from the meat men, refine it, and ship it off to glycerin factories. Usually within three weeks from the time you turn in your fat it lands in a powder plant ready to be made into fighting materials.

Save your waste fats, just as you save your tin cans and prepare them for salvage. Remember, there's a use for every tiny scrap of fat which is left on the plates of your family at dinner time. Strain it into a can, turn it in, help win the war!



Chicken and bacon fat are good for icebox cookies. But remember they'll make glycerin, too!

"Did She Poison Him?"

ing statement that "my husband is sick unto death." No one else had called his illness dangerous. How, it was asked, could Florence know?

From that time on—2:30 p. m., May 7—Florence Maybrick was watched night and day and never permitted to be alone with her husband. She fainted shortly before he died and was unconscious or semi-conscious for several hours afterward. In the meantime the servants, the nurses, the relatives, and the "friend of the family," Mrs. Briggs, were ransacking the house in quest of more poison. They found it, too, in several places, and decided she must have hidden it.

Florence's murder trial did not begin until July 31, in a hot and crowded courtroom, Judge Fitzjames Stephens presiding. Her "friends" were there, equipped, as a Tribune cable dispatch said, "with fans, smelling salts, and opera glasses." They also brought their lunch so that they would not have to leave their seats.

Her momentary lover, Brierly, was present, and the two looked steadily at each other without giving any sign of recognition. Her mother had arrived by this time from Paris and taken rooms near the courthouse.

The baroness retained a famous lawyer, Sir Charles Russell, for the defense. He had to watch the piling up of a mass of evidence against his client and had to see her suffer under the open hostility of the crowd both in and out of the courtroom. She had been hissed in the street.

A letter from James Maybrick to his second brother, Michael, written April 28, complained that "the doctors can't diagnose my case" and suggested a "post-mortem in the interest of science." His will, dated April 5—after he had learned of his wife's affair with Brierly—was also evidence. It gave about $250,000 to the children and only $800 a year to Florence.

Medical experts described their finding of "three bottles of arsenic in a chocolate box," of the packet of "poison for cats," the poison flypaper, and arsenic stains on Mrs. Maybrick's dressing gown. The Tribune's account of the first day closed with this statement:

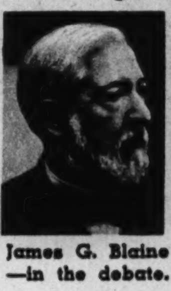
"The case looks black for Mrs. Maybrick."

In the next few days, however, there was a sharp change of public sympathy. "Prosecution witnesses were hooted in the streets," the Tribune correspondent said. The servant Yapp, who had opened Mrs. Maybrick's letter to Brierly, was "called opprobrious names." The judge himself, whose prejudice had become manifest, was "menaced by the multitude" when he approached the courthouse in his carriage, and extra police were summoned to guard him.

Defense evidence proved to be better than the crowd had expected. It was shown clearly that Maybrick had been a habitual "arsenic eater." A Liverpool chemist, Edward Eaton, testified that he had sold Maybrick "an American tonic called 'Pickmeup'" in which the active ingredient was arsenic. Others had sold him arsenic in France and in the United States. The defense showed, too, that Mrs. Maybrick's story of making a face lotion from the arsenic-laden flypaper had a genuine basis in the popular belief that such a lotion was really good for the complexion.

"Whether this belief was correct or not," said the defense, "is immaterial. If Mrs. Maybrick believed it, and acted on her belief, her story must be accepted, especially since no evidence at all has been produced to show that she ever made any other use of the solution than as a lotion."

One point that told against her, however, was a voluntary statement which she insisted on making to the court. It was about the "white powders" which her husband habitually took when he was able to get them himself and which, she said, he begged her to put into his food when he was ill. She insisted that she did not know what the powder was but admitted that after he had assured her it was harmless she "put some of it into a bottle of meat juice for him."



James G. Blaine —in the debate.

This connected with the prosecution's story of the servant Yapp seeing "medicine poured from one bottle to another." Even so, however, it was shown that after the powder had been put in the meat juice none of the mixture was fed to the patient. It was kept instead by the nurses and used as evidence. Thus, if the benefit of doubt belongs to the defendant, all that was shown was that a powder was placed in a bottle; that while this powder actually was a poison, the defendant did not know it, and that in any case the sick man never took it.

The sum of the defense's case seemed to be that a man who had been voluntarily eating arsenic for years finally died, possibly from taking too much.

But the defense was weakened by the fact that Mrs. Maybrick had confessed infidelity to her husband, had written a letter describing him as "sick unto death," had actually purchased a considerable quantity of poison. And above all the defense suffered from the unconcealed prejudice of the trial judge.

The judge was found insane soon after the trial, and some believe that his insanity existed for a considerable period before it was formally "found."

In any case, when he charged the jury he stressed the "moral guilt" of adultery, found that to be a motive for murder, linked it with the defendant's purchases of poison, and virtually dictated the jury's verdict.

That verdict, however, instead of being the end of a cause célèbre, proved to be its beginning, for immediately afterward the whole world began retrying the case. The London Times said the verdict and sentence called for "the earnest consideration of the home secretary." Chauncey M. Depew told a New York World correspondent that "she was convicted by the judge's charge."

The British Medical Journal said editorially that the jury's verdict was "correct," but the Chemist and Druggist, another professional publication, suggested that "the appalling list of remedies" consumed by the patient might easily account for his death. And the foreman of the trial jury was "surprised and shocked" to learn that defense witnesses who would have supported Mrs. Maybrick's story of using the poison flypaper for cosmetic purposes had been excluded by order of the judge, who ruled that their testimony would be meaningless.

Mrs. Maybrick's mother charged that her daughter had been "done in by women who hated her," and especially by Mrs. Briggs, the "friend of the family."

"Mrs. Briggs," said the baroness at a time when the death sentence had not yet been commuted, "is a sister of Gertrude Janion, and Gertrude Janion was in love with Brierly. The animus is clear."

It was not until 1904 that Mrs. Maybrick was freed from prison. Most of her property and that of her mother had been spent in the long battle. But the two had enough left for a little traveling, and when they came to America they lived comfortably for some time in Highland Park. Early in the spring of 1910 the baroness went to Paris, with the understanding that Florence would follow in the summer.

It was in the lonely period following her mother's departure that Florence gave the party for the children who were "too polite to whisper." That was in March. In the middle of April the baroness died in Paris, where she had lived as "Mrs. Mormont"—the pseudonym under which she had sought obscurity during all the years of Florence's imprisonment.

Florence, now completely alone and with only a little money left, spent the last 20 years of her life in the village of South Kent, Conn., where she was known as Mrs. Florence Chandler. She died there in November, 1941, completely alone—save for her many cats. There had been a time, it will be remembered, when she possessed a package labeled "Poison for cats," but the evidence seems to be that no cat ever perished by an act of hers.

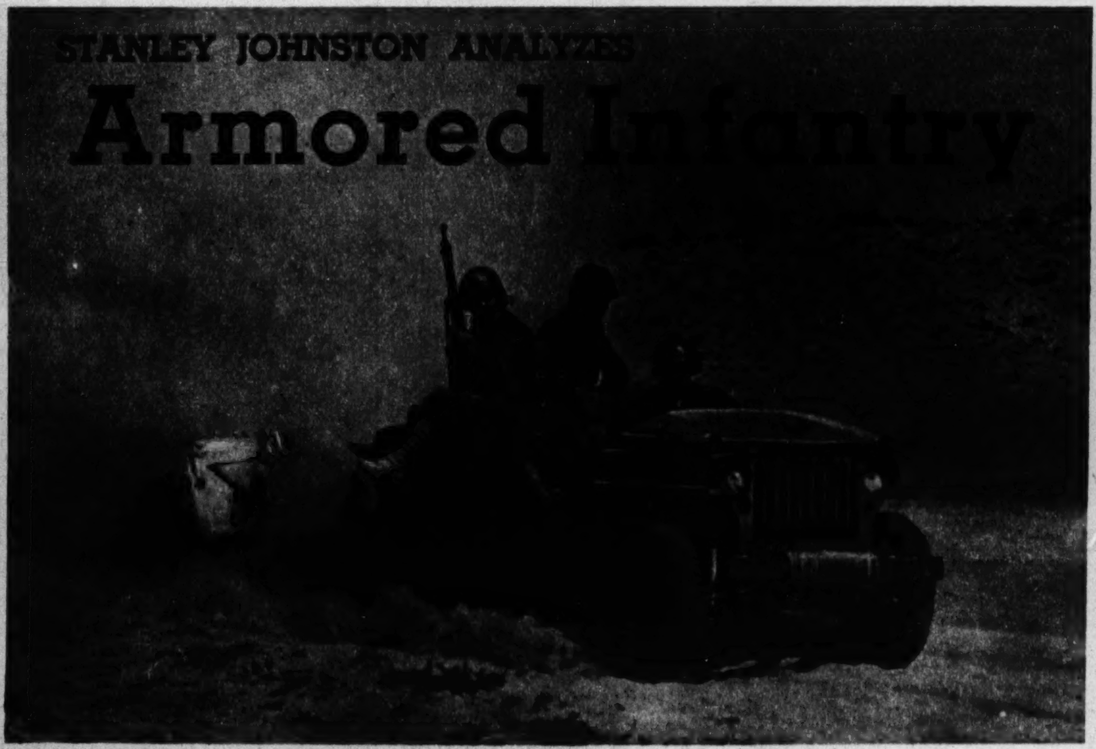
STANLEY JOHNSTON ANALYZES

Armored Infantry



Jeep-drawn 37 mm. anti-tank gun goes into action with crew in Tunisia.

By STANLEY JOHNSTON

ALTHO the wallop of an armored division lies in the fire power, armor, and mobility of its tanks, the infantry component of the armored force easily outnumbers all other of its troops. It does not greatly differ from the present orthodox infantry except that it had been trained to fight at a faster tempo. Also, because the men ride into battle aboard armored self-propelled vehicles, which carry their weapons and ammunition, it has been possible to provide them with stepped up fire power from a greater percentage of heavier weapons. In addition they are more self-sustaining because they are capable of toting greater quantities of material and supplies direct to the battle area.

The Nazis were the first to equip the infantry attached to their armored divisions with armored self-propelled vehicles. These troop carriers were the answer to the question of how to enable infantry to keep up with the fast rolling tanks, how to allow troops to follow tanks across terrain swept with hostile rifle and machine gun fire, and how to continue driving thru already broken enemy positions.

Before going into detail about the part infantry plays in the operations of the armored force, it may be well here briefly to review how armored vehicles first came into being.

World War I. will go down in history as an era in which literally millions of men were killed and maimed because of the stubborn persistence of military leaders in sending their men day after day across open terrain against the concentrated fire of enemy machine guns. This was wholesale slaughter. Few of the generals seemed to know that the machine gun was the main destructive weapon of that war, and few seemed to realize it even in the years following the war.

In 1915, when machine guns had the land armies stalemated along the front in France and the military staffs had no solution to this problem, the British admiralty conceived the idea of a self-propelled, armored, gun-carrying vehicle. They first attempted to employ a steam-powered vehicle, but eventually got around to the internal combustion engine.

The name of this new vehicle was to be His Majesty's Land Ship—but to prevent any word of its development reaching the enemy, the H. M. L. S.'s were always referred to in communications as "tanks." In the navy tanks might mean receptacles for water, fuel, etc.

After the navy had completed the development and had supplies of vehicles on hand they were transferred to the British army. At the beginning the British general staff thought them rather a bore and would have no more to do with them than they were forced to. It was not until Haig's army had been slaughtered in his fruitless 1916 offensive that he employed tanks for the first time—but not until months after he had failed to break thru the German front.

British armor advances. A Bren gun carrier at left.

They were first used at the battle of Cambrai in the fall of 1917, where a victory was won. Tho the gains were small, they were something, and casualties were less than 5,000, against the 40,000 to 50,000 suffered daily when infantry was sent to the assault after a preliminary artillery bombardment, as was the custom at that time.

The following year the allies had begun to realize the vital importance of the tank and used them in quantity.

Toward the end of the war the French army introduced a motor vehicle for carrying infantry. It was provided with armor plate on the sides and front of sufficient strength to keep out rifle and machine gun bullets, and the light shell fragments, which caused the majority of casualties. That was the first armored infantry carrier.

In preparing for the present war the Germans simply took the tank and the armored troop carrier, in their improved form, of course, joined them, and had the basis of a force that could roll into battle and fight while giving their occupants the maximum of protection.

There we have the original armored force.

The tank is a fearful weapon of destruction, but not without reënforcements. For one thing, the narrow slits in the armor thru which driver and gunners can peer give the crew only a very limited vision. Without supporting infantry on hand to take care of ambushing enemy defenders, tanks on their own would fall easy prey to hidden anti-tank units which unsuspectingly might attack with anti-tank grenades, flame throwers, jars of inflammable liquid, concealed anti-tank guns, anti-tank rifles, whatever other weapons or traps they have at their disposal.

Make the Most of Your Makeup!

In caring for the eyebrows first brush the hairs up to form a guide line, then apply eyebrow pencil.

Brush rouge over one side of the mouth before building the other side. Then finish so as to make the mouth in proper proportion to the structure of the face.

Use a sharp black pencil to accent eyelids at lash line. Don't let color show on lids. Then stroke on mascara.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

GETTING the most out of your makeup kit is this year's "must," for you should extract the last drop of beauty from those products of yours. Give your face the professional look. And don't believe that the professional look is an obviously made-up one. On the contrary, the less obvious the more professional and finished.

Get down to business on your makeup effort if you never have done it before. Practice it even if you aren't going anywhere, just so you'll develop the adept hand, the more and more critical eye. It's your face into which you can incorporate infinite charm and good looks with makeup that is cleverly applied.

Today let's concentrate on eyebrows, eyelashes, and mouth. Along with hair, you know, the eyes and mouth are the triumvirate upon which to lean. They're the trio upon which to build appeal. They're the most telling features of grooming and legitimate artifice. Let's take the mouth first, since it usually is the most widely makeup-treated.

Think of your mouth in terms of balance. Balance it in relation not only with one lip to the other but in relation to the whole face. If your face is small the mouth shouldn't be out of proportion. If the face is large you don't want a prissy little mouth. But you can see what is meant by balance if you sit critically before your mirror in leisurely study. Brush rouge over one side of the mouth before building the other side. Yes, use a brush; your movie stars use them.

To avoid the drooping mouth, make the lower lip slightly longer and rouge inside corners of the lower lip well. If the mouth is large and you would minimize its width, don't bring color to extreme edges. If it is small, bring color to the extreme edge. To remove excess lip rouge from all surface evenly, blot with folded tissue pressed against closed mouth, holding tissue in each hand resembling a tightly pressed towel or handkerchief. Don't daub it off in spots. If one lip is thinner than the other, the thinner lip can be helped to a certain extent by "thickening" it with lip rouge. But take care that the paint job does not become grotesque. Keep in mind that both lips of the ideal mouth balance perfectly in size.

Next look over your eyebrows critically. Err this year on the side of a too heavy line of hair rather than a too thin. Why err at all? If you yen for a higher arched brow, try leaving the upper hairs as they are and pluck the lower edge only. This will give more width between brows and eyelashes and will raise the height of the arch as high as it should be.

To keep the arch of brows in the proper high line, brush brows upward into a guide line. Never brush downward. Then apply the eyebrow pencil. Upper hairs are then used as a guide line for penciling. You needn't be told to clear the area between eyes of "weedy" hairs, nor to clear the area above, below, and outside of eyebrow line of stragglers. You all do that, of course.

A clever trick with eyelashes is to use a sharp black pencil to accent the eyelids right at the eyelash line. Press and roll the pencil close to the lashes, forcing the color down into the lash roots. Don't let it show on the lid. Then stroke on mascara with side of brush, not with bristles, for quick and even application.

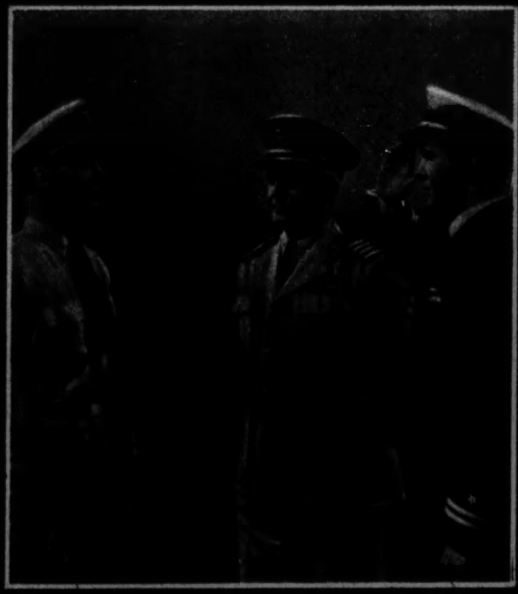
GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER presents Tyrone Power in "CRASH DIVE"

1 Lt. Wade Stewart (Tyrone Power) proves himself a hero on Atlantic torpedo boat patrol and wins a transfer to submarine duty. Is sent to Washington for orders.

2 En route he meets and falls in love with Jean Holliday (Anne Baxter), pretty school teacher. He asks an assignment to a base near her home.



3 His new post is second in command to Dewey Connors (Dana Andrews), skipper of the sub Albacore. Ashore he devotes his time to Jean.

4 During an attack by a German Q-boat Wade saves the Albacore and is instrumental in sinking the enemy. Dewey and the crew pay him the compliment of deep admiration.

5 Wade's joy in having Jean finally admit her love for him is short-lived. He discovers she is the girl Dewey long had hoped to marry.

6 But call to action drives romantic thoughts out of their heads. Inside an enemy port, Dewey sends ashore a Commando demolition party headed by Wade and McDonnell (Jimmy Gleason).

7 The mission is successful, at the cost of McDonnell's life, but on the way out a lucky shot destroys the Albacore's periscope, but Dewey clings to the half-submerged bridge and guides the sub to safety.

8 Their friendship firmly welded by duty and fierce admiration of courage, Dewey and Wade remain very close even when Jean and Wade are married.

Our .45—It Carries a Wallop

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

AMERICA'S .45 caliber cartridge for side arms and submachine guns is, like the .30 caliber rifle and machine gun cartridge described in a recent issue of the Graphic Section, the most effective cartridge for the purpose designed.

The .45 caliber cartridge is standard current issue in five distinct types, as the accompanying table discloses.

The ball type M1911 cartridge is for use against enemy personnel in the service automatic pistols M1911 and M1911A1, Colt and Smith & Wesson revolvers M1917, and submachine guns such as the Thompson and the Reising. When this cartridge is used in revolvers, however, it is necessary to employ a clip to provide a rim, which is lacking in the cartridge. Two clips holding three cartridges each are used in loading the six chambers of a revolver. Accompanying illustrations show a loaded and an unloaded clip.

Designed basically to be used in the submachine gun for observation of fire and incendiary purposes, the tracer M1 cartridge also may be used in the service automatic pistol for signaling. The blank M1 cartridge is intended for signaling purposes, firing salutes, training cavalry horses, and in maneuvers where simulated fire is desired. This cartridge is the only one of the five distinct types that has a rim instead of an extracting groove, and thus it is the only one that can be used without a clip in revolvers. It cannot be used in the automatic pistol or the submachine gun.

The dummy M1921 cartridge is employed for training personnel in the operations of loading and unloading revolvers and to simulate firing. It also is used in automatic pistols, in this case being mixed with live ammunition in the magazine for the purpose of detecting and correcting flinching and faulty trigger squeeze in firing.

The high-pressure M1 cartridge is employed for proof firing weapons. Its powder charge is sufficient to develop a breech pressure considerably in excess of that of the regular service ammunition. In other words, a weapon that will withstand the stepped-up gas pressure of the high-test cartridge is more than safe with the regular cartridge. Due to the danger involved, the high-test cartridge is used only by authorized persons and is fired by mechanical means, with the weapon under a hood and held in a fixed rest.

The ball type cartridge, which represents by far the greater part of the issue of this ammunition to troops in the field, is powerful and deadly at relatively short ranges. Its low-velocity, heavy bullet delivers a paralyzing blow, and it is said that it will stop a man more quickly than the high-speed bullet of the .30 caliber rifle or machine gun. The .30 caliber cartridge, with its heavy propelling charge, can reach out over a great distance. The .45 caliber cartridge, with its heavier bullet and relatively light propelling charge, cannot match the .30 in range, but its hitting power is great at shorter distances. Each type has its special uses.

Designed originally for the pistol and to be used only at close range, the .45 caliber cartridge has a somewhat greater range and increased accuracy over a greater distance when used in a submachine gun. The longer barrel of the submachine gun provides this advantage over the stubby barrel of the pistol.

The rapid rate of fire of the pistol and the full automatic fire of the submachine gun make it possible to deliver a great number of shots in quick succession in a brief space of time. For this reason the submachine is particularly useful in commando raids, in paratrooper attacks, and in similar instances where the fighting is hot and furious at the closest of ranges.

From about 1870 until some time in the '90s the principal side arms of our forces were the single-action .45 caliber Colt revolver and the Smith & Wesson Schofield, a similar weapon. The single-action revolver had to be cocked by hand for each discharge. In 1892 the caliber of the Colt weapon, then the service issue, was reduced to .38, this being the side arm used thruout the Spanish-American war. When our troops not long after that, in their pacification of the Philippines, encountered the fierce Moros of Mindanao, they discovered that the .38 did not possess enough shocking power to stop the fanatical tribesmen. In 1909, therefore, the .45 caliber was restored and further improved.

Altho the revolver, as the result of this, was almost perfect as such a weapon, the side arm problem still required attention. A way had to be found to exploit the lost energy of the cartridge, to load, cock, and discharge, and to repeat these operations as the trigger was squeezed and cartridges remained in the weapon.

The automatic pistol as we know it today is a product of the 20th century, altho its ancestors actually date back to as early as 1863. It was not until the Mauser pistol, a German weapon, appeared in 1898 that a practical rapid-fire magazine pistol was found. On April 20, 1897, John Browning, a native of Utah, had patented his automatic pistol. The Colt Firearms company later bought his patents, and in 1911 the United States government purchased for the army the weapon officially designated as M1911.

This pistol, of which the M1911A1 is a refinement, is 8½ inches long and weighs 2 pounds 7 ounces. The spring magazine, loaded with seven cartridges, fits into the grip of the pistol. The power of the recoil of firing ejects the empty cartridge case and the returning force of the recoil spring pushes an unfired cartridge into the chamber. A separate and distinct squeeze of the trigger is required to fire each shot, making the weapon actually a semi-automatic rather than an automatic arm, as the name would imply. Some of the early types of Mauser pistols were fully automatic, but full automatic fire would not be desirable in the American service pistol, since its limited magazine capacity would allow for only the briefest burst of fire and then the arm would be empty.

It was for this American pistol, the first of its type ever adopted by our army, that the .45 caliber rimless type cartridge was designed. The hard metal jacketed bullet was a distinct improvement over the old solid lead bullets employed in revolvers.

When the United States entered the first World war there were not enough of the automatic pistols to supply the vast new army. It became necessary to purchase large numbers of Colt and Smith & Wesson revolvers (the term revolver is derived from the fact that the magazine of the weapon is a revolving cylinder instead of a box with a spring-operated feeding device, such as is found in the automatic pistol). Since the pistol used rimless ammunition, a way had to be found to adapt this ammunition to the revolvers, which take rim type cartridges. Thus the clip, as illustrated on this page and previously discussed, was devised.

Both the pistol and the revolver were extensively used in World War I., but the submachine gun was not to see military use on a large scale until the present war. The submachine gun, thus named from the fact that it uses subcaliber (or pistol) ammunition, is largely a development of peace times. Best known of these guns is the Thompson gun, manufactured by the Auto-Ordnance corporation. First developed in 1915 by Brig. Gen. J. T. Thompson and Capt. John M. Blish of the navy, it was employed for a number of years in police and similar work, and frequently used by gangster criminals of the prohibition era. Its advantages both in semi-automatic fire and automatic fire came to be appreciated by army ordnance experts. The first basic order for the weapon was placed in 1921. Mexican mounted troops used it to great advantage in the early '20s. This was even before it was brought out in its present improved model, M1928A1.

Newer than the Thompson gun, the original "Tommy gun," is the Reising submachine gun, made by the Harrington & Richardson Arms company and used by our marines. The Reising gun weighs 6½ pounds, as against a weight of 9 pounds 13 ounces for the Thompson, but the Reising magazine holds only 20 cartridges, while the older weapon takes magazines of either 20 or 50 round capacity. Rate of fire in full automatic submachine gun fire is from 450 to 700 rounds a minute. Altho the maximum range of the .45 caliber bullet fired from a submachine gun is 1,700 yards, the really effective range is between 400 and 600 yards. The effective range of the automatic pistol, however, is considerably less.

The newly developed .30 caliber carbine, a weapon weighing about five pounds, is designed to take the place of the automatic pistol for certain uses of warfare. Altho the carbine's bullet is much smaller than that of the pistol and has less shocking power, its accurate range is much greater than the .45 caliber bullet fired from the pistol.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

ALTHO dog authorities do not seem to be in agreement on the origin of the distinctive breed which Americans know as the boxer, there isn't much doubt about one of its qualities. A boxer never will back up when danger threatens, and we can't conceive of this agile dog ever saying quits when the going gets hard.

It's very amusing to read the various statements about the origin of the boxer, which at first glance suggests the English bulldog, possibly with a dash of some big breed like the Great Dane and a little terrier mixed in. One boxer authority says that there isn't the slightest doubt about the boxer being a native of Europe. Another says that while it was perfected in one European country within the last 100 years or so, the boxer springs from a line of dogs that has been known thruout the whole of Europe since the 16th century. This same authority makes the point that the boxer is a cousin to practically all recognized breeds of the bulldog type.

There's no question but what the boxer carries bulldog blood and also a certain heritage from a terrier strain. He has the agility of the terrier. Every time we have played with boxers we have been impressed with their terrier activity. They know how to get around in a hurry.

The various breeds of dogs recognized today carry some unusual names. For example, Puli, Lhassa terrier, schipperke, and papillon are anything but common names. Boxer is not only unusual as a name for a dog, but it's one that (to some people) can't be explained.

In the early days the dog was known as a "bear biter," and even a "bull biter," which tells us of their uses during the 17th and 18th centuries. They were invaluable in tackling and holding game, including bears and deer, until the hunters arrived. In old pictures they are quickly distinguished from the other breeds of dogs used for hunting by their extremely individual head characteristics. Even woodcuts made in 1539 clearly depict the boxer type of dog.

But not one clew can we get from early writings about the name boxer. Its origin seems to be English. It certainly fits this smart breed, because the boxer fights in an unusual manner. A specimen begins his fight with his front paws, something like a man boxing. We have seen this trait in boxers at play. We watched a dog one day at an outdoor bench show. It was being given a little rough-house play by its owner. The boxer stood on his hind legs a great deal and waved his front legs around much like a boxer. Because of this characteristic the boxer is supposed to have gotten its name. Anyway, it's the only satisfactory story of the origin of its name.

In recent years the public has shown an increased interest in the boxer. Importation of outstanding specimens which have made many wins in the shows undoubtedly has heightened the interest of the dog fancier in the breed. In getting acquainted with the boxer the public has found that it is even-tempered, which is an attribute that an owner wants in his companion or guard dog.

One boxer owner always tells me that the boxer has all the kindly reserve and tolerance of the bulldog, yet he possesses all the sparkle and cheerfulness of a terrier. This is a pretty accurate word picture of the breed, for it does have important terrier characteristics.

Because the boxer is so full of life, we always have urged owners to either train them or have them trained in obedience. This training diverts their intelligence and their activity into the right channels and makes them much more enjoyable pets. They can be taught to do most anything. The way the boxers have been winning in obedience classes shows that the breed has the brains to learn most any routine.

These two young boxers show the typical expression and head conformation of the breed. Dark Victory, age 7 months, and Surprise Secret, age 4 years, are owned by Florence Greenman of Kankakee, Ill. Victory is the grandson and Secret the son of Champion Hermes von Uracher Wasserfall se Sumbula.

This little Yorkshire terrier, Mendham Pixie, is a show winner. It has been placed best of breed four times and also has won its companion dog title in obedience contests. The dog is owned by Evelyn Schweitzer of Northbrook, Ill.

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

Good high-key pictures are among the most difficult to take. They call for evenly balanced illumination, with sparingly placed shadow accents.

NOTHING captures extremely delicate light tones like a high-key picture. It is surprising that so few photographers make pictures of this type. They are not very difficult, but they must be planned ahead. You can't make a successful high-key picture merely by turning out a light, flat print from a normal negative.

The first thing you need to experiment with high key is a suitable subject. Babies, young girls, brides, delicate porcelain—subjects in which the light tones are most important—are best. You can't hope to make a good high-key shot of a subject that naturally has many dark tones.

Once you have your subject, use every step in the photographic process to help you get a final print that has very light tones, all within a narrow contrast range. A few bits of black are permitted and add important accents to high-key pictures. The pupils of the eyes, for example, contrast sharply with the rest of a portrait and help bring out the high-key effect.

Use as many lights as you have at your disposal, and arrange them in such a way that the subject is very evenly lighted. The fill-in lights should be almost as strong as your main light source. If you use backlighting it will add to the effect. Watch the shadows that give modeling to your subject's face. They should be present, but very weak. By checking with an exposure meter you can tell just how they compare with the general lighting. For a good high-key shot the darkest shadows should have at least one-fourth the illumination that is given to the subject as a whole. You can observe the effect as you build up your lighting setup.

Reflectors will help take the place of additional lights. One special lighting system employed by some amateurs is the use of a "doughnut" reflector. This is a ring of lights about three feet in diameter thru which the camera is pointed at the subject. Several lamp sockets are mounted on a suitable baseboard, with foil behind them and a diffusing material in front. You do not need to use such an outfit to experiment with high key, but you can arrange your lights to strike the subject from all angles as it does.

The background must be light and will require illumination of its own to avoid shadows. A white one is best, and you won't go wrong even if you have more light on it than on the subject.

Don't stop working for low contrast when your lighting is arranged. Exposure and development can be planned to get the effect you want. Overexposure and underdevelopment will give you a flat negative, which is just what you need. You can safely give up to three times normal exposure, and then reduce your developing time by several minutes. Take several shots of your first setup, and experiment with them to see what combination of exposure and development produces the best effect with your particular combination of film and developer. The fast panchromatic films, which have inherently low contrast, will give best results.

You have considerable control over contrast in printing, too, both in choice of paper and in varying exposure and development. This works the same way it does for film—overexpose and underdevelop if you want less contrast, and underexpose and overdevelop if you want more.

Don't be disappointed if your first print looks weak and washed out in the developer. Fix it and inspect it under normal light. If it has detail in light gray tones and only a few accents of dark gray or black, your exposure and development have been correct.

Such a print will stand out in any collection made from normal negatives, and if your original subject is of the right type you will have a good high-key picture.

Find a good subject for this type of photography and experiment with high key. You won't want to use it every day, but once you have added it to your photographic bag of tricks, you will be able to cash in on this experience when you come across a suitable occasion.

can disrupt the defense, shatter breastworks, squash machine gun posts, and generally disorganize the defenders, it is essential to have infantry nearby to clean up, occupy, and generally take full advantage of the damage done by the tanks.

At the beginning of this war the British had developed a light, full track, self-propelled vehicle that was very useful. It carried four men, usually armed with either a caliber .50 anti-tank gun and a machine gun, or two machine guns. They called them Bren gun carriers. Their usefulness was limited, however, because these small carriers could not bring forward enough infantrymen to fully support the tanks.

The United States, in developing its new armored force, already has provided bigger troop carriers, capable of transporting 8 or 10 men in addition to their machine guns, mortars, and ammunition. They are fast, have half tracks that enable them to maneuver on any terrain that can be crossed by tanks, and have steel walled bodies to withstand small arm projectiles.

The vital part played in armored warfare by the armored division's infantry has been early recognized by both the Russians and the Nazis. The Russians have named their armored force infantry "Tank Desyanti," which hints at troops who fight afoot, motorized, or horseborne. The Germans only recently have created a new branch of armored storm troops, called "panzergrenadiere" (a name that has much the same meaning), whose units are really a cross section of a motorized miniature army, particularly adept at initial attack and dangerous tasks generally.

From our own Brig. Gen. James C. Crockett, who spent several years watching the development of armored forces in Germany and who is one of our foremost authorities on the composition and tactical employment of the Nazis' armored divisions, we glean the following points about armored infantry, which he quotes from the German regulations of September, 1942:

"Armored vehicles enable the armored infantry to overcome comparatively weak opposition without dismounting.

"Rapid alternation between fighting from armored carrier and on foot, and the combination of these two forms of fighting are characteristic of armored infantry.

"The chief task of armored infantry is close coöperation with tanks. By following up closely, they can quickly exploit the tanks' success.

"Armored infantry, on account of their speed and maneuverability, can readily adapt their fire to suit any situation. Fire superiority so gained can be exploited more rapidly in armored vehicles than on foot.

"The splinterproof armor of their transport vehicles allows armored infantry to follow closely behind the burst of their own artillery fire."

Thus we see that the enemy uses his armored infantry as an integral part of the tank force, just as we developed it.

There will be times when the armored infantry will dismount and fight on foot in front of the tanks—preparing the way for them. Backed by the armored force's mobile artillery, they may go ahead to clear away a minefield, enabling their tanks to rush an enemy position. It will also be the armored force's infantry that will have to battle a way across a stream before the engineers can advance and build a bridge so that tanks and the remainder of the force may cross.

Again, they will fight as dismounted infantry up the sides of mountains too rough for vehicles, in fog, in dense woods, and against strongly held points. At night the armored infantry guards and defends the tanks, and at all times protects the artillery.

Powerful anti-tank guns could stop tanks indefinitely, or at least make assault by tanks too costly a procedure. Therefore their limitation becomes the problem of the airplane, the artillery, and last but not least, the armored force's own infantry, which must work its way forward and destroy gun crews by rifle or machine gun fire, or mortars, and hand grenades. Theirs is a dangerous job, and we in the United States, with the greatest productive potential of vehicles, certainly cannot send these men into battle on foot, as long as we can roll them into the fight—and at a considerable saving of lives—on armored vehicles.

Foot infantry, like heavy artillery, moves too slowly, to escape when facing hostile armored divisions, whereas armored infantry has the chance to outrun enemy tanks if and when endangered by a too powerful armored thrust.

WAIT A WHILE!

By MAUREEN DALY

"I REALIZE that it may sound queer, but I wonder if you could tell me how to 'get that man'? I'm writing for lots of other girls who, like myself, have made the terrible mistake of shutting the gate (and locking it, too) on the boy friend before she finds a 'fill-in' to take his place. I did just that, and now I am left out in the cold. If you could, please include a tip or two on how to 'get a man' whom you see every day but who doesn't go to your school or know your friends. (I speak of a likely lad 'round our house who works at the neighborhood grocery.)"

That letter does pose a problem—not only to contact that particular butter-and-egg boy but to put the finger on any new prospect after the old standby has pulled out. If the girl who wrote draws straws to be the aggressor in making new friends—especially boys—a girl has to be careful to stick to middle ground.

To "get a man" there is really nothing she can do—but there are many things that she can't do. She has to keep her ladylike status at all costs. And no matter how the spirit moves her, she can't overdo it. Beware the "rings on my fingers, bells on my toes, all out to make the grade" approach. If you go gunning too hard the fellow will suspect your motives and run like a rabbit. Most fellows like to do their own picking and choosing.

As for the boy in the grocery store, that future friendship—and it sounds as if it might be a good thing—could easily be spoiled by overniceness. As a first step the girl, she who wrote the letter and asked the questions, can do almost nothing beyond a little careful conversation to promote the friendship. It will have to progress on a normal, natural basis. After all, you can't suddenly wax romantic in an atmosphere of laundry soaps, fresh asparagus, and ration books. If they have neither schools nor friends in common she will just have to make good with the smiling and put in a few promotional words when the opening comes.

But, again, if the friendship doesn't develop naturally and with enthusiasm on both sides, it won't work at all. For the best laid plans of mouses and men—especially of mouses—can become too obvious and spoil what might have been a good thing. If she's smart that girl with the boy on her mind won't invent trips to the store just to see him, making up things to buy—like three bars of dog soap or a quarter's worth of bulk rock salt. He will catch on fast.

All those unanswered notes in study hall won't help your case.

Not only with boys in the grocery business, but with all fellows, a girl's best chances for developing friendships and making dating contacts are in just being natural and letting the fellow make the first approaches. Of course she has a perfect right to make herself attractive and approachable. As long as she is on the beam the fellows will know where to find her.

No need to hash over the old rules about neatness and cleanliness, good sportsmanship and cordiality. Those are the fundamentals. But for this out and out business of "getting that man" here's one important tip to remember: Don't let him know that you are out to get him. Fellows scare easily. Fellows like what is just a little difficult to get, and they shy away when they sense that a girl is out to get them.

A girl should be cautious for other reasons. She can't be too smooth or too much in demand if she can take time out for man hunting. If she has time to hang around drug stores and school lockers, write innumerable unanswered notes in study hall, and other common methods of male pursuit, she can't have a very active love life, a very crowded dating schedule, and her phone can't be making with the loud jingles at home. Just can't be. And a boy is likely to beat it down to a thin pulp to deduce that if other fellows don't want her, why should he?

And if a fellow sees a girl "around" too much—not on a date, not headed anywhere, not doing anything but just being "around"—he will get tired of just looking at her even before he thinks of asking for a date. Girl should avoid that "waiting" look.

So don't let them know you are looking. Just make yourself as attractive, as interesting, and yet as unconcerned as possible. They will come your way—but fast! So why worry about getting that man? Why try to rush things? After all, smoothness, you're on the ball yourself—why not just let him worry about getting you? Besides, it's more fun that way.

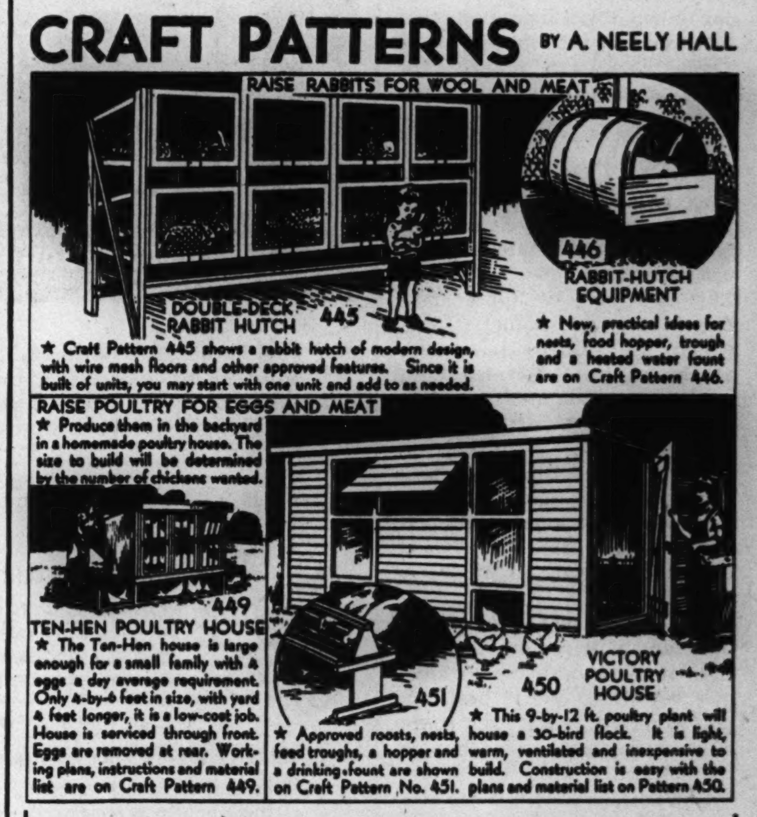
CRAFT PATTERNS BY A. NEELY HALL



★ Craft Pattern 445 shows a rabbit hutch of modern design, with wire mesh floors and other approved features. Since it is built of units, you may start with one unit and add to as needed.

★ New, practical ideas for nests, food hopper, trough and a heated water fount are on Craft Pattern 446.

★ Produce them in the backyard in a homemade poultry house. The size to build will be determined by the number of chickens wanted.

★ The Ten-Hen house is large enough for a small family with 4 eggs a day average requirement. Only 4-by-6 feet in size, with yard 4 feet longer, it is a low-cost job. House is serviced through front. Eggs are removed at rear. Working plans, instructions and material list are on Craft Pattern 449.

★ This 9-by-12 ft. poultry plant will house a 30-bird flock. It is light, warm, ventilated and inexpensive to build. Construction is easy with the plans and material list on Pattern 450.

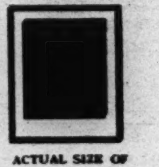
Parker Quink makes every word readable!

REMEMBER how that kid could eat? Well, his appetite's grown since you saw him last. But he'd pass up the best chow in the world—even give grandma's turkey and fixin's the go-by—just to get a cheery letter from you at home!

Our Government knows that. So it urges you to write and write often to friends in the service. Second only to food in importance, good letters help to make good fighters.

But more than that—the Government is now providing a way to get your mail through faster, more safely to your lad overseas. It's a system that telescopes days into hours—weeks into days—and gives your letters priority over everything except official communications. It's called V-Mail!

MAKE SURE YOUR V-MAIL IS READABLE! Use new Parker "Micro-film Black" Quink. It writes clean, sharp strokes with no feather edges. Intensely black, it photographs perfectly. How important this is becomes apparent from a glance at the size to which every V-Mail letter must be reduced.



ACTUAL SIZE OF V-MAIL FILM

Parker Quink comes in 7 permanent colors: Micro-film Black, Blue-Black, Royal Blue, Green, Violet, Brown, Red. There are 2 washable colors: Black, Blue. Prices: 15¢, 25¢ and up. The Parker Pen Company, Janesville, Wisconsin, and Toronto, Canada.

Speed your overseas letters by V-Mail! Official V-Mail forms are available at any stationery counter. You write your message on one of these, fill in the complete address, put on a stamp and drop it in any letter box.

Your letter is photographed onto micro-film, about 1/20 the size you wrote it. This film is then whisked safely overseas, usually by plane. A print about 1/4 the size of your original letter is made upon arrival and delivered to your boy.

Address V-Mail with name, rank, serial number, organization, Army or Navy Post Office or Marine unit number. Example: Pvt. William D. Roe, #678924, Company F, 167th Infantry, APO 810, c/o Postmaster, New York, New York.

AS A WARTIME MEASURE—for all your regular mail, write with Parker Quink. For it is the only brand of ink containing solv-x.

Fountain pens today are rationed in production. Repair parts are increasingly scarce. The pen that fails now may never write again.

Solv-x protects metal and rubber against the corrosion and deterioration which always come when highly acid inks are used. It ends clogging and gumming . . . cleans your pen as it writes.

PIN-UP STUDIES

● Evelyn Keyes was born at Port Arthur, Tex., reared at Atlanta, Ga.; studied piano and dancing; danced in night clubs; journeyed to Hollywood in 1937 in quest of a career; was introduced by a studio writer to Cecil B. De Mille, and that director put her under contract. She made her screen debut in "The Buccaneer;" recently was seen in "The Desperadoes." She is 5 feet 4 inches tall; weighs 115 pounds; has blonde hair and brown eyes.

● Jean Rogers was born at Belmont, Mass., attended grade and high schools in that Boston suburb. Upon the advice of a movie talent scout, she entered a Boston theater beauty contest. And won. And soon was on route to Hollywood. At once she was cast in "Eight Girls in a Boat"; since, she has appeared in some 30 pictures. She is 5 feet 5 inches tall; weighs 118 pounds; has light brown hair and blue eyes.

BILL'S ON THE ROPES

1 Poor Bill! He really wants to do his best on that tank assembly line. But he's been trying so hard that he barely takes time enough to eat. And when he does eat, he pays no attention to his food. His meals have been unbalanced. He hasn't been getting enough "bulk." And that has led—as it often does—to that common complaint, constipation.

PURGES DON'T HELP HIM

2 Bill has tried to do something about his condition. He's bought a whole medicine-cabinet full of cathartics—from mild to powerful. But they have only helped him temporarily. That's because no medicinal laxative gets at the cause of such constipation—lack of "bulk." However, there's a swell-tasting breakfast cereal that, eaten regularly, does!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

ALL-BRAN TO THE RESCUE

3 If Bill would just make a practice of eating tasty, delicious KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily and drinking plenty of water, he'd say good-bye to bad-tasting laxatives. Because eating ALL-BRAN regularly gets at and corrects the cause of such constipation. It's a grand breakfast cereal—swell to eat at any time. If you're in Bill's shoes, be sure to try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN — and see if it doesn't help you!

GREAT TRIUMPHS OF MEDICAL HISTORY...

How the Father of Modern Surgery snatched a little boy from Death— and paved the way for Men in White to save the lives of millions

"GLASGOW, SCOTLAND, August 12, 1865 — Early this morning James Greenlees, aged 11, in an attempt to escape a runaway, lost his footing on the slippery cobbles, and falling beneath a wheel, suffered a compound fracture of the leg."

Imagine the stark terror that gleamed in Wee Jaimie's eyes, when the lad was carried through a hospital door and laid on a table . . . when he saw through his tears the hand of a surgeon point to that gaping wound in his leg . . and heard strange whispers about saving him from "hordes of invading germs."

Even a child of Jaimie's age had heard tales of the hideous toll demanded by Death, among people with open wounds and cuts who faced a surgeon's knife. In some of the greatest hospitals, 6 of every 10 patients who underwent operations took the road to the burial ground instead of the Road to Home.

What on earth was that mysterious "something" which sneaked into bodies and poisoned the blood? Thousands of anxious surgeons were vainly asking the question. And, in August 1865, one of them gave the answer. A man named Joseph Lister . . . the surgeon Wee Jaimie heard whispering "hordes of invading germs!"

This was the man who pinned the guilt on murderous germs . . . and showed that sterilizing wounds and hands and instruments would doom those germs to defeat. This was the man—LORD LISTER—who saved the life of Wee Jaimie, and who paved the way for Men in White to save the lives of millions!

1898_*RELIEF* of pain...

1898—just 33 years after Lord Lister pioneered antiseptic surgery—is famous for another triumph in the war against suffering and pain. For a group of brilliant scientists discovered a relief from headaches, painful discomforts of colds, and muscular aches and pains . . . maladies which cause even more suffering and more loss of time than do all the serious diseases combined. They discovered Aspirin.

Whenever men of medicine fight suffering and pain, Bayer Aspirin is trusted not just for dependability, but for the rapid relief it brings. So for relief that's reliable and also swift, ask for Bayer Aspirin by its full name. And be sure the tablets you buy are stamped "BAYER"—the famous name in Aspirin.

BAYER

FOR THE SPEEDY RELIEF OF HEADACHES

The next time that a headache comes, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a little water. Relief starts almost instantly. Economical to use. Try Bayer Aspirin, also, for the speedy relief of muscular, neuralgic and neuritic aches and pains.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

In 2 to 3 seconds after a Bayer Aspirin Tablet touches water, it is disintegrated and ready to start work. That's what happens in your stomach when you take Bayer Aspirin.

Elbert K. Fretwell
Chief Scout Executive

2. BE A HERO ON THE HOME-FRONT! IN 1943 ONE MILLION BOY SCOUTS WILL GIVE 100 MILLION HOURS TO FARM WORK. YOU'LL WANT TO DO YOUR SHARE! YOU'LL NOT ONLY KEEP IN TRIM, BUT YOU'LL HAVE FUN WHILE YOU'RE MAKING MONEY.

Years of association with the farmers of America have given us a sympathetic understanding of the problems which face the men who grow the foodstuffs for our nation. Now, when the greatest demands in history are being made on the farmer, he is faced with an acute labor shortage. We of H. J. Heinz Company feel that the character and leadership building program of the Boy Scouts of America has taught the boys to "be prepared." And now with the Scout Crop Corps Program, they are excellently equipped to help the farmer and the nation in this crisis. The local Boy Scout headquarters is ready to help your boy join a Troop or help you get a Troop started in your neighborhood. We sincerely hope that you mothers and fathers of teen-age boys will want them to become Scouts—and serve America. This is the way to good citizenship and a strong nation.

TEENIE WEENIE LAUNDRY
FOLD HERE
FOLD HERE

THE TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THAT MOUSE AGAIN

YES, thieves had been prowling beneath the rosebush where the Teenie Weenie village stands. None of the Teenie Weenies had seen the thieves but they kept missing various things and the little people very well knew that those things did not disappear without help. This had been going on for some weeks. too. Gogo had lost a perfectly fine sweater. He had been splitting a lead pencil into stove wood for the Cook, and when he grew warm with the exercise he stripped off his sweater and laid it on a clothespin which the little people had dragged in for firewood. Gogo had left the sweater there all night and in the morning it was gone.

Some one had tampered with the kitchen window and the Teenie Weenie garbage can had been upset on another night. The prowler always came at night when the Teenie Weenies were asleep. Several nights some of the little people sat up and watched for the thief but they never saw him. They did find foot tracks on a few occasions and they looked suspiciously like Ginky's tracks. It was only natural that the Teenie Weenies should suspect Ginky, for he was a very shady character. The respectable mice would have nothing to do with him, for it had been said that he often prowled in big folks' houses where he brazenly gnawed into packages of breakfast food and into cracker boxes.

"It's too bad that Ginky can't behave himself," said the General one morning after the little people discovered that the lock on the smokehouse, where the Teenie Weenie supply of smoked frog hams were kept, had been tampered with. "Well, we will just have to be careful and keep things well locked," the General warned.

The thief continued his prowling during the nights but he wasn't bold enough to come around during the daytime and that was some satisfaction to the Teenie Weenies until the day he broke into the laundry.

It was a warm, lazy afternoon under the rosebush. A few of the Teenie Weenies were working in the Teenie Weenie garden. The General was taking a nap, the Cook was preparing supper, the Teenie Weenie women were sewing in the cool of the shoehouse sitting room and the village seemed quite deserted. The Chinaman finished his ironing, packed the tiny bed sheets and pillowcases into an acorn basket and set off to deliver them at the shoehouse. He gossiped some with the Cook and then started back to the old teapot where he lived and did the Teenie Weenie laundry work.

When he arrived at the teapot he noticed that the cover to the thimble, where he kept his garbage, was lying on the ground and that some of the garbage was scattered about. Then he saw that the door was partly open and that looked suspicious, for Teenie Weenies are very careful to shut their tiny doors during the warm weather in order to keep out prowling ants and caterpillars. The Chinaman quietly peered thru the door and, to his astonishment, he saw Ginky.

Grabbing the handle the Chinaman slammed the door shut, and bracing his feet against the sill, he began to scream for help at the top of his voice. Ginky was frightened by the Chinaman's screams and he tried to make his escape thru a window. He smashed out several panes of glass but he soon found that he couldn't get out that way. The only other way he could possibly escape was thru the teapot spout which was used as a chimney to carry off the smoke from the Chinaman's little laundry stove. Ginky kicked over the stove, yanked out the stovepipe and wiggled up the spout. Teenie Weenies were running toward the teapot from all directions when the mouse peered out of the top of the chimney. He wiggled free and jumped to the ground just in time to make his escape.

Except for the broken window glass and the upset stove there was very little damage done. The Teenie Weenies would have liked to have captured Ginky, but they all knew that he had been very badly scared by his narrow escape and that would probably keep him away.

① I HAD THE MOON, THE MOOD AND THE MOMENT . . . but no gal! When I took off my cap, the gals took off. And no wonder! My hair was dry . . . wild . . . woolly, and loose dandruff didn't help!

Vaseline HAIR TONIC

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

EASY DOES IT: For daily use . . . shake a few drops of 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic on your comb or rub it on your scalp. Simple . . . yet it keeps your hair well-groomed every minute of the day . . . and it checks Dry Scalp and loose dandruff by supplementing the natural scalp oils! Then before shampooing, massage your scalp vigorously with 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic—and rub a little on afterwards. The fact is . . . for double care, both scalp and hair, you can't beat 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic. The reason: It's different because it contains no drying ingredients!

CATHOLIC SENIORS LOOK TO FUTURE

Yanks of City Form Helpful Group.

Boasting a membership now well over 300, the "Chicagoans in the ETO," an organization which cuts thru all ranks, services and races to unite Chicagoans now in the European Theater of Operations, is continously receiving more applications from overseas service men from all parts of the city.

"You have given the men a bit of assurance in one of the major things they have in their minds," one enlisted man declared after their first meeting in London. Lt. Col. Harry J. Dooley of 2000 Lincoln Park West, temporary chairman, had suggested the organization should not only serve to gather together Chicagoans in the United Kingdom, but should continue to function after the war as an aid to readjusting to civilian life.

Evanston Colonel Speaks.

Col. Norman A. Ryan, 901 Maple avenue, Evanston, another serving in England, who also spoke to the members, reinterated Col. Dooley's pledge that "we feel duty bound to help one another," and added, "We are going to be better able to get back and make a stronger amalgamation in the future than we did in the last war."

Plans for a projected broadcast of one of the meetings from the London headquarters of the club at the Mostyn Red Cross club, to Chicago are being made. The broadcast is to include a reply from the men's families and friends here. Mayor Kelly has already cabled them that the utmost support will be given the broadcast here.

Two Brothers Charter Members.

Among the original members are two brothers, Thomas J. Garrity, 26, of the navy, and Sergt. Joseph P. Garrity, 28, of the army, of 4012 North Hermitage avenue, who joined the club when they met for the first time since joining the services. "It's almost like home, with Chicago papers available and the names of Chicago streets and places of amusement written on the walls," they wrote their mother, Mrs. Patrick Garrity.

Other officers elected at the first meeting are Maj. Edward Chayes, of the Webster hotel, 2150 Lincoln Park West, temporary secretary, and Sergt. Richard J. Langford, of 1022 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, temporary vice president.

Once the club is fully organized, other branches of "Chicagoans in the ETO" are planned for various points in the United Kingdom, probably in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Bristol.

CLASSES PICK FAVORITES FOR TRIBUNE HONOR

Interviews Reveal Achievements.

BY IRENE PONTO.

The whirl of commencement preparations—speeches, costumes, breakfasts, parties— is upon seniors of southwest side Catholic high schools.

Future plans loom largely upon the horizon. For the boys it generally adds up to induction into service, and for the girls preparation for careers in nursing, laboratory work, business, or teaching.

From a group of 10 outstanding graduates in each of the 11 graduating classes the seniors have selected one student for citation by THE TRIBUNE. The pictures of these young people are printed today, together with interviews which span their high school careers and hopes of the future.

ST. CASIMIR

By popular vote of St. Casimir High school students, Mary Goeppner of 1351 West 68th street has been chosen Tribune honor candidate, and previous to that—"Miss Typical American Girl," "Miss Correct English," and "Lady of the Crown." Mary, who has a four year record of perfect attendance, will receive two gold medals at the graduation exercises tomorrow. The honor student has served as president of the Latin club for two years and has been a contestant for the same length of time in the national contest sponsored by the Association for the Promotion of Latin. She also has received honorable mention for an article submitted this year to Queen's Work. Mary was sodality secretary this year and junior class secretary last year. She wants to teach and to continue her hobby of collecting greeting card verses.

ST. RITA

John Tarpey, 6500 South Bishop street, rolled up an impressive list of honors at St. Rita High school, from which he was graduated Friday. John was salutatorian, editor of the Ritan for a period, and on the junior and senior prom committees. At the Friday exercises he read "The Story of Democracy," a silver medal paper he composed for the annual oratorical contest. Sports editor of the Ritan during his junior year, he also found time to be secretary of the camera club, and to play football and baseball. This year he was a photographer for the yearbook. John will be sworn into naval aviation forces shortly.

URGE GARDENERS TO FLAY PESTS THRUOUT SEASON

BY BEN MARKLAND.

If the gardener's Utopia ever is found, it's certain there will be no beetles or cabbage worms or aphis therein. Until that time, however, gardeners will keep their spray guns and dusters in a handy place.

Novice gardeners often are confused and misled on the subject of garden insects and insecticides. "Homemade cures" such as gasoline sprays and medicine cabinet disinfectants, are mistakenly recommended to novices who don't believe it's necessary to use the standard insecticides. The confusion and damage resulting from such practices should be avoided this year.

Keeps Insecticide Available.

Ordinarily the insecticide problem is a simple one. The gardener on the Tribune farm, for example, has available at all times a commercially manufactured insecticide which effectively defeats more than 25 of the most common garden pests. More than three-fourths of all the troublesome insects in a small vegetble and flower garden can be destroyed by this one spray, the active ingredients of which are pyrethrum [one per cent], rotenone [1 per cent] and other derris products.

In general, there are two types of garden insects—those which chew and eat parts of the plant and those which suck the plant juices. To destroy most chewing insects it is necessary to use either rotenone or a poisonous material such as arsenate of lead or paris green. Sucking insects can be destroyed by contact poisons such as rotenone, pyrethrum, or nicotine sulphate.

Double Feature Spray.

The general duty spray used by the farm gardener has two advantages. One is that it contains both rotenone and pyrethrum and therefore kills most of the chewing and sucking insects. The other advantage is that it is nonpoisonous and therefore can be used on vegetables until harvest time.

The cabbage worm, which affects all members of the cabbage family, is a persistent pest in Chicagoland gardens. The general purpose spray which contains pyrethrum and rotenone will destroy this enemy.

Garden Enemies

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, June 7.

Gardeners living in suburban sections or where space is at hand should make another sowing of sweet corn, cucumbers, and cantaloupe to provide a continuous supply. Late cabbage can go in up to July 15.

Tuesday, June 8.

Don't allow weeds to get a start, for they consume plant food in the soil, shade desirable plants, and use soil moisture for their own needs, resulting in poorer vegetables and flowers.

Hoe between rows and practice hand weeding to disturb growing plants as little as possible. Destroy all weeds growing in nearby plots, if the garden is in a sparsely settled community, for weeds are the breeding places of innumerable insects. Cut out weeds along the rear lot line.

Wednesday, June 9.

In lieu of watering, cultivate. Cultivation serves two important purposes: It kills weeds and stirs the soil. Cultivation begins as soon as possible and may consist, at first, of simply raking between the rows to loosen the small weeds.

Thursday, June 10.

Plant onion sets as long as they can be obtained from supply houses. Seedling onions, such as the Bermuda, can also be planted, if obtainable. They attain a large size and are most desirable for slicing.

Friday, June 11.

Thin out all plants, whether flowers or vegetables, to give space for development. Why not plan now for indoor window boxes? Enjoy a few pansies next winter by sowing seeds at this time.

Saturday, June 12.

Keep all vines properly tied in place, using soft yarn, strips of cloth, binding twine, or other material. The stems should not be tied so tightly that they are injured.

U. OF C. ALUMNI SCHOOL TO MEET DURING REUNION

25th anniversary at the Quadrangle club Friday evening. Saturday noon at the annual alumnae breakfast in Ida Noyes hall, Lt. Comdr. Dorothy Strattion, '24, director of the SPARs, and Gertrude B. Smith, chairman of the department of Greek, will be speakers.

In the alumni assembly Saturday afternoon, Harold J. Gordon, chairman of the directors of the Alumni foundation, will present the 1943 alumni gift. At this time also, President Robert M. Hutchins will report on the state of the university and alumni medals and citations will be awarded to outstanding alumni.

Service Men at Sing.

Saturday night at the 33d annual university sing, army and navy units in training at the university will join the fraternity groups. Because most of the fraternities will be represented only by a score or so of participants, instead of the hundreds of other years, due to the war, the groups will not march into Hutchinson court, but will be seated in the Quadrangles.

There would be approximately 17,000 alumni in the Chicago district in normal times, but at least 1,500 of the local group are in service.

Service groups which will participate in the sing are the navy training schools, commanded by Lt. Comdr. M. B. Lowe; the army air forces meteorology cadets, commanded by Maj. W. H. Starbuck, and the army specialized training unit, commanded by Col. E. V. Smith.

CITIZENS' SHOW PUTS SPOTLIGHT ON ST. IGNATIUS

Oldest Catholic High to Be Honored.

The 104th Citizens of Tomorrow program will be broadcast over W-G-N at 1 o'clock this afternoon with St. Ignatius, the oldest Catholic high school in Chicago, the honored school.

Among the listeners will be the school's graduates and their parents at the annual senior breakfast in Damen hall, 1080 Roosevelt road. The breakfast program will be interrupted to hear the broadcast recording of selections by the school's glee club and talks by the Rev. Laurence M. Barry, S. J., school principal, and Eugene Sweeney, 5120 Fulton street, honor roll student.

Sweeney Top Student.

Sweeney, who will graduate with his class Thursday night, also will talk at the breakfast and read the class poem. He was selected by his class to represent the seniors in an interview with THE TRIBUNE which together with his picture appears in today's west side metropolitan section.

In his radio talk Father Barry, who also will preside at the breakfast, will delve briefly into the history of the school. He will tell how the school was founded 74 years ago on Roosevelt road in "the valley, a thriving new community just west of the loop." He will explain the significance of the seven perpetually burning candles in the church which the late Father Damen vowed always to keep burning in thanksgiving when the church and its school were saved from the Chicago fire in 1871 by a shift in the wind.

First in City.

The school, the first of its kind in the city, was founded by Father Damen who came to Chicago in 1857 to lay the foundation for the Holy Family parish. Twelve years later he erected the school and college. The college later was moved to the north side and renamed Loyola university. The high school which has remained on its original site has approximately 800 students, drawing them from 150 different parishes.

The second honor student whose name will be added to the roll along with Sweeney's, will be Charles George of the Union City High school in Union City, Mich. He will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of the Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies.

THE BUSINESS MEN OF ENGLEWOOD

Announce

OUR STORES WILL CLOSE TUESDAY NIGHTS

During June, July and August

We Will Continue to Remain Open Thursday and Saturday Evenings

In co-operation with National Conservation and to do our part during the war emergency, all Englewood stores listed below will discontinue the practice of staying open on Tuesday Nights during June, July and August. We will continue to serve our evening customers on Thursday and Saturday Evenings.

This move was made for a number of reasons and we know our loyal friends will patriotically welcome this chance to assist the war effort at such little inconvenience. First, eliminating this extra shopping night will help conserve vitally needed light, power, fuel and transportation—save it to better serve our fighting men.

Second, the armed forces have taken a lot of our employes. Those remaining are working doubly hard. They need an extra few hours of rest. They need the time for Civilian Defense, for Victory Gardening and for the many other wartime activities we all must do.

So Tuesday Evenings are no longer shopping nights in these Englewood stores during June, July and August. In the meantime, every one of us is featuring this slogan—

How to guard your
during food rationing

From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix ¾ glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy, fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime not only aids nature in consuming excess fat, but increases energy at the same time. You lose fat naturally; look and feel better. Don't take chances on gaining weight during food rationing. Get genuine Welch's Grape Juice today, and follow this verified way to lose weight. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N.Y. *8 oz. glass.

How To Save Ration Points

Welch's Grape Juice is richer in energy value than the 4 leading fruit juices. It is so rich, it can be diluted with ½ water and still taste delicious. When served this way, it takes less ration points than any of 4 leading fruit or vegetable juices. Serve Welch's regularly and save ration points.

DAYTIME RADIO FANS ASK FOR MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Women who listen to radio in the daytime hours want something new in air fare. That is the conclusion of the Blue network following an analysis of a nation-wide survey lately concluded. The same feeling is reflected in a brochure recently released bearing the title "Daytime Serials and Iowa Women." This was prepared by Leda P. Summers in coöperation with the office of radio research of Columbia university and published by WHO, Des Moines.

Some 5,000 housewives in 77 cities and towns and many in farm communities were questioned in the network poll. What they had to say wasn't very comforting to the advocates of soup and soap operas. For one thing the housewives declared there are altogether too many serials. Some 50 per cent of all network time is said to be devoted to such dramas.

53 Per Cent Hear Serials.

Only 53 per cent of the housewives polled admitted to listening to any of them. Of these 36 per cent said there were too many on the air. Twenty per cent argued that there are too few serious music programs; 12 that there is too little popular music in the daytime, and 10 per cent that there is too much of the latter.

Of the daytime radio families 81 per cent follow the newscasts; 49 per cent popular music, and 32 per cent serious music.

One Per Cent Wants More.

Dissatisfaction with current daytime radio fare is also indicated by the fact that only 28 per cent of the homes polled use their radios during daytime as compared to around 40 at night.

Of 5,324 women polled in the tall corn state some 52.2 per cent said they were nonserial listeners. [This cross-checks well with the other survey.] Of the serial fans 10.3 per cent listen to seven or more and 21.5 from 3 to 6 and 16 per cent one or two. And 40.8 per cent think the soap operas help them solve their personal problems.

Incidentally, 1 per cent of those in the Blue poll said there were not enough serials on the air. And at last count there were about 60!

MORGAN PARK ACADEMY PLANS JOINT CEREMONY

Commencement, School Anniversary Sunday.

The annual commencement exercises of Morgan Park Military academy and the 70th anniversary of the school will be observed in joint ceremonies next Sunday. The anniversary dinner will be held at 12:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon, following the registration of alumni an hour earlier. The commencement ceremony will start at 4 o'clock.

At 3:30 o'clock, six trees will be planted in Memorial grove for alumni lost in World War II. Thus far, the academy has sent more than 400 of its graduates into military duty. A dress parade of the cadet corps, reviewed by alumni, will follow on Abells field.

Col. Mellum to Speak.

Col. Horace J. Mellum, '92 will deliver the commencement address on the gymnasium campus, on "Youth, the Hope of America's Future." The ceremony will conclude with a farewell formation at the flag pole of Jones bowl.

Today the awards parade will be staged at 2:30 o'clock on Abells field. The Chicago Tribune medal and other military awards will be awarded to cadets who have rendered significant military service. The baccalaureate service will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Morgan Park Baptist church, with Dr. William S. Abernethy, former pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, Washington, D. C., and now interim pastor for the Morgan Park Baptist church, delivering the sermon. Col. Haydn E. Jones will preside.

The 25th anniversary of Capt. Herman Mayhew, principal, will coincide with the lower school's closing exercises at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening in alumni hall. The graduation exercises of the junior school are set for 2 o'clock, followed by a dress parade at 3 o'clock.

Class Day Program.

Those attending class day on Saturday will witness a guardian installation and presentation of emblems, honors, and awards at 10 o'clock in the morning on the gymnasium campus, a review of the cadet corps by the graduating class at 1:30 o'clock on Abells field, and class day exercises at 2:30 o'clock. Highlighting the day's events will be the senior prom to be held at 8:30 o'clock.

School officials and alumni anticipate that the anniversary fund will reach $200,000 by next Sunday, the sum necessary for the construction of Victory hall, a building to include a new library, study hall, and classrooms. The complete fund goal is $500,000. The balance of the anniversary fund is intended for a new gymnasium and swimming pool, according to Fred Booth, 10034 Longwood drive, fund director.

CATHOLIC SENIOR STARS TELL PLANS

Yanks of City Form Helpful Group.

Boasting a membership now well over 300, the "Chicagoans in the ETO," an organization which cuts thru all ranks, services and races to unite Chicagoans now in the European Theater of Operations, is continously receiving more applications from overseas service men from all parts of the city.

"You have given the men a bit of assurance in one of the major things they have in their minds," one enlisted man declared after their first meeting in London. Lt. Col. Harry J. Dooley of 2000 Lincoln Park West, temporary chairman, had suggested the organization should not only serve to gather together Chicagoans in the United Kingdom, but should continue to function after the war as an aid to readjusting to civilian life.

Evanston Colonel Speaks.

Col. Norman A. Ryan, 901 Maple avenue, Evanston, another serving in England, who also spoke to the members, reinterated Col. Dooley's pledge that "we feel duty bound to help one another," and added, "We are going to be better able to get back and make a stronger amalgamation in the future than we did in the last war."

Plans for a projected broadcast of one of the meetings from the London headquarters of the club at the Mostyn Red Cross club, to Chicago are being made. The broadcast is to include a reply from the men's families and friends here. Mayor Kelly has already cabled them that the utmost support will be given the broadcast here.

Two Brothers Charter Members.

Among the original members are two brothers, Thomas J. Garrity, 26, of the navy, and Sergt. Joseph P. Garrity, 28, of the army, of 4012 North Hermitage avenue, who joined the club when they met for the first time since joining the services. "It's almost like home, with Chicago papers available and the names of Chicago streets and places of amusement written on the walls," they wrote their mother, Mrs. Patrick Garrity.

Other officers elected at the first meeting are Maj. Edward Chayes, of the Webster hotel, 2150 Lincoln Park West, temporary secretary, and Sergt. Richard J. Langford, of 1022 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, temporary vice president.

Once the club is fully organized, other branches of "Chicagoans in the ETO" are planned for various points in the United Kingdom, probably in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Bristol.

South Side Members.

Among the original members are Pvt. Elmer Chow, 2214 Wentworth avenue; Pvt. Felice Ferzoco, 10214 Yates avenue; Lt. Max H. Fink, 8046 Woodlawn avenue; Corp. Joseph J. THEY'LL WORK TO FIT WORLD WITHOUT WAR

Seven Top Students Interviewed.

High school graduates of 1943 are putting emphasis on scholarship with a view to establishing their place in a stable world, devoid of the chaos of war. Such is the impression given by seniors in seven south side Catholic high schools who were interviewed by the Tribune last week.

The two boys among the seven honor students chosen by their classmates from a list of representative students named by the high school faculties are both planning to continue their education until they are called to war. This is in order, they explained, to have something definite to complete when they return to a peaceful world. Girls also will continue schooling. The interviews follow:

DE LA SALLE

Thomas Lyons, 17 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lyons of 7545 Emerald avenue, has been president of his class all four years at De La Salle High school, 3455 Wabash avenue. Interested in becoming a certified public accountant, Lyons will continue his studies at De Paul university, where he has won a scholarship on the basis of his four year honor roll record and approximate 91 average in high school.

Young Lyons has found time to participate in extra curricular activities, also. He was a member of the high school basketball team and managed the football team.

This summer Lyons, a member of a family of seven children, including three brothers under arms, will be employed by the board of education.

MOUNT CARMEL

Kenneth F. Stegman, valedictorian of the 1943 graduates of Mount Carmel High school, will take a short vacation from studying before he enters a pre-medical course at Notre Dame university as a part of the navy's V-12 program. Stegman, who appeared on W-G-N's Citizens of Tomorrow program when it featured Mount Carmel High school, expects his call to active duty about July 1. He is interested in all sports, and played basketball and baseball on intramural squads at high school as well as serving as editor in chief of the Mount Carmel newspaper and the annual.

Public speaking is another of his interests, evidenced in his activity on the debating team, and Stegman says he intends to "follow the medical profession interspersed with legal and journalistic outlets." He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Stegman, 7654 Rhodes avenue.

SS. PETER AND PAUL

Ambition to become a lawyer is spurring Margaret Hamilton, honor student at SS. Peter and Paul High school, to continue her education at Mundelein college, which she will attend on scholarship. Chosen one of the most popular girls at her school, Miss Hamilton, who names her favorite subjects as English, Latin and bookkeeping, is chairman of the literature committee of the Sodality and has written short plays and sketches to be presented by her classmates at various school functions.

SERGEANT SENDS PHOTO STORY OF HOLY LAND VISIT

Leslie Carr Also Has Views of Africa.

Sergt. Leslie T. Carr has kept his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Carr, 8139 Ellis avenue, up to date on his activities overseas by letter and job lots of snapshots of the historic spots he is seeing. The latest addition to the couple's collection is a series of pictures taken by their son on a seven day furlough which he spent in Palestine.

There, on the beach of the Dead sea, he is pictured with a Palestinian soldier who stands within a barbed wire enclosure guarding a pier which juts out into the historic body of water.

Thru the pictures the Carrs can share with their son views of historic Jerusalem, its old markets contrasted by broad streets lined with automobiles and its railroad station with the name of the city written in three languages, and historic sights nearby — the old city wall, the Church of the Nativity, the Mount of Olives, Rachael's tomb, and the rocky trail leading from the Garden of Gethsemane.

Also recorded in pictures is Sergt. Carr's meeting with Archbishop Spellman when the churchman visited North Africa. Based in Cairo with the United States army signal corps, Sergt. Carr has told his parents of getting his morning orange juice at a street bazaar where five oranges can be bought for one piastre—the equivalent of four cents.

Sergt. Carr is a graduate of St. Ignatius High school in Chicago, and entered the army a year and a half ago. He was sent overseas last October.

MORGAN PARK ACADEMY PLANS JOINT CEREMONY

Commencement, School Anniversary Sunday.

The annual commencement exercises of Morgan Park Military academy and the 70th anniversary of the school will be observed in joint ceremonies next Sunday. The anniversary dinner will be held at 12:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon, following the registration of alumni an hour earlier. The commencement ceremony will start at 4 o'clock.

At 3:30 o'clock, six trees will be planted in Memorial grove for alumni lost in World War II. Thus far, the academy has sent more than 400 of its graduates into military duty. A dress parade of the cadet corps, reviewed by alumni, will follow on Abells field.

Col. Mellum to Speak.

Col. Horace J. Mellum, '92 will deliver the commencement address on the gymnasium campus, on "Youth, the Hope of America's Future." The ceremony will conclude with a farewell formation at the flag pole of Jones bowl.

Today the awards parade will be staged at 2:30 o'clock on Abells field. The Chicago Tribune medal and other military awards will be awarded to cadets who have rendered significant military service. The baccalaureate service will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Morgan Park Baptist church, with Dr. William S. Abernethy, former pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, Washington, D. C., and now interim pastor for the Morgan Park Baptist church, delivering the sermon. Col. Haydn E. Jones will preside.

The 25th anniversary of Capt. Herman Mayhew, principal, will coincide with the lower school's closing exercises at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening in alumni hall. The graduation exercises of the junior school are set for 2 o'clock, followed by a dress parade at 3 o'clock.

Class Day Program.

Those attending class day on Saturday will witness a guardian installation and presentation of emblems, honors, and awards at 10 o'clock in the morning on the gymnasium campus, a review of the cadet corps by the graduating class at 1:30 o'clock on Abells field, and class day exercises at 2:30 o'clock. Highlighting the day's events will be the senior prom to be held at 8:30 o'clock.

School officials and alumni anticipate that the anniversary fund will reach $200,000 by next Sunday, the sum necessary for the construction of Victory hall, a building to include a new library, study hall, and classrooms. The complete fund goal is $500,000. The balance of the anniversary fund is intended for a new gymnasium and swimming pool, according to Fred Booth, 10034 Longwood drive, fund director. No construction will be possible until after the war, he said. The largest single contribution of $10,000 came from an alumnus, Booth stated.

Graduating Class Officers.

Classified Advertising Manager
The Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Dear Mr. Blend:

On October 1, 1942, we retained Miss Luella Canterbury, well known consulting psychologist and vocational analyst, and offered her services free to persons applying to us for a position. We decided to bear down heavily on the advertising in order that as many persons as possible might avail themselves of Miss Canterbury's wonderful advice and help.

At the same time we started keeping careful check of the advertising results, which follow:

Results Since October, 1942	Tribune	All Other Papers
Total Advertising Expenditure	$6,170.10	$477.99
Percentage spent	93.23%	6.77%
Number of Applicants Obtained	1480	17
Advertising Cost per Applicant	$4.16	$26.35
Percentage of Placements Made	35%	5.8%
Advertising Cost per Placement	$11.88	$447.99

When this business, now one of the largest personnel services in the city, was started 11 years ago, we immediately began advertising in the Tribune and have given the Tribune the bulk of our business ever since.

Needless to say, this study confirms our judgment of several years standing as to the relative pulling power for us of the several Chicago newspapers. And we intend, as in the past, to continue giving the Tribune the lion's share of our business.

Thanks again for your splendid cooperation.

Very truly yours,

CITIZENS SHOW PUTS SPOTLIGHT ON ST. IGNATIUS

City's Oldest Catholic High in W-G-N Program.

The 104th Citizens of Tomorrow program will be broadcast over W-G-N at 1 o'clock this afternoon with St. Ignatius, the oldest Catholic high school in Chicago, the honored school.

Among the listeners will be the school's graduates and their parents at the annual senior breakfast in Damen hall, 1080 Roosevelt road. The breakfast program will be interrupted to hear the broadcast recording of selections by the school's glee club and talks by the Rev. Laurence M. Barry, S. J., school principal, and Eugene Sweeney, 5120 Fulton street, honor roll student.

Sweeney Top Student.

Sweeney, who will graduate with his class Thursday night, also will talk at the breakfast and read the class poem. He was selected by his class to represent the seniors in an interview with THE TRIBUNE which together with his picture appears in today's west side metropolitan section.

In his radio talk Father Barry, who also will preside at the breakfast, will delve briefly into the history of the school. He will tell how the school was founded 74 years ago on Roosevelt road in "the valley, a thriving new community just west of the loop." He will explain the significance of the seven perpetually burning candles in the church which the late Father Damen vowed always to keep burning in thanksgiving when the church and its school were saved from the Chicago fire in 1871 by a shift in the wind.

First in City.

The school, the first of its kind in the city, was founded by Father Damen who came to Chicago in 1857 to lay the foundation for the Holy Family parish. Twelve years later he erected the school and college. The college later was moved to the north side and renamed Loyola university. The high school which has remained on its original site has approximately 800 students, drawing them from 150 different parishes.

The second honor student whose name will be added to the roll along with Sweeney's, will be Charles George of the Union City High school in Union City, Mich. He will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of the Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies.

Prominent Guests.

Guests at the recording, which was made recently in the school, included Carter H. Harrison, four times mayor of Chicago; Superior Judge Joseph A. Graber of Cook county; United States Attorney Albert J. Woll of the northern Illinois district; Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney; Eugene A. Clifford of the Chicago and North Western railroad; Willard M. Woll, president of St. Ignatius Alumni association; John K. Moore, chairman of the board of directors of the alumni association; John J. Kenealy, president of St. Ignatius Fathers' club, and Mrs. Isabel O'Connor, president of the St. Ignatius Mothers' club.

The Citizens of Tomorrow programs will end for the season next Sunday with a recorded program on Elgin academy. The recording will be made Wednesday afternoon in the W-G-N audience studio.

14 VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS TO GIVE 500 DIPLOMAS

Special Programs to Mark Anniversary.

Graduation exercises for more than 500 boys and girls in Chicago's 14 vocational center schools this month will mark the 30th anniversary of the founding of the vocational system in this city. Special anniversary commencement programs are planned, according to Norman D. Anderson, principal of the centers.

As part of the special programs, an anniversary luncheon for officials of the board of education and the teaching staff will be held Saturday at the Morrison hotel. Joseph J. O'Connell, one of the first vocational graduates and now assistant principal of the Hancock Vocational center, 4616 Princeton avenue, is chairman of the luncheon.

Establish New System.

Established in 1913 as branches of Lane, Crane, Tilden, and Flower High schools, the centers, then called prevocational schools, were intended to offer intensive industrial elementary courses to both boys and girls over 12 years old. In 1937 the board of education established the present system correlated under one principal. Since then the number of pupils and teachers has more than doubled, while the number of schools has increased to 14.

The vocational centers are: Brentano, for boys and girls, at 2723 North Fairfield avenue; Foster, coeducational, at 720 O'Brien street; Hammond Branch, for boys, at 2819 21st place; Hancock, for boys, 4616 Princeton avenue; Haugan, coeducational, 4540 North Hamlin avenue; Jenner, for boys, 1009 Cleveland avenue; Orr, coeducational, 1040 North Keeler avenue; Peabody, for girls, 1444 Augusta boulevard; Richards, for girls, 2535 Green street; Scanlan, coeducational, 11725 Perry avenue; Shoop, coeducational, 112th and Laflin streets; Talcott, for boys, 1840 Ohio street; and Taylor and O. A. Thorp, both coeducational.

Change to Laboratories.

According to Anderson, the greatest change in the vocational centers since their founding has been in the nature and increased number of shop offerings, the change from the traditional woodshop to laboratories of elementary industrial processes. The emphasis now, he pointed out, is not upon acquisition of skill or trade proficiency, by the student, but on "the development of understanding of modern industrial life, and of an over all knowledge of the various trade possibilities."

How to guard your Weight and Energy during food rationing

From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix ¾ glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy, fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime not only aids nature in consuming excess fat, but increases energy at the same time. You lose fat naturally; look and feel better. Don't take chances on gaining weight during food rationing. Get genuine Welch's Grape Juice today, and follow this verified way to lose weight. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N.Y. *8 oz. glass.

How To Save Ration Points

Welch's Grape Juice is richer in energy value than the 4 leading fruit juices. It is so rich, it can be diluted with ½ water and still taste delicious. When served this way, it takes less ration points than any of 4 leading fruit or vegetable juices. Serve Welch's regularly and save ration points.

DAYTIME RADIO FANS ASK FOR MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Women who listen to radio in the daytime hours want something new in air fare. That is the conclusion of the Blue network following an analysis of a nation-wide survey lately concluded. The same feeling is reflected in a brochure recently released bearing the title "Daytime Serials and Iowa Women." This was prepared by Leda P. Summers in coöperation with the office of radio research of Columbia university and published by WHO, Des Moines.

Some 5,000 housewives in 77 cities and towns and many in farm communities were questioned in the network poll. What they had to say wasn't very comforting to the advocates of soup and soap operas. For one thing the housewives declared there are altogether too many serials. Some 50 per cent of all network time is said to be devoted to such dramas. Seventy-nine per cent of network daytime sponsored hours are devoted to the serials.

53 Per Cent Hear Serials.

Only 53 per cent of the housewives polled admitted to listening to any of them. Of these 36 per cent said there were too many on the air. Twenty per cent argued that there are too few serious music programs; 12 that there is too little popular music in the daytime, and 10 per cent that there is too much of the latter.

Of the daytime radio families 81 per cent follow the newscasts; 49 per cent popular music, and 32 per cent serious music.

One Per Cent Wants More.

Dissatisfaction with current daytime radio fare is also indicated by the fact that only 28 per cent of the homes polled use their radios during daytime as compared to around 40 at night.

Of 5,324 women polled in the tall corn state some 52.2 per cent said they were nonserial listeners. [This cross-checks well with the other survey.] Of the serial fans 10.3 per cent listen to seven or more and 21.5 from 3 to 6 and 16 per cent one or two. And 40.8 per cent think the soap operas help them solve their personal problems.

Incidentally, 1 per cent of those in the Blue poll said there were not enough serials on the air. And at last count there were about 60!

This Week in the Garden

Monday, June 7.

Gardeners living in suburban sections or where space is at hand should make another sowing of sweet corn, cucumbers, and cantaloupe to provide a continuous supply. Late cabbage can go in up to July 15. Try a few sweet potatoes, which will grow rapidly now that warm weather is here. Tomatoes also may be planted.

Tuesday, June 8.

Don't allow weeds to get a start, for they consume plant food in the soil, shade desirable plants, and use soil moisture for their own needs, resulting in poorer vegetables and flowers.

Hoe between rows and practice hand weeding to disturb growing plants as little as possible. Destroy all weeds growing in nearby plots, if the garden is in a sparsely settled community, for weeds are the breeding places of innumerable insects. Cut out weeds along the rear lot line.

Wednesday, June 9.

In lieu of watering, cultivate. Cultivation serves two important purposes: It kills weeds and stirs the soil. Cultivation begins as soon as possible and may consist, at first, of simply raking between the rows to loosen the small weeds. Hoeing should be carefully done, to protect plant roots.

Thursday, June 10.

Plant onion sets as long as they can be obtained from supply houses. Seedling onions, such as the Bermuda, can also be planted, if obtainable. They attain a large size and are most desirable for slicing.

Resow or replant all vacant rows for a succession, and remember that it is best to sow a different crop in the row that has produced another.

Friday, June 11.

Thin out all plants, whether flowers or vegetables, to give space for development. Why not plan now for indoor window boxes? Enjoy a few pansies next winter by sowing seeds at this time.

Saturday, June 12.

Keep all vines properly tied in place, using soft yarn, strips of cloth, binding twine, or other material. The stems should not be tied so tightly that they are injured.

Iris may be transplanted after flowering. Peonies are best transplanted in September. There is still time to plant peppers for a good crop. Chinese cabbage may be planted up to Aug. 1.

[Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.]

URGE GARDENERS TO FLAY PESTS THRUOUT SEASON

BY BEN MARKLAND.

If the gardener's Utopia ever is found, it's certain there will be no beetles or cabbage worms or aphis therein. Until that time, however, gardeners will keep their spray guns and dusters in a handy place.

Novice gardeners often are confused and misled on the subject of garden insects and insecticides. "Homemade cures" such as gasoline sprays and medicine cabinet disinfectants, are mistakenly recommended to novices who don't believe it's necessary to use the standard insecticides. The confusion and damage resulting from such practices should be avoided this year.

Keeps Insecticide Available.

Ordinarily the insecticide problem is a simple one. The gardener on the Tribune farm, for example, has available at all times a commercially manufactured insecticide which effectively defeats more than 25 of the most common garden pests. More than three-fourths of all the troublesome insects in a small vegetble and flower garden can be destroyed by this one spray, the active ingredients of which are pyrethrum [one per cent], rotenone [1 per cent] and other derris products.

This spray is used in combating cabbage worms, potato beetles, bean beetles, and many other insects of both the sucking and chewing types. It is a liquid which is diluted with water before spraying.

In general, there are two types of garden insects—those which chew and eat parts of the plant and those which suck the plant juices. To destroy most chewing insects it is necessary to use either rotenone or a poisonous material such as arsenate of lead or paris green. Sucking insects can be destroyed by contact poisons such as rotenone, pyrethrum, or nicotine sulphate.

Double Feature Spray.

The general duty spray used by the farm gardener has two advantages. One is that it contains both rotenone and pyrethrum and therefore kills most of the chewing and sucking insects. The other advantage is that it is nonpoisonous and therefore can be used on vegetables until harvest time.

Miscellaneous garden insects which require specific treatment include the cutworm, aphis [or plant lice] and corn ear worm. The cutworm already has shown its work in some gardens by chewing off tomato plants and other vegetables at ground level. This insect can be destroyed by making a mash of one-half ounce of paris green, one-half pound of bran, and a half cup of lubricating oil or molasses. This mixture can be placed in small containers in the garden in the late afternoon, but never should be left where children or dogs can reach it.

Aphis, commonly called plant lice, may be noticed on cabbages, melon trops, peas, and potatoes. To destroy them, place a tablespoonful of nicotine sulphate dust and a pound of hydrated lime in a cheesecloth bag and shake this dust thru the bag over the affected plants.

Persistent Cabbage Pest.

The cabbage worm, which affects all members of the cabbage family, is a persistent pest in Chicagoland gardens. The general purpose spray which contains pyrethrum and rotenone will destroy this enemy.

The potato beetle may attack potatoes, eggplants and tomatoes, and should be dusted with one part of lead arsenate mixed with three parts of hydrated lime. The Mexican bean beetle, which affects only bean crops, can be combated with the all purpose spray.

Aid Doughnut Day.

Mrs. A. H. Lassman, 7047 Union avenue, and Mrs. Joel Collins, Seminole avenue, Palos Park, will act as "Doughnut Day Colonels" for the Salvation Army drive Tuesday.

Garden Enemies

SENIORS TO GIVE PLAY THIS WEEK AT SOUTH SHORE

The senior class of South Shore High school will present its class play, "Best Foot Forward," Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock at the school auditorium, 7625 Constance avenue.

The play, a recent Broadway success, is being produced under the direction of Miss Sara C. Niederman, drama teacher at the high school. All scenery for the production has been built and painted by South Shore students, headed by Bill Roberts, production manager, and Rosalyn Fein, stage manager. Jacqueline Volk was student director of the play.

PLAN FUN, MUSIC AT SOUTH SIDE SERVICE CENTER

A program of entertainment will be presented at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Training School Service Men's center at 8276 South Chicago avenue. Cliff Real, master of ceremonies; Lil Olden, singer; Russ Burr, pianist; Carol Abbott, Phil Dooley, Ollie Harris, and Frankie Rex will take part. Today's food for the service center, which normally serves 500 service men daily, will be provided and served by a group of Chicago women who formerly made their homes in Coles county.

Yanks of City Form Helpful Group.

Boasting a membership now well over 300, the "Chicagoans in the ETO," an organization which cuts thru all ranks, services and races to unite Chicagoans now in the European Theater of Operations, is continously receiving more applications from overseas service men from all parts of the city.

"You have given the men a bit of assurance in one of the major things they have in their minds," one enlisted man declared after their first meeting in London. Lt. Col. Harry J. Dooley of 2000 Lincoln Park West, temporary chairman, had suggested the organization should not only serve to gather together Chicagoans in the United Kingdom, but should continue to function after the war as an aid to readjusting to civilian life.

Evanston Colonel Speaks.

Col. Norman A. Ryan, 901 Maple avenue, Evanston, another serving in England, who also spoke to the members, reinterated Col. Dooley's pledge that "we feel duty bound to help one another," and added, "We are going to be better able to get back and make a stronger amalgamation in the future than we did in the last war."

Plans for a projected broadcast of one of the meetings from the London headquarters of the club at the Mostyn Red Cross club, to Chicago are being made. The broadcast is to include a reply from the men's families and friends here. Mayor Kelly has already cabled them that the utmost support will be given the broadcast here.

Two Brothers Charter Members.

Among the original members are two brothers, Thomas J. Garrity, 26, of the navy, and Sergt. Joseph P. Garrity, 28, of the army, of 4012 North Hermitage avenue, who joined the club when they met for the first time since joining the services. "It's almost like home, with Chicago papers available and the names of Chicago streets and places of amusement written on the walls," they wrote their mother, Mrs. Patrick Garrity.

Other officers elected at the first meeting are Maj. Edward Chayes, of the Webster hotel, 2150 Lincoln Park West, temporary secretary, and Sergt. Richard J. Langford, of 1022 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, temporary vice president.

Once the club is fully organized, other branches of "Chicagoans in the ETO" are planned for various points in the United Kingdom, probably in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Bristol.

FACE WARRING WORLD WITH REALISM, HOPE

NorthwestStudents Win Tribune Honor.

This year's high school graduates are holding their commencement at a time when the conflict of nation's shadows their future and inevitably modifies their plans. Most of the seniors, however, have a realistic attitude about what faces them after graduation. Judging by the comments of outstanding seniors of Catholic high schools who were interviewed by THE TRIBUNE, they aren't expecting a brave new world to blossom overnight with the end of the war.

They are hoping for a better society with more material and cultural advantages, but they know know they will have to work to achieve it. Some of the more scientifically inclined hope to take an active part in bringing about a more efficient society in the future.

HOLY FAMILY

Dolores Gapinski is one of those who would like to use her training to make the wheels of civilization run more smoothly. She is a senior at Holy Family academy and a chemistry major. After the war she hopes to aid in the conversion of industry to peace time production, and wants to help improve inventions already made. Plastics especially interest her, and she hopes to aid in extending their use and in working out new formulas that will make them even more useful than they already are.

To prepare herself for a scientific career, Dolores realizes that she must have more specialized training than she now possesses, so she is planning to matriculate at Northwestern university in the fall, where she will continue her studies in chemistry.

Dolores has not let her interest in science interfere with her other school activities. She is president of the senior class at Holy Family academy, and is a member of the History club, the Physics club, the Dramatics club, and the Glee club. For three years she studied dramatics and at one time was a member of the Jack and Jill players.

Aviation fascinates her, and she would like to see America become a nation of flyers. Next to chemistry, aeronautics is her favorite subject. She has made several model planes, and has spent many hours studying the theory of aerodynamics.

GOOD COUNSEL

Alice E. Cetnar, honor student at Good Counsel High school, is another June graduate who is interested in science. Her highest grades in high school have been in chemistry and biology. But since she likes dealing with people as much as she likes science, she has decided to team the two interests together and to become a nurse. She expects to begin her training in September at St. Elizabeth's hospital.

Alice plans to work during the summer to help defray some of the costs of her nursing education. Altho, as she says, she does not have the training that would help her to be a specialized war worker during vacation months, she does hope to find some kind of work that will enable her to aid in the war.

That Alice is popular with her classmates is shown by the fact that this year marked her third term in office as president of her class. She was also assistant editor of the year book, and was an active member of the Latin club and the Glee club. Music is her hobby, Chopin and Tchaikovsky being her favorite composers. In her spare time she likes to read fiction and biography.

ST. PATRICK'S ACADEMY

Jeanne Linser, elected outstanding senior by her classmates at St. Patrick's academy in Des Plaines, wants to be a teacher. This is because she believes that the key to permanent peace lies in the right kind of education. She plans to continue her training next year at St. Xavier's college, where she has been awarded an honor entrance scholarship.

Jeanne's favorite subject in high school was advanced algebra. In college she would like to become a scientific star-gazer because astronomy, of which she had just a taste in general science, fascinates her tremendously. Jeanne, an acknowledged leader in scholastic and social activities at St. Patrick's, is president of her class, a member of the school sodality, the girls' athletic association, and the glee club. She also is active in dramatics, and was assigned to one of the leading rôles in the senior play, "American Passport," produced recently by the senior class.

JOSEPHINUM

Another prospective teacher is Marie Merkl, who for the last four years has been an honor student at Josephinum High school. Marie is vice prefect of the school sodality, and clarinet leader in the student orchestra. Her two favorite subjects

14 VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS TO GIVE 500 DIPLOMAS

Graduation exercises for more than 500 boys and girls in Chicago's 14 vocational center schools this month will mark the 30th anniversary of the founding of the vocational system in this city. Special anniversary commencement programs are planned, according to Norman D. Anderson, principal of the centers.

As part of the special programs, an anniversary luncheon for officials of the board of education and the teaching staff will be held Saturday at the Morrison hotel. Joseph J. O'Connell, one of the first vocational graduates and now assistant principal of the Hancock Vocational center, 4616 Princeton avenue, is chairman of the luncheon.

The vocational centers are: Brentano, for boys and girls, at 2723 North Fairfield avenue; Foster, coeducational, at 720 O'Brien street; Hammond Branch, for boys, at 2819 21st place; Hancock, for boys, 4616 Princeton avenue; Haugan, coeducational, 4540 North Hamlin avenue; Jenner, for boys, 1009 Cleveland avenue; Orr, coeducational, 1040 North Keeler avenue; Peabody, for girls, 1444 Augusta boulevard; Richards, for girls, 2535 Green street; Scanlan, coeducational, 11725 Perry avenue; Shoop, coeducational, 112th and Laflin streets; Talcott, for boys, 1840 Ohio street; and Taylor and O. A. Thorp, both coeducational.

★ With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS ★

Aviation Cadet Daniel G. Houghton, 3643 North Hamilton avenue, has been nominated one of the six most outstanding cadets of class 43-F, now in training at Blackland army flying school, Waco, Tex. Cadet Houghton is a graduate of Roosevelt High school, where he played football and was captain of the swimming team. Before becoming a cadet in September, 1942, he was an insurance claim adjuster. He received his primary flight training at Brayton flying school, Cuero, Tex.

Daniel G. Houghton.

Two northwest side residents have recently been commissioned second lieutenants at the field artillery officer candidate school, Fort Sill, Oklahoma. They are Theron M. Berry, 6211 Warwick avenue, and Hillard F. Jasinski, 6485 North Newcastle avenue.

Edwin G. Short, 4208 North Sacramento avenue, has received his commission as second lieutenant at officers training school in Fargo, N. D. He has been assigned to duty at Fort Devens, Mass., as recorder for the army aviation cadet examining board.

Lt. Short is a graduate of Roosevelt High school and Wright Junior college. Before his induction into the army in March, 1942, he was assistant publicity director of the Chicago Stadium. Previous to that time he had been employed in the advertising department of THE TRIBUNE, and had also worked with Bob Elson in radio station W-G-N.

Daniel J. Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Sullivan, 4913 West Cortez street, Chicago, has received his wings and commission as second lieutenant in the army air forces advanced flying school at La Junta, Colo. Lt. Sullivan is a graduate of the Lewis Aeronautical school in Lockport. After being inducted, he was given his primary flight training at Visalia, Cal., and his basic training at Merced, Cal.

Lt. Sullivan.

Pvt. George F. Fett, 4043 School street, has been promoted to the rank of corporal in the 409th infantry regiment, a unit of the Cactus division at Camp Claiborne, Louisiana. He entered service last December.

Gordon C. Hayman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar C. Hayman, 4211 North Keeler avenue, was a member of the 14th class of aviation cadets to graduate from the new Columbus army flying school near Columbus, Miss., last week. He received the silver wings of a flying officer and was commissioned second lieutenant in the army air forces. Lt. Hayman entered pilot training last July. Before being assigned to the Columbus flying school he was given primary and basic training at Arcadia, Fla., and Bainbridge, Ga.

Lt. Hayman.

Capt. Melvin Mawrence of 2528 North California avenue has reported for duty at the army air base headquarters, Selfridge field, Michigan. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, where he received the bachelor of arts degree in 1939. Capt. Mawrence took citizen military training corps instruction while at the university. He has

AWARD LEGION MEDALS TO PARK RIDGE STUDENTS

American Legion medals were awarded recently to Ann Brodie and Robert Tolf of Lincoln Junior High school, Park Ridge, who were selected as the outstanding boy and girl of this year's graduating class. The medals were presented by Edwin O. Johnson of the Mel Tierney post of the American Legion at a program in the school auditorium dedicated to students who have been outstanding in scholarship and sportsmanship during the last year.

Robert Tolf.

At the same prorgam, retiring officers of the school's Junior Civic society were honored for their services during the present academic year, and new officers were installed for 1943-'44. The officers of the class of '43 were Robert Tolf, president; Marilyn Frey, vice president; Ann Brodie, recording secretary; George Butzow, corresponding secretary; Jack Gannon, treasurer, and Jim Yardley, sergeant at arms.

Zone Morale Warden.

CATHOLIC STAR SENIORS REVEAL FUTURE HOPES

are Latin and English, and she would eventually like to teach one or both subjects in high school.

As soon as school is out, Marie plans to get a vacation job. She feels qualified for office work, as she has already passed the civil service typing examination.

Marie hopes that once the victory is won, a long-range peace will be assured for the world. But she also is looking forward to a return of all the unessential but pleasant things like nylon hose and plenty of coffee which the war has made scarce. She is especially anxious for the day when grocers' shelves will be replenished with generous supplies of canned goods, because as a career woman she doesn't expect to have too much time to spend in the kitchen.

ST. CONSTANCE

Bernadette M. Figura, outstanding among the graduates at St. Constance High school, plans to get a job as a secretary immediately after commencement. She does not expect to forgo her interest in drawing and painting, however, and would like to go to night school to study commercial art. She especially likes to do portrait sketches, and has always dreamed of building a little studio for herself.

Bernadette ranks high in the graduating class at St. Constance, and she is a leader in extra-curricular activities as well. She is prefect of the sodality and editor of the school newspaper. Recently she played the lead in the senior dramatic production, "Nobody Must Know," and has made a number of public appearances with the glee club. During the last academic year Bernadette took a course in home nursing and liked it so well that she plans to supplement her secretarial work by serving as a nurse's aid after business hours.

WEBER

Frank Ksiazek, 1922 Erie street, the Weber High school representative thinks he'd like to join the navy, just to be different. Different, that is, from the rest of his family. Of his four brothers, one is in the army and another is in the marines. Frank has three sisters too, and thinks big families are most fun. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Ksiazek.

At Weber, Frank served as editor in chief of the year book, associate editor of the school newspaper, and president of the student council. He has been a member of the prom committee, of the glee club and the dramatic club, and has been on the honor roll. His extra curricular activities haven't left him much time for a personal hobby, but he does collect stamps, and now numbers his collection at several thousand.

If the war didn't come along, Frank would have tried to go on to school to take up physics and scientific research, with the aim of becoming a research scientist in some industry. But now it is the navy dead ahead—and if he's lucky enough to win a commission, he may stay there after the war is over.

NOTRE DAME

The fall term will probably see Mary Rud, 4325 Washington boulevard, enrolled at one of the Catholic colleges in the city. For Mary wants to be a teacher, either of primary grades or in a high school. Mary is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Rud. Her father is in the unemployment compensation division of the department of labor, in the Merchandise Mart.

Out at Notre Dame High school, Mary has been a class officer for the last three years. She has served on the board of directors of the student coöperative, and has been a member of the writers club. She was on the basketball team, and in the junior play. Sports are fun, Mary thinks, but she prefers the group games to swimming and tennis.

Mary reads a great deal—her favorites just now are biographies and historical novels. She has taken the Red Cross first aid class at school, and is proud of the fact that the home room groups at Notre Dame have purchased 17 jeeps thus far. The past several summers Mary has taught at the C. Y. O. summer schools in the parks, getting in some practice for her career.

ALVERNIA

Lorraine Hochstetter, 3604 North Tripp avenue, declares she has no claim on any special recognition, that she's "just normal." But her record at Alvernia High school shows that Lorraine is above the average. For four years she has been on the honor roll, for three years she has served as secretary to the Sodality. She has been a member of the student spiritual council, the glee club, the dramatics club, the newspaper staff, and C. I. S. C. A.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hochstetter, Lorraine has three brothers, one in the army air forces, and two sisters, one a graduate of Alvernia last year.

Lorraine's first and last love is secretarial work—just now she can do 100 words a minute in shorthand, and 55 words a minute in typing. She'd like to get a job in some small office, where she could learn a business as she did the office work. She hasn't anything lined up right now, however, and occupies her spare time with making scrapbooks for men in service—a school project, the school Red Cross course, and writing to her brother in service.

RESURRECTION

Nothing sounds quite as attractive to Dolores Lange, 7136 Osceola avenue, as a secretarial job in a railroad office. Maybe it's the free travel for vacation time, maybe it's the way most railroad companies treat their employés. Dolores isn't sure what the reason, but as soon as she gets her diploma in hand, she's going out scouting for that job.

Dolores is one of the eight children of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lange. Of her five brothers, one is now in the army and another goes this month. In school, Dolores has been secretary to both her sodality and to the senior class. She has been captain of the volleyball team, and assistant editor of the yearbook.

ST. STANISLAUS KOSTKA

There isn't much time for frivolous activity these days for Virginia Chmielewski, 1459 Greenview avenue. For after school, and every Saturday, Virginia helps her mother, Mrs. Helen Chmielewski, in their little grocery store. The intricate record keeping that ration regulations demand holds no terror for Virginia, for she not only waits on trade, but keeps books for the store as well. Virginia has been helping in the store for the last four years, and will continue to do so this summer. Then she'll be out looking for a job on her own.

At school, Virginia has been editor of the paper, an officer in the sodality, and first violinist in the school orchestra. Interested in journalism and music, she would like a "career, like any one else," but will probably go into bookkeeping.

Just now, her favorite dream is to spend another summer in the country, as she did a number of years ago in Wisconsin. But the little store keeps Mrs. Chmielewski and Virginia and Richard, 9, close to the city—so there will probably be no country vacation this year.

HOLY TRINITY

School plans for Edwin Kusek, 948 North Hoyne avenue, depend on how soon the army beckons. If it's the air corps that finally claims his attention, he's apt to make it a career, even after the war is over. Edwin is the son of Mrs. Agatha Kusek. He has two brothers in service, and three sisters.

At Holy Trinity High school, Edwin has edited the school newsjajer and school yearbook, has served on the dance and prom committees, played basketball two years, was on the honor roll, and in the commerce club.

If for any reason the next few years aren't taken up with the army, Edwin would like to take a try at business or journalism. He's been working after school at Holy Trinity rectory, and getting some valuable experience there in office work. For diversion he enjoys reading, but hasn't time for much more than newspapers, the magazine digests, and an occasional mystery novel.

Women Make Camp Cheerful

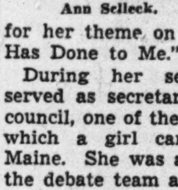
ANN SELLECK, MAINE HIGH SCHOOL SENIOR, SCHOLARSHIP WINNER



Ann Selleck.

Ann Selleck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Selleck of Des Plaines, has been awarded a regional scholarship to Rockford college. Ann, who is a senior at Maine Township High school, received the highest grade of any candidate for the scholarship for her theme on "What the War Has Done to Me."

During her senior year Ann served as secretary of the student council, one of the highest offices to which a girl can be elected at Maine. She was also a member of the debate team and the girls' athletic association.

In her freshman year Ann was a member of the organization and assembly committees. She was student council representative in her sophomore and junior years, and last year was a member of the social committee. She was also secretary of the history club, and girls' club conference delegate.

Foster Good Will.

Good Will awards, given until recently at the commencement exercises, were presented by Supt. Frank L. Holmes. To be selected as one of the six who have done the most at Maine and in the community to promote "good will" is considered one of the highest honors which can come to a graduating student. Those chosen by the faculty and students for these honors included: Pat Colvan, valedictorian, president of the student council and the German club, and National Honor society member; Ray Gross, president of the senior and sophomore classes, member of student council for three years; Bud Ostrand, football monogram winner and president of the Boys' club; Lois Gernhardt, G. A. A. member, vice president of the Girl's club, National Honor society member, and D. A. R.'s best girl citizen; Ann Selleck, debater for four years, student council secretary, and National Honor society member, and Alice Myers, G. A. A. member for four years, president of Girls' club, and National Honor society member. This award was started by former principal C. M. Himel in 1929.

Mr. Holmes presented the valedictorian, Pat Colvan, and the salutatorian, Marcia Lunde. The next eight high ranking scholarship students, in order, were Bernice Neetz, Don Winkelhaake, Norbert Harz, Vivian Houser, Marilyn Otto, Kenneth Oehlerking, Robert Wilson, and Marguerite Vosburg.

The Best Girl Citizen award was presented to Lois Gernhardt by Mrs. George Harbert, citizenship chairman for the Park Ridge chapter of the D. A. R. Edwin O. Johnson, chairman of the annual High School Constitution contest sponsored by the Mel Tierney American Legion post, presented this year's winner, Eugene Pflughaupt, with a $50 war bond. Marcia Lunde and Joan Stidham, runners-up, also were honored.

Tell Class Achievements.

Other numbers on the senior assembly program included a story of the athletic prowess of various members of the class of 1943 by Paul Salvo. Pat Colvan spoke briefly of the social achievements of the class. Ray Gross told how the National Honor society sold more than $40,000 in bonds and stamps during the last semester. As president of the class, he presented Ralph Ehrlich with a gift from the class, and an honorary diploma in recognition of his 28 years of service to Maine High as a custodian. Mr. Ehrlich retires from service this spring.

Special musical numbers on the program were announced by Meta Hohnson, assembly chairman. Those appearing for the last time included the girls' sextet, the senior boys' trio, Roberta Cook, and Marilyn Otto. Franklin Lindquist was the faculty chairman who organized the senior assembly.

How to guard your

From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix ¾ glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy, fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime not only aids nature in consuming excess fat, but increases energy at the same time. You lose fat naturally; look and feel better. Don't take chances on gaining weight during food rationing. Get genuine Welch's Grape Juice today, and follow this verified way to lose weight. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N.Y. *8 oz. glass.

How To Save Ration Points

Welch's Grape Juice is richer in energy value than the 4 leading fruit juices. It is so rich, it can be diluted with ⅓ water and still taste delicious. When served this way, it takes less ration points than any of 4 leading fruit or vegetable juices. Serve Welch's regularly and save ration points.

DAYTIME RADIO FANS ASK FOR MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Women who listen to radio in the daytime hours want something new in air fare. That is the conclusion of the Blue network following an analysis of a nation-wide survey lately concluded. The same feeling is reflected in a brochure recently released bearing the title "Daytime Serials and Iowa Women." This was prepared by Leda P. Summers in coöperation with the office of radio research of Columbia university and published by WHO, Des Moines.

Some 5,000 housewives in 77 cities and towns and many in farm communities were questioned in the network poll. What they had to say wasn't very comforting to the advocates of soup and soap operas. For one thing the housewives declared there are altogether too many serials. Some 50 per cent of all network time is said to be devoted to such dramas. Seventy-nine per cent of network daytime sponsored hours are devoted to the serials.

53 Per Cent Hear Serials.

Only 53 per cent of the housewives polled admitted to listening to any of them. Of these 36 per cent said there were too many on the air. Twenty per cent argued that there are too few serious music programs; 12 that there is too little popular music in the daytime, and 10 per cent that there is too much of the latter.

Of the daytime radio families 81 per cent follow the newscasts; 49 per cent popular music, and 32 per cent serious music.

One Per Cent Wants More.

Dissatisfaction with current daytime radio fare is also indicated by the fact that only 28 per cent of the homes polled use their radios during daytime as compared to around 40 at night.

Of 5,324 women polled in the tall corn state some 52.2 per cent said they were nonserial listeners. [This cross-checks well with the other survey.] Of the serial fans 10.3 per cent listen to seven or more and 21.5 from 3 to 6 and 16 per cent one or two. And 40.8 per cent think the soap operas help them solve their personal problems.

Incidentally, 1 per cent of those in the Blue poll said there were not enough serials on the air. And at last count there were about 60!

Bath Mat Sets, Chenille Spreads, Bath Towels, Table and Bed Pads

. . . These are difficult to wash at home because, usually, they are bright colored pieces—and brilliance of color is hard to maintain in hard water washing at home, because grey lime soap curds dull the colors. At Edgewater, we wash these items in clean soft water at exact temperatures with finest soaps . . . No soap curds, therefore, brilliant colors.

CITIZENS SHOW PUTS SPOTLIGHT ON ST. IGNATIUS

City's Oldest Catholic High in W-G-N Program.

The 104th Citizens of Tomorrow program will be broadcast over W-G-N at 1 o'clock this afternoon with St. Ignatius, the oldest Catholic high school in Chicago, the honored school.

Among the listeners will be the school's graduates and their parents at the annual senior breakfast in Damen hall, 1080 Roosevelt road. The breakfast program will be interrupted to hear the broadcast recording of selections by the school's glee club and talks by the Rev. Laurence M. Barry, S. J., school principal, and Eugene Sweeney, 5120 Fulton street, honor roll student.

Sweeney Top Student.

Sweeney, who will graduate with his class Thursday night, also will talk at the breakfast and read the class poem. He was selected by his class to represent the seniors in an interview with THE TRIBUNE which together with his picture appears in today's west side metropolitan section.

In his radio talk Father Barry, who also will preside at the breakfast, will delve briefly into the history of the school. He will tell how the school was founded 74 years ago on Roosevelt road in "the valley, a thriving new community just west of the loop." He will explain the significance of the seven perpetually burning candles in the church which the late Father Damen vowed always to keep burning in thanksgiving when the church and its school were saved from the Chicago fire in 1871 by a shift in the wind.

First in City.

The school, the first of its kind in the city, was founded by Father Damen who came to Chicago in 1857 to lay the foundation for the Holy Family parish. Twelve years later he erected the school and college. The college later was moved to the north side and renamed Loyola university. The high school which has remained on its original site has approximately 800 students, drawing them from 150 different parishes.

The second honor student whose name will be added to the roll along with Sweeney's, will be Charles George of the Union City High school in Union City, Mich. He will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of the Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies.

Prominent Guests.

Guests at the recording, which was made recently in the school, included Carter H. Harrison, four times mayor of Chicago; Superior Judge Joseph A. Graber of Cook county; United States Attorney Albert J. Woll of the northern Illinois district; Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney; Eugene A. Clifford of the Chicago and North Western railroad; Willard M. Woll, president of St. Ignatius Alumni association; John K. Moore, chairman of the board of directors of the alumni association; John J. Kenealy, president of St. Ignatius Fathers' club, and Mrs. Isabel O'Connor, president of the St. Ignatius Mothers' club.

The Citizens of Tomorrow programs will end for the season next Sunday with a recorded program on Elgin academy. The recording will be made Wednesday afternoon in the W-G-N audience studio.

Jack Hendry.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hendry of Park Ridge recently received a letter from their son, Jack, who has been in England since last September, in which he reported that he has been promoted from pilot officer in the royal Canadian air force. Jack enlisted in the R. C. A. F. six months before Pearl Harbor.

Jack told of a 26 day leave which he had spent at the rural homes of two English boys who are in his crew. They showed him many places of interest, among them Nottingham, where he saw relics of the legendary days when Robin Hood roamed Sherwood forest. They also visited a 15th century castle located in the center of the town and an historic inn where Crusaders often stopped before departing for Jerusalem.

Jack recently applied for a transfer to the United States army air force, he said, which will become effective after he has completed an operational tour with the R. A. F. Since going to England he has been flying various types of aircraft, most recently a light two motored attack ship with a three man crew.

Monday, June 7.

Gardeners living in suburban sections or where space is at hand should make another sowing of sweet corn, cucumbers, and cantaloupe to provide a continuous supply. Late cabbage can go in up to July 15. Try a few sweet potatoes, which will grow rapidly now that warm weather is here. Tomatoes also may be planted.

Tuesday, June 8.

Don't allow weeds to get a start, for they consume plant food in the soil, shade desirable plants, and use soil moisture for their own needs, resulting in poorer vegetables and flowers.

Hoe between rows and practice hand weeding to disturb growing plants as little as possible. Destroy all weeds growing in nearby plots, if the garden is in a sparsely settled community, for weeds are the breeding places of innumerable insects. Cut out weeds along the rear lot line.

Wednesday, June 9.

In lieu of watering, cultivate. Cultivation serves two important purposes: It kills weeds and stirs the soil. Cultivation begins as soon as possible and may consist, at first, of simply raking between the rows to loosen the small weeds. Hoeing should be carefully done, to protect plant roots.

Thursday, June 10.

Plant onion sets as long as they can be obtained from supply houses. Seedling onions, such as the Bermuda, can also be planted, if obtainable. They attain a large size and are most desirable for slicing.

Resow or replant all vacant rows for a succession, and remember that it is best to sow a different crop in the row that has produced another.

Friday, June 11.

Thin out all plants, whether flowers or vegetables, to give space for development. Why not plan now for indoor window boxes? Enjoy a few pansies next winter by sowing seeds at this time.

Saturday, June 12.

Keep all vines properly tied in place, using soft yarn, strips of cloth, binding twine, or other material. The stems should not be tied so tightly that they are injured.

Iris may be transplanted after flowering. Peonies are best transplanted in September. There is still time to plant peppers for a good crop. Chinese cabbage may be planted up to Aug. 1.

URGE GARDENERS TO FLAY PESTS THRUOUT SEASON

BY BEN MARKLAND.

If the gardener's Utopia ever is found, it's certain there will be no beetles or cabbage worms or aphis therein. Until that time, however, gardeners will keep their spray guns and dusters in a handy place.

Novice gardeners often are confused and misled on the subject of garden insects and insecticides. "Homemade cures" such as gasoline sprays and medicine cabinet disinfectants, are mistakenly recommended to novices who don't believe it's necessary to use the standard insecticides. The confusion and damage resulting from such practices should be avoided this year.

Keeps Insecticide Available.

Ordinarily the insecticide problem is a simple one. The gardener on the Tribune farm, for example, has available at all times a commercially manufactured insecticide which effectively defeats more than 25 of the most common garden pests. More than three-fourths of all the troublesome insects in a small vegetble and flower garden can be destroyed by this one spray, the active ingredients of which are pyrethrum [one per cent], rotenone [1 per cent] and other derris products.

This spray is used in combating cabbage worms, potato beetles, bean beetles, and many other insects of both the sucking and chewing types. It is a liquid which is diluted with water before spraying.

In general, there are two types of garden insects—those which chew and eat parts of the plant and those which suck the plant juices. To destroy most chewing insects it is necessary to use either rotenone or a poisonous material such as arsenate of lead or paris green. Sucking insects can be destroyed by contact poisons such as rotenone, pyrethrum, or nicotine sulphate.

Double Feature Spray.

The general duty spray used by the farm gardener has two advantages. One is that it contains both rotenone and pyrethrum and therefore kills most of the chewing and sucking insects. The other advantage is that it is nonpoisonous and therefore can be used on vegetables until harvest time.

Miscellaneous garden insects which require specific treatment include the cutworm, aphis [or plant lice] and corn ear worm. The cutworm already has shown its work in some gardens by chewing off tomato plants and other vegetables at ground level. This insect can be destroyed by making a mash of one-half ounce of paris green, one-half pound of bran, and a half cup of lubricating oil or molasses. This mixture can be placed in small containers in the garden in the late afternoon, but never should be left where children or dogs can reach it.

Aphis, commonly called plant lice, may be noticed on cabbages, melon crops, peas, and potatoes. To destroy them, place a tablespoonful of nicotine sulphate dust and a pound of hydrated lime in a cheesecloth bag and shake this dust thru the bag over the affected plants.

Persistent Cabbage Pest.

The cabbage worm, which affects all members of the cabbage family, is a persistent pest in Chicagoland gardens. The general purpose spray which contains pyrethrum and rotenone will destroy this enemy.

The potato beetle may attack potatoes, eggplants and tomatoes, and should be dusted with one part of lead arsenate mixed with three parts of hydrated lime. The Mexican bean beetle, which affects only bean crops, can be combated with the all purpose spray.

HONOR STUDENTS PLAN FOR FUTURE

PLAN FLAG DAY RALLY OF 10,000 IN NORTHTOWN

Set Boulder Sunday to Honor Yanks.

More than 10,000 residents of Northtown will participate in a Flag day celebration next Sunday afternoon. A flag, honoring all north siders in service, will be raised on a lot at Rosemont and Western avenues. Below the flag will be placed a granite boulder, inscribed as a permanent memorial to these men and women.

Judge Joseph Burke of the Appellate court is chairman of the celebration which will include a parade, dedication of the colors and special Flag day services. The parade, preceding the exercises, will form at Devon and California avenues at 2 o'clock, under direction of Victor C. Haggenjos.

Patriotic Units to March.

Members of the 7th District American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, representatives of the American Red Cross and four north side OCD units will march in the parade. Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and members of north side high schools drum and bugle corps also will take part.

The line of march will be east on Devon avenue to Leavitt street, south to Rosemont avenue, and west on Rosemont to Western avenue. There, on a theater parking lot, the flag raising exercises will open at 3 o'clock.

Military to be Represented.

Representatives of the army, navy, marine, coast guard, and auxiliary services will attend the exercises. A group of American Legion members will present the colors. Walter Swanwick will introduce all mothers and fathers who have three or more of their children in the service. Gold star mothers of this war will also be introduced.

A special feature of the program will be an illustrated talk showing the evolution of the American flag. The story will be told with flags lent by the Elks of Chicago lodge No. 4 for the program. The Elks' collection includes flags from early colonial days down to the present time.

GAMMA PHI BETA ALUMNAE PLAN ANNUAL PARTY

The Chicago Alumnae chapter of Gamma Phi Beta will sponsor its annual spring luncheon for members of active chapters who reside in Chicago and suburbs at 1 o'clock Saturday at Marshall Field & Co. store. Mrs. H. W. Herland of Evanston, chapter vice president, is in charge of arrangements.

Newly elected officers of the chapter are Mrs. F. L. Brown, president; Mrs. G. H. Paris, treasurer; Mrs. Victor E. Berg, recording secretary; Mrs. John B. Martin, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Charles F. Barlow, adviser. Mrs. Herland, also recently elected, is social chairman.

Lt. Allan Frank.

Lt. Allan Frank, U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel H. Frank of Glencoe, was recently awarded a distinguished flying cross for his "extraordinary achievement as pilot of a scout bomber in action against Japanese forces in the Solomons during the raid of August 7." Lt. Frank's outstanding heroism, according to the citation, took place during the raid upon and the occupation of Guadalcanal.

"The courageous initiative shown by Lt. Frank as he sought out and destroyed anti-aircraft positions by vigorous bombing attacks, resulting in severe loss of life and equipment to the Japanese—his grim determination and unyielding devotion to duty" were reasons given on the navy citation for the young flyer's award.

A copy of the citation, sent to Chicago by the navy, was the first word Mr. and Mrs. Frank had concerning their son's heroism. His letters from Norfolk, Va., where he is now stationed, hadn't mentioned the honor.

"But that's the way Allan is," the parents explained, "always quiet about things."

Lt. Frank was home on leave in December. His wife and baby daughter, Virginia, accompanied him to Norfolk. Before he enlisted in the navy air corps, the flyer attended the University of Chicago.

WAR WORKER'S HUSBAND HELD JAP PRISONER

Works On in Hopes of Enemy's Defeat.

Mary Ellen Taylor.

Robbed of her husband when the Japanese captured Guam, a worker in Chicago's new Douglas Aircraft plant today is living in hopes of seeing Japan crushed and her husband restored to her soon.

Mary Ellen Taylor, 6214 North Winthrop avenue, secretary to Material Superintendent W. R. Knudsen, met and later married Jack L. Taylor while both were attending the University of California in 1939. Two years later, after receiving his master's degree in mining metallurgy at the Montana School of Mines, young Taylor left the country in June of 1941 on a job for the Pacific naval airbase contractors in Guam.

Letter Is Optimistic.

After the seizure of Guam by the Japs in December, 1941, Mrs. Taylor did not hear from her husband until September, 1942. The letter she received had been censored in Tokio and sent thru neutral Switzerland to New York and on to Chicago. Its tone was optimistic. The prisoner mentioned he was getting enough to eat, had access to books and magazines, and was permitted to exercise each day in the stockade.

In his last letter, before he was taken prisoner, Mrs. Taylor says her husband told of the Japanese submarines and ships that sailed past Guam each day, carring personnel and supplies to a Jap base "almost within view of Guam." He also remarked that Guam was "one of the most beautiful construction camps I have ever seen."

Dad Also a Builder.

Taylor's father, a Californian, was a steel construction superintendent on Midway until shortly before Pearl Harbor. When war first broke out, he was home in the States, but now he is back in Hawaii, building fortifications.

Mrs. Taylor, meanwhile, is doing her war job each day, helping build the planes that will smash the three axis nations.

Beth Israel Confirmation.

The confirmation service at Temple Beth Israel, Bernard and Ainslie streets, will be held at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn will conduct the service.

7 WILMETTE GIRL SCOUTS QUALIFY AS HORSEWOMEN

Seven Wilmette Girl Scouts have won their horsewoman badge, the first local group to qualify for the awards. The girls won their badges by appearing in the annual spring equestrian show held recently at the School of Horsemanship, Skokie. Judges for the show were Mrs. Louis B. Swift from Galloping Hill farm, Wheaton, and Mrs. Charles Coffin from Wayne.

Jeanne Marie Weber was first in her class. Other girls who took part in the show and earned badges were Janet Youngberg, Lois Cederberg, Anne Ballantine, Lorna Gossett, and Janet Frei. Joan Smith, who also earned a badge, owns a registered horse named Gay Whirlwind.

All the girls are under 13 years old. They have had 45 hours of riding, know how to saddle and bridle a horse correctly, and can explain correct fitting. They know how to mount and dismount and the correct position in saddle at a walk, trot, canter, and gallop. They know specifications for feeding and watering a horse and the complete daily routine care of a horse. The girls have also learned courtesy for riding in company, meeting traffic, and leaving or returning to the stable.

CATHOLIC STAR BOYS TO FIGHT, THEN TO WORK

Hopes of Girls Vary in Interviews.

The outstanding graduates of 10 north side Catholic high schools agree that war is causing a temporary setback in their plans for the future, but they are taking a long range view of their lives and each has a definite goal ahead.

For some it is writing novels or newspaper reporting. One will be a peace time engineer, another a laboratory technician, another a musician, and two will be lawyers. Before any of the boys begin training in their chosen fields, they will serve with the army or navy.

SACRED HEART CONVENT

Representing the Convent of the Sacred Heart was Alice Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Fitzgerald, 1030 Loyola avenue. She stands third in her class scholastically, was a member of the Sodality, the G. A. A., and a representative in Cisca.

The only girl in the family, with four brothers, it's perhaps not surprising her chief interest lies in sports. Alice is a rabid Golden Gloves fan, collects clippings on boxing, and knows her way around professional as well as amateur boxing circles.

In addition to her school work at the convent, she's been studying modeling at a professional school. If she goes on to college, she thinks it will be Barat in Lake Forest.

IMMACULATA

From Immaculata High school came Miss Julianna Jegen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Jegen, 4438 North Major avenue. With a four year scholarship to Mundelein college, she has no problem choosing her college. At Mundelein she will study to be either a laboratory technician or teacher.

Julianna is going to work this summer for her father who is a florist. In her spare time she collects classical records and goes swimming. Recently she completed a Red Cross first aid course.

At Immaculata she's been class Sodality prefect for three years. She has played the cello with the school orchestra for two years and has served as corresponding secretary of Cisca, the city-wide Catholic action group. Probably the most unique of the young graduate's accomplishments, however, is her perfect attendance record thru her four years of high school—no absence, no tardiness.

ST. GEORGE

Don Fahrenbach, 17 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Fahrenbach, 5373 Magnet avenue, of St. George High school, Evanston, hopes to be able to complete a year of training in civil engineering before he enters the service. He will leave soon after school is out to enter Gonzaga university in Spokane, Wash. Once he's been called to duty, he hopes it will be in the navy as a navigator.

Don has gained nation-wide acclaim as an ice skater. He holds two world records. In 1941 he broke the half mile record to win the Tribune silver skates. He is national ice skating champion of the C. Y. O.

Don placed ninth scholastically in his class of 126. His athletic prowess is not confined to ice skating, as he played half back on the St. George football team, and was captain of the softball team.

MALLINCKRODT

The outstanding senior of Mallinckrodt High school in Wilmette is Rita Ann Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip M. Sullivan, 2115 Birchwood avenue. A history and English major, she has been class president for three years and Sodality chairman for four years. She served on the committee of the summer school of Catholic action in Chicago in 1942.

As co-editor of the school paper, she has learned the difference between deadlines, headlines, and bylines, and has decided that eventually she wants to be a newspaper woman. Her plans include four years at Mundelein college.

Just like almost any other high school senior, Rita Ann loves coke sessions and dating a "smooth dancer." She's especially proud of her two brothers in the service—Lt. Philip Jr. who is overseas, and Sergt. Tom, stationed at Truax field in Madison, Wis.

ST. SEBASTIAN

Gretchen Convey is St. Sebastian High school's outstanding senior. She's the 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Convey, 643 Wellington avenue. An honor student for four years, president of her class, leading rôle in the class play, editor of the school paper—these are just a few of her achievements.

She's really proudest of her years

Precinct Captain Is 'Sweetheart in 42d'—Likes Job

Mrs. Marie Frawley always protests when Samuel Workman, Republican ward committeeman, calls her "sweetheart of the 42d ward," but any one with half an eye can tell she really doesn't mind.

A landlady in her spare time, Mrs. Frawley has been a near north side precinct captain for the Republican party for 12 years. The job has been in the family even longer than that, because she succeeded her husband, Thomas, after his death. He had held the post for 20 years.

Likes to Know People.

"What I like about it," says Mrs. Frawley, "is the way I get to know every one. I walk down the street, or I go to the grocery store, and I can call every one by name."

Is there any grief in being a precinct captain? The little woman, who lives at 17 Maple street, says there's plenty of grief. But you don't mind it too much. If you're pushed out the front door, you go to the back door. And when you don't carry your precinct, you're in for it at headquarters.

Mrs. Frawley works all year round for her cause. The first and third Wednesdays of every month she holds a card party in the headquarters at 1023 North State street. She reports that the turnout usually makes from eight to ten tables. But even before she became captain, planning these parties for her husband was her job. Now they're her entire responsibility.

Proud of Y. W. Girls.

Around election times Mrs. Frawley has helpers, but she confides that she never feels right unless she's visited every one herself. She's proud of the record the girls at the McCormick Y. W. C. A. in her precinct rolled up in the last elections—a 100 per cent voting record.

In all she reports that she climbs stairs in these last few weeks to see more than 400 voters—but every step is worth it. Devotion like hers is unusual even for precinct captains, and perhaps that is why Mr. Workman has nicknamed her "sweetheart of the 42d ward."

Junior Achievement Unit Is Formed in Evanston

The first Junior Achievement company in Evanston was established last week when Mayor S. G. Ingraham presented the group with its charter. Peter Hitt, president, and John Bigelow, treasurer, accepted it. The group, sponsored by the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston, will begin work on wooden seedling boxes and identification stakes for war gardeners.

2 NORTH SIDERS HEAD PLANS FOR U. OF C. REUNION

War Modifies Usual Alumni Program.

Two north siders will head the restricted war time reunion program of the University of Chicago which will open tomorrow. Vallee O. Appel, 404 North Linden avenue, Highland Park, is president of the Alumni association, and J. Milton Coulter, 772 Walden avenue, Winnetka, is reunion chairman.

Because of war and transportation restrictions, the reunion will be held this year only for the benefit of the alumni in Chicago and suburbs. Altho more than 1,200 local alumni are included in the total of 4,400 alumni in service, graduates in the Chicago area still number more than 15,000.

Plan Annual Sing.

Many of the traditional events, including the university sing and the alumni school, are included—in a modified form—in this year's program. One session of the alumni school will be held Thursday evening in the Winnetka Community house.

The 1943 sing will be the 33d annual program, but it will be without many of its traditional features, according to chairmen. The undergraduate fraternity groups have "only a handful of men" left, and most of the younger alumni are also in service. Since many fraternities will be represented only by a score or so of participants—instead of the usual hundreds—the groups will not march into Hutchinson court. They will all be seated in the quadrangles.

The navy training schools, commanded by Lt. Comdr. M. B. Lowe; the army air forces meteorology cadets, commanded by Maj. W. H. Starbuck, and the army specialized training unit, commanded by Col. E. V. Smith, have been invited to participate in the sing.

Law Dinner Tomorrow.

First on the reunion program is the law school dinner, scheduled for tomorrow night at the Chicago Bar association. Speakers will be George Maurice Morris, '15, president of the bar association, and G. H. Aikens, '09, president of the Canadian bar association.

Alumni medals will be awarded to distinguished alumni Saturday afternoon at the assembly. Citations will also be announced. President Robert M. Hutchins will report on the state of the university in accepting the alumni gift.

61 Students to Receive Divinity Degrees at N. U.

Sixty-one students will receive their bachelor of divinity degrees at the graduation exercises of Garrett Biblical institute at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Scott hall, Evanston. Dr. Howard Thurman, dean of Howard university in Washington, D. C., will speak.

Order of Martha.

The Sacred Heart Household Order of Martha will celebrate its 20th anniversary Saturday with a card party at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

CATHOLIC STAR STUDENTS GET READY FOR WAR

Boys and Girls Tell Plans in Interviews.

as soloist with the glee club, as singing is as important to this young lady as is sleeping to most other people. To gain experience she sings at benefits, at parties, in theaters—anywhere any one asks her to sing. And that's why she's torn between going to college and studying music in the Chicago conservatory. Some day, says Gretchen, she hopes to sing on the radio.

DE PAUL ACADEMY

Seventeen year old Robert Class, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Class, 5941 West Newport avenue, outstanding senior from De Paul academy, has drawn up plans for his life as carefully as an architect prepares a blueprint. He regrets, of course, that war will deprive him of a few precious years in which he could get started toward making all his hopes come true. In the meantime, Robert wants to be a pursuit pilot as his dad was in the last war.

The list of things this serious-eyed young man dreams of doing after the war is long and varied. Before he was 16, he spent his Saturdays and after school hours tagging Tribune copy boys around the city room in an effort to learn the newspaper trade. Later, however, he changed his ambition from journalism to literature. Now he wants to be a novelist. He also wants to write poetry, with Lord Byron as his inspiration.

Some day, too, he would like to become an English or a history professor and teach high school boys. In his spare time, he hopes to master both the violin and the piano. Between the ages of 28 and 30, he plans to travel the entire United States and Mexico with money redeemed from his war bonds. Ten years later, he hopes to tour all western Europe and the Scandinavian countries. At De Paul, he was class president, prom committee chairman and a member of the "Prep" staff.

ST. SCHOLASTICA

Mary Ann Haley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Haley of 6422 North Francisco avenue, was voted the outstanding senior from St. Scholastica academy. Her red-gold hair, deep blue eyes, and sudden smile tell more quickly than does her laughing comment that she's "all Irish." She's a slim 5 feet, 8 inches tall and finds baseball, basketball, tennis, swimming, and hockey her most exhilarating hobbies.

At St. Scholastica her four high school years were filled with activities. She was president of the senior class, prefect of the parish Sodality, a reporter for the school newspaper, assistant editor, and an illustrator for the yearbook, won her letter in athletics, was prom chairman and a member of the Writer's club. Red Cross first aid and knitting classes were also among her activities. For the last two years, she spent her Saturdays and holidays clerking at Marshall Field & Co.

Mary Ann would like to attend a local college so she could be near her parents since her only brother is away in the army air corps. She wants to study art and link it with commercial advertising. In high school, her favorite subjects were mathematics, science, and journalism.

LOYOLA ACADEMY

Outstanding senior from Loyola academy is James Frederick Ashenden Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Ashenden, 6335 North Bell avenue. "Jim" or "Ash," as his school mates know him, was sworn into the navy air corps last February. He wants to be a fighter pilot. Thru his senior year, he has been a navy wing commander at Loyola, which job carries the duty of talking up recruiting among the students, he explained. So far, he has talked several of his "buddies" into the air corps.

When his war job is finished, Jim would like to study law at an eastern college. In high school, Latin and Greek were two of his favorite studies. His favorite extra-curricular activity and most loved all-time hobby is sports. Five feet, 10 inches tall, he was first string quarter back on the Loyola football squad and was also an outstanding boxer.

His nationality, he explains, is "British Isles"— he is a mixture of English, Irish, and Scotch. But from his shoes to his new crew hair cut, Jim is a typical "All-American" boy.

MARYWOOD

Joan Lackner, voted as the outstanding senior of Marywood High school, is the daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Lackner, 2430 Greenleaf avenue. In her senior year she held the highest office in the school—that of sodality prefect. She was also a class officer and co-editor of the school newspaper.

Her love of travel and journalistic ambitions, put together, add up to her dream of being a foreign correspondent. She wants to go to college and take "a great deal of writing." In high school, English and Latin were her favorite subjects. Her favorite hobbies are swimming, golf, tennis and ping pong.

Joan's brown eyes sparkle when she says that she hopes life holds "lots and lots of excitement for her." She has many likes but few dislikes. She likes to laugh, likes to read, likes plays and dramatics, singing, dancing, and parties. Her most vigorous dislike is that of "routine things."

ST. GREGORY

Calvin Benning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Benning, 5069 North Damen avenue, was selected the outstanding senior at St. Gregory High school. Seventeen and almost ready for the draft, Calvin wants to get into the navy this summer. It will suit him fine just to be an "ordinary sailor." His one brother is stationed in New Zealand with the army.

While he waits for the navy to take him, Calvin plans to study chemistry at night school. After the war, he wants to be an analytic chemist. Potography, indoor baseball and bowling are his favorite hobbies.

During his senior year, he was prefect of the school sodality and a member of the track team. Begining at 4 o'clock every morning of his school days, he delivered THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

In making the selection, Maj. Schulte stated: "Pvt. Chidsey has been chosen right guide of the 33d battalion drill team, altho he has been in the service only since March 17, 1943. He also is squad leader for his platoon. We feel confident that Pvt. Chidsey will put to use the experience he has received in the military field. He is now following in the footsteps of his father who was a captain in the ordnance department in World War I. Because of his fine qualities and enthusiasm and his excellent military bearing we heartily recommend this man as 'Soldier of the Week.'"

Special recognition for persons who have contributed a gallon of their blood to the Red Cross blood donor service was announced recently. Nine north siders have already donated their gallon, a pint at a time.

A small red ribbon will be given to designate the eighth donation. Under the new system a bronze pin will be awarded for the first donation, a silver one for the third, and the red ribbon will be added to the silver pin for the eighth.

The red ribbon and silver pin are expected to become the symbol of "gallon clubs" in many communities where the Red Cross is collecting blood. Donations are limited to five a year.

COUPLE FORMS CLUB OF FRIENDS OF SERVICE MEN

In March of this year Fred and Stella Block, a sociable pair, gathered about 50 of their good friends together and said—let's go to work for the boys in service. And the Friends of Service Men was born.

Just a month later, in April, a telegram came to the Block home at 2912 Commonwealth avenue reporting their son missing in action. Three weeks later word arrived that Lt. Robert Irwin Block, 23 years old, had been killed when a 10 man B-24 Liberator bomber crashed in New Guinea.

Inspired by Son.

Remembering their son's warm words of praise for civilians in the south Pacific who had helped make a soldier's life happier, the parents worked even harder to extend the circle of friendship of their Chicago organization. They visited more friends, acquaintances, and even strangers to induce them to join and help. Today the organization has more than 600 members from all parts of the north side.

Each week the treasurer, Mrs. Sidney Reinganum, writes a check for $100 which goes to the Chicago Service Men's center for "whatever you deem best." Dues of $1 per year added to the proceeds of monthly parties in the Belden Stratford hotel and private contributions make up the amount.

Not because the Blocks had wanted a public memorial, but because the organization members could not be dissuaded, a memorial to their son is being created, to be known as the "Robert Irwin Block fund." What form it will take has not yet been decided.

Officers of "Friends."

Officers of the Friends of Service Men, incorporated not for profit, are Nathan C. Meyer, president; Fred A. Block, vice president; Mrs. Reinganum, treasurer, and Mrs. Harry Eichenbaum, secretary.

On the executive committee are Myron E. Wisch, chairman, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bernstein, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Block, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Block, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar I. Block, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Block, Mr. and Mrs. Ben S. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dry, the Edward Edelsteins, the H. J. Eichenbaums, the Percy S. Friedmans, the Ralph Jacobses, Dr. and Mrs. Morton Lambert, the Henry Lovenharts, the A. C. Mayersons, the Joseph M. Meyers, the Milton C. Meyers, the Nathan C. Meyers, the D. A. Pachters, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pressman, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Reinganum, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Schuham, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Winston, and Mrs. Myron E. Wisch.

The group will sponsor another of its money raising parties in the Belden Stratford hotel Tuesday evening.

How to guard your Weight and Energy during food rationing

From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix ¾ glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy, fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime not only aids nature in consuming excess fat, but increases energy at the same time. You lose fat naturally; look and feel better. Don't take chances on gaining weight during food rationing. Get genuine Welch's Grape Juice today, and follow this verified way to lose weight. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N.Y. *8 oz. glass.

How To Save Ration Points

Welch's Grape Juice is richer in energy value than the 4 leading fruit juices. It is so rich, it can be diluted with ⅓ water and still taste delicious. When served this way, it takes less ration points than any of 4 leading fruit or vegetable juices. Serve Welch's regularly and save ration points.

DAYTIME RADIO FANS ASK FOR MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Women who listen to radio in the daytime hours want something new in air fare. That is the conclusion of the Blue network following an analysis of a nation-wide survey lately concluded. The same feeling is reflected in a brochure recently released bearing the title "Daytime Serials and Iowa Women." This was prepared by Leda P. Summers in coöperation with the office of radio research of Columbia university and published by WHO, Des Moines.

Some 5,000 housewives in 77 cities and towns and many in farm communities were questioned in the network poll. What they had to say wasn't very comforting to the advocates of soup and soap operas. For one thing the housewives declared there are altogether too many serials. Some 50 per cent of all network time is said to be devoted to such dramas.

53 Per Cent Hear Serials.

Only 53 per cent of the housewives polled admitted to listening to any of them. Of these 36 per cent said there were too many on the air. Twenty per cent argued that there are too few serious music programs; 12 that there is too little popular music in the daytime, and 10 per cent that there is too much of the latter.

Of the daytime radio families 81 per cent follow the newscasts; 49 per cent popular music, and 32 per cent serious music.

One Per Cent Wants More.

Dissatisfaction with current daytime radio fare is also indicated by the fact that only 28 per cent of the homes polled use their radios during daytime as compared to around 40 at night.

Of 5,324 women polled in the tall corn state some 52.2 per cent said they were nonserial listeners. [This cross-checks well with the other survey.] Of the serial fans 10.3 per cent listen to seven or more and 21.5 from 3 to 6 and 16 per cent one or two. And 40.8 per cent think the soap operas help them solve their personal problems.

Incidentally, 1 per cent of those in the Blue poll said there were not enough serials on the air. And at last count there were about 60!

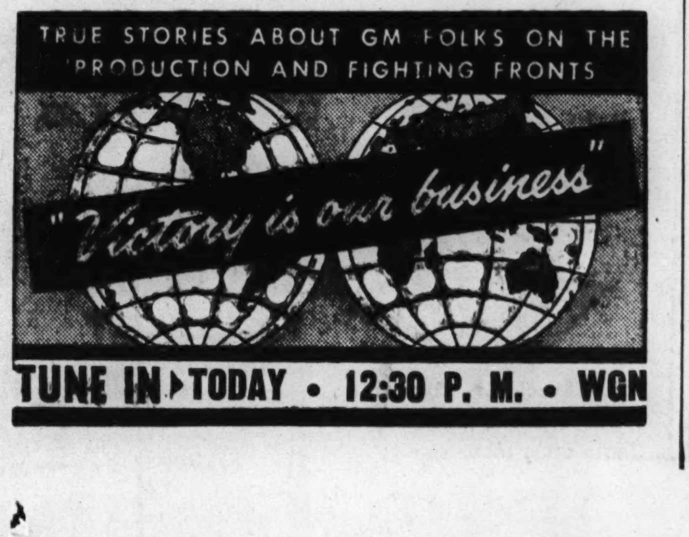
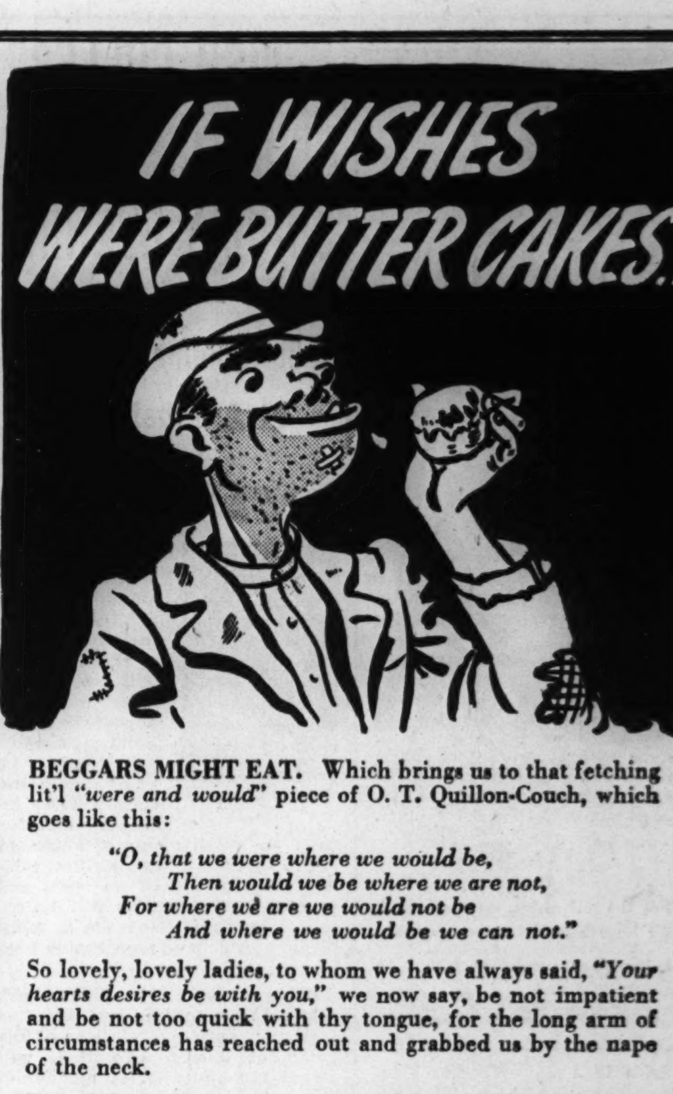
TRUE STORIES ABOUT GM FOLKS ON THE PRODUCTION AND FIGHTING FRONTS



TUNE IN ▸ TODAY • 12:30 P. M. • WGN



IF WISHES WERE BUTTER CAKES..

BEGGARS MIGHT EAT. Which brings us to that fetching lit'l "were and would" piece of O. T. Quillon-Couch, which goes like this:

"O, that we were where we would be,
Then would we be where we are not,
For where we are we would not be
And where we would be we can not."

So lovely, lovely ladies, to whom we have always said, "Your hearts desires be with you," we now say, be not impatient and be not too quick with thy tongue, for the long arm of circumstances has reached out and grabbed us by the nape of the neck.

But while it is true we are engaged in a tussle with circumstances we, here at Skokie, will maintain a basic quality of work that will continue to satisfy our once fastidious group of customers. We know that TOMORROW BELONGS TO YOU and we, who have been possessed of a dream to create the finest, most beautiful laundering service in this entire North Shore garden spot, know no doubt, have no fear, have lost no faith. It is our avowed purpose to remain "True to a vision, steadfast to a dream."

Thanks, folks, you've been just So nice!

DEDICATE NEW CHURCH SUNDAY IN LINCOLNWOOD

Dr. O. A. Benson Will Be Speaker.

St. John's Lutheran church of Lincolnwood will dedicate its recently completed chapel at 3:30 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. Organized last October, the congregation now has a membership of 120.

Dr. O. A. Benson, president of the Illinois conference of the Augustana Lutheran synod, will deliver the dedicatory address. Pastors of the northern Chicago district will assist Dr. Benson in conducting the rite of dedication.

Junior Choir to Sing.

Greetings will be given by the Rev. T. E. Matson, regional director for the board of home missions of the Augustana synod. The Junior choir, of 31 voices, directed by Mrs. R. B. Peterson, will sing at the dedication.

Following the service, the Ladies' guild of the church will serve light refreshments. Members of the congregation and their guests will gather for a social hour in the new social hall.

The new chapel, located at 6742 North Kilpatrick avenue, will seat almost 150 persons. From October until February the congregation held its services at the Municipal building of Lincolnwood. By February the chapel was sufficiently completed for services to be held in it.

Plan Permanent Building.

A tan brick structure, the chapel includes a parsonage and Sunday school rooms. Not intended as the permanent church, however, the entire chapel building will be turned into a parsonage when the congregation is able to build a new church.

The Rev. R. V. Peterson is pastor of the congregation. He and Mrs. Peterson came to Lincolnwood last fall from Lemont, where the Rev. Mr. Peterson formerly had a pastorate.

OCD Raises Flag Today to Honor Yanks' Mothers

A flag raising ceremony in honor of the mothers of service men from block 3, zone 1, community 13, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Winthrop and Berwyn avenues. Ald. Robert C. Quirk [48th] will speak.

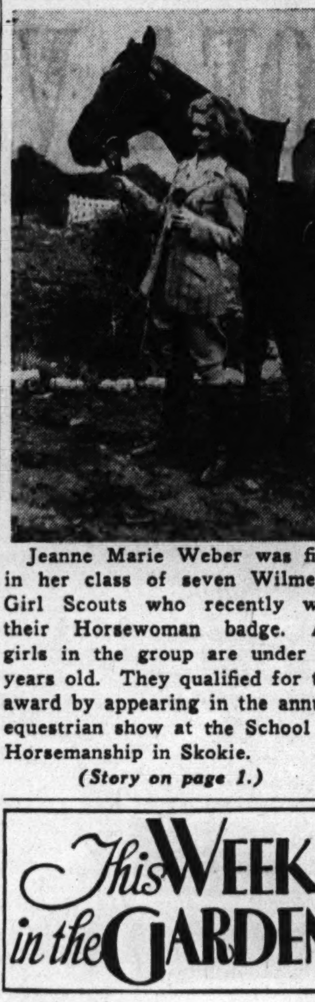
A child care committee has been set up in the Central Uptown OCD community to deal with the problem of the youngsters of working parents. The group with the aid of volunteers is surveying the area to determine the needs.

Members of the child care committee are Wade Franklin, community commander, Mrs. Alma Persily, chairman, Mrs. Judith Yanoff, Mrs. Dorothy Brill, Mrs. Flora Hall, Mrs. Margaret Perry, Miss Jeanette Schneider, Mrs. Cecelia Akers, and Mrs. Marian Hoffman.

Two appointments have been made in community 17, division 6. Mrs. Hylda M. Budden, 6951 North Ashland avenue, has become community consumers' information chairman. Mrs. M. F. Starkweather, 1207 Jarvis avenue, has been appointed Red Cross recruiting chairman of the Volunteer Nurses' Aid corps.

A group has been formed in the community for the contribution of home baked cakes which will be sent every week to the service men's centers and the U. S. O.

Wins Scout Badge



Jeanne Marie Weber was first in her class of seven Wilmette Girl Scouts who recently won their Horsewoman badge. All girls in the group are under 13 years old. They qualified for the award by appearing in the annual equestrian show at the School of Horsemanship in Skokie.

Monday, June 7.

Gardeners living in suburban sections or where space is at hand should make another sowing of sweet corn, cucumbers, and cantaloupe to provide a continuous supply. Late cabbage can go in up to July 15.

Tuesday, June 8.

Don't allow weeds to get a start, for they consume plant food in the soil, shade desirable plants, and use soil moisture for their own needs, resulting in poorer vegetables and flowers.

Hoe between rows and practice hand weeding to disturb growing plants as little as possible. Destroy all weeds growing in nearby plots, if the garden is in a sparsely settled community, for weeds are the breeding places of innumerable insects. Cut out weeds along the rear lot line.

Wednesday, June 9.

In lieu of watering, cultivate. Cultivation serves two important purposes: It kills weeds and stirs the soil. Cultivation begins as soon as possible and may consist, at first, of simply raking between the rows to loosen the small weeds.

Thursday, June 10.

Plant onion sets as long as they can be obtained from supply houses. Seedling onions, such as the Bermuda, can also be planted, if obtainable. They attain a large size and are most desirable for slicing.

Friday, June 11.

Thin out all plants, whether flowers or vegetables, to give space for development. Why not plan now for indoor window boxes? Enjoy a few pansies next winter by sowing seeds at this time.

Saturday, June 12.

Keep all vines properly tied in place, using soft yarn, strips of cloth, binding twine, or other material. The stems should not be tied so tightly that they are injured.

Keeler, Troop 14 Leader, Wins Scout Palm Badge

Carl Keeler, 522 Surf street, recently was awarded a palm to wear on his Eagle Scout medal in recognition of his 35 additional merit badges. Keeler is scoutmaster of Troop 14.

URGE GARDENERS TO FLAY PESTS THRUOUT SEASON

BY BEN MARKLAND.

If the gardener's Utopia ever is found, it's certain there will be no beetles or cabbage worms or aphis therein. Until that time, however, gardeners will keep their spray guns and dusters in a handy place.

Novice gardeners often are confused and misled on the subject of garden insects and insecticides. "Homemade cures" such as gasoline sprays and medicine cabinet disinfectants, are mistakenly recommended to novices who don't believe it's necessary to use the standard insecticides. The confusion and damage resulting from such practices should be avoided this year.

Keeps Insecticide Available.

Ordinarily the insecticide problem is a simple one. The gardener on the Tribune farm, for example, has available at all times a commercially manufactured insecticide which effectively defeats more than 25 of the most common garden pests. More than three-fourths of all the troublesome insects in a small vegetble and flower garden can be destroyed by this one spray, the active ingredients of which are pyrethrum [one per cent], rotenone [1 per cent] and other derris products.

In general, there are two types of garden insects—those which chew and eat parts of the plant and those which suck the plant juices. To destroy most chewing insects it is necessary to use either rotenone or a poisonous material such as arsenate of lead or paris green. Sucking insects can be destroyed by contact poisons such as rotenone, pyrethrum, or nicotine sulphate.

Double Feature Spray.

The general duty spray used by the farm gardener has two advantages. One is that it contains both rotenone and pyrethrum and therefore kills most of the chewing and sucking insects. The other advantage is that it is nonpoisonous and therefore can be used on vegetables until harvest time.

The cabbage worm, which affects all members of the cabbage family, is a persistent pest in Chicagoland gardens. The general purpose spray which contains pyrethrum and rotenone will destroy this enemy.

Garden Enemies

STAR PUPILS' HOPES AWAIT WAR END

Yanks of City Form Helpful Group.

Boasting a membership now well over 300, the "Chicagoans in the ETO," an organization which cuts thru all ranks, services and races to unite Chicagoans now in the European Theater of Operations, is continously receiving more applications from overseas service men from all parts of the city.

"You have given the men a bit of assurance in one of the major things they have in their minds," one enlisted man declared after their first meeting in London. Lt. Col. Harry J. Dooley of 2000 Lincoln Park West, temporary chairman, had suggested the organization should not only serve to gather together Chicagoans in the United Kingdom, but should continue to function after the war as an aid to readjusting to civilian life.

Evanston Colonel Speaks.

Col. Norman A. Ryan, 901 Maple avenue, Evanston, another serving in England, who also spoke to the members, reinterated Col. Dooley's pledge that "we feel duty bound to help one another," and added, "We are going to be better able to get back and make a stronger amalgamation in the future than we did in the last war."

Plans for a projected broadcast of one of the meetings from the London headquarters of the club at the Mostyn Red Cross club, to Chicago are being made. The broadcast is to include a reply from the men's families and friends here. Mayor Kelly has already cabled them that the utmost support will be given the broadcast here.

Two Brothers Charter Members.

Among the original members are two brothers, Thomas J. Garrity, 26, of the navy, and Sergt. Joseph P. Garrity, 28, of the army, of 4012 North Hermitage avenue, who joined the club when they met for the first time since joining the services. "It's almost like home, with Chicago papers available and the names of Chicago streets and places of amusement written on the walls," they wrote their mother, Mrs. Patrick Garrity.

Other officers elected at the first meeting are Maj. Edward Chayes, of the Webster hotel, 2150 Lincoln Park West, temporary secretary, and Sergt. Richard J. Langford, of 1022 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, temporary vice president.

Once the club is fully organized, other branches of "Chicagoans in the ETO" are planned for various points in the United Kingdom, probably in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Bristol.

West Siders at First Rally.

Some of the west siders at the first meeting were Arnold Baskin, 3509 West 12th place; Lt. Alfred D. Brotman, 3241 Maypole avenue; Pvt. Frank B. Cecelia, 1028 Newberry avenue; Corp. John M. Corsiglia, 306 North Latrobe avenue; Pvt. John T. Dunlea, 818 South Kedvale avenue; Pvt. Anthony, J. Dybas, 2993 Archer avenue; Lt. Richard V. Gaumond, 834 North Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park; Pvt. CATHOLIC HIGH SENIORS TELL OF LIFE AIMS

Interviewer Finds Serious Mood.

The 1943 class of high school seniors is a much more serious group than the usual graduating classes which have four years of college ahead of them.

Of 10 outstanding Catholic seniors on the west side, interviewed by THE TRIBUNE, four boys have given up hopes for a college degree—at least for the time being—and are entering wholeheartedly into the war. They have enlisted in the army and navy reserve. Four girls are planning college careers, but all want to do something toward the war this summer.

"We want to get this war over," one boy, who was elected to represent his class in an interview, said. "After that we can go on with our own plans for the future."

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION

Thomas Driscoll of Immaculate Conception High school, Elmhurst, has enlisted in the navy air corps V-5 program. He doesn't think he will be called before next September and hopes to spend the summer with two other boys on a two months' trip to California, Washington, and Texas.

Tom doesn't mind forgoing college because he has an aviation career mapped out anyway. "After the war I'd like to be a civilian pilot," he believes.

The war is very close to Tom and his three younger brothers and one sister for they have an older brother in the marines now "somewhere in the southwest Pacific."

Aviation isn't Tom's only interest, however. He has been active in school sports, playing football for three years and basketball for four years. This last year he was captain of the basketball squad. He has been editor of the school paper and has won several awards for writing in the Quill and Scroll club. He also likes music and has been a member of the school glee club.

He spent last summer on a camping trip in Wisconsin with one of the boys who is planning to go west with him this summer.

NAZARETH ACADEMY

Mary Weber, 4700 Jackson boulevard, was graduated from Nazareth academy, La Grange, last week and expects to begin working soon as a clerk in a defense plant. Eventually she wants to specialize in personnel work "for that is one of the fields that will be open after the war," she thinks.

Mary makes all her own clothes and has done some still life studies with water colors. She was popular at school, appeared on numerous dance committees, held class offices almost every year, and played a rôle in the senior play.

At home she has a younger brother. An older sister is graduating from Iowa State college this year.

ST. MEL

"The war is giving me a break," Brian Kilgallon, 4432 Jackson boulevard, who was graduated from St. Mel High school, 1 North Kildare avenue, last week, believes. He expects to leave July 1 or Nov. 1 to begin training as an army engineering officer. "If I could have gone to college I would have studied engineering," he said.

Brian is an ardent sports fan and played on the basketball team for four years. He was captain of the team this last year. He was a member of the Holy Name society and an honor student. For several years he has spent his summers working. In the winter he ushers at sports events at the Chicago Stadium and arena.

PROVIDENCE

Mary Clare McHugh, 6041 Barry avenue, will graduate from Providence High school, 119 South Canal street, Wednesday night. She hopes to enter St. Mary-of-the-Woods college, Terre Haute, Ind., in the fall and begin training for the diplomatic foreign service.

A honor student in high school, Mary Clare has won a four year scholarship to the college. In her freshman year she had the highest scholastic honors of her class and has been among the top honor students the other three years. As would be natural for a future diplomat, history has been her favorite subject.

Mary Clare can play the piano well and has a flare for dramatics, especially comic rôles. She is the oldest of seven children and has spent her summers working.

ST. ANN

Lucille Czarniecki, 2059 17th street, will graduate today from St. Ann High school, 18th and Leavitt streets, and already has entered a dictaphone school in the loop. She has spent all her summers working and until recently worked part time after school.

For hobbies she likes photography and books. Hiking and dancing are favorite pastimes, too. She was an active member of Cisca society at school and was an honor student. Her father is a defense worker and she has two younger sisters at home.

ST. IGNATIUS

Eugene Sweeney, 5120 Fulton street, won't be 18 until next December and he's hoping he can get in a semester of schooling at Loyola university before being called into service. He will be graduated from St. Ignatius Thursday and has enlisted in the army A-12 program. Whether he's in the army or at college he wants to specialize in chemical engineering.

His activities at school were varied. He was on the football team for three years and track team one year. He worked on the newspaper for four years and was assistant editor during his senior year. His other journalistic activities included being editor of the yearbook for 1942-'43. He has spent his past two summers working in a neighborhood drug store.

TRINITY

Norma Morris, 210 Lake Shore drive, who will graduate from Trinity High school, River Forest, Tuesday night, plans to continue her work in speech next fall at the Marymount college, Tarrytown, N. Y. She has a radio career in mind.

Every year at school she has taken part in a class play and recently had a rôle in the senior class production "Look to the Land," which was written and directed by the class. Masculine or elder rôles are her favorite. She has been an active member of Thespian society, an honorary dramatic organization, and was a member of the verse speaking choir. At Christmas time she clerked in a store.

ST. PHILIP

Joseph Vitiello, 337 South Kedzie avenue, had planned to go to college to study chemical engineering, but now expects to be drafted. He was graduated last week from St. Philip High school, 3141 Jackson boulevard. In the event he is able to attend college next fall he wants to go to DePaul university.

At school he played with the basketball team for four years, was football manager, and a baseball player. He likes dancing and has more than 150 popular phonograph records. He thinks the war will last about two and one-half years more and is doubtful if he will get to college after that.

ST. PROCOPIUS

Seventeen year old Mary Brodman, 1115 18th street, was one of the happiest of all graduates at St. Procopius, 1714 South Racine avenue, last week for she had won a four year scholarship to College of St. Francis, Joliet. Without that she could not have gone to college nor studied to be an English and history teacher.

President of both her junior and senior classes, Mary has been a popular classmate and has been active in many activities. She edited the Guild Sodality newspaper, has rolled bandages in the school's Red Cross unit and recently completed her first knitted sweater. During her spare time she has reviewed Catholic news of the city for the English supplement of Narod, a nation-wide Bohemian daily newspaper.

ST. MARY'S

Schoolmates will remember Catherine Kelly of Oak Park not only for her Irish name but for her favorite color of green, which she wore in the way of a dress, sweater, or hair ribbon almost every day of her life at St. Mary's, 1031 South Hoyne avenue. For the last four winters while attending school she has resided with an aunt, Miss Esther C. Kelly in the west suburb and in the summers with her parents and brothers and sisters in Wilmington.

Next September she hopes to begin college at Mundelein where she will major either in business or dietetics. She is the youngest of seven children and has one brother in the navy and two sisters working in defense plants.

She likes to collect novelty jewelry and has 25 odd pins which have come from different parts of the country. For sports she likes swimming and bowling.

CITIZENS SHOW PUTS SPOTLIGHT ON ST. IGNATIUS

City's Oldest Catholic High in W-G-N Program.

The 104th Citizens of Tomorrow program will be broadcast over W-G-N at 1 o'clock this afternoon with St. Ignatius, the oldest Catholic high school in Chicago, the honored school.

Among the listeners will be the school's graduates and their parents at the annual senior breakfast in Damen hall, 1080 Roosevelt road. The breakfast program will be interrupted to hear the broadcast recording of selections by the school's glee club and talks by the Rev. Laurence M. Barry, S. J., school principal, and Eugene Sweeney, 5120 Fulton street, honor roll student.

Sweeney Top Student.

Sweeney, who will graduate with his class Thursday night, also will talk at the breakfast and read the class poem. He was selected by his class to represent the seniors in an interview with THE TRIBUNE which together with his picture appears in today's west side metropolitan section.

In his radio talk Father Barry, who also will preside at the breakfast, will delve briefly into the history of the school. He will tell how the school was founded 74 years ago on Roosevelt road in "the valley, a thriving new community just west of the loop." He will explain the significance of the seven perpetually burning candles in the church which the late Father Damen vowed always to keep burning in thanksgiving when the church and its school were saved from the Chicago fire in 1871 by a shift in the wind.

First in City.

The school, the first of its kind in the city, was founded by Father Damen who came to Chicago in 1857 to lay the foundation for the Holy Family parish. Twelve years later he erected the school and college. The college later was moved to the north side and renamed Loyola university. The high school which has remained on its original site has approximately 800 students, drawing them from 150 different parishes.

The second honor student whose name will be added to the roll along with Sweeney's, will be Charles George of the Union City High school in Union City, Mich. He will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of the Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies.

DAYTIME RADIO FANS ASK FOR MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Women who listen to radio in the daytime hours want something new in air fare. That is the conclusion of the Blue network following an analysis of a nation-wide survey lately concluded. The same feeling is reflected in a brochure recently released bearing the title "Daytime Serials and Iowa Women." This was prepared by Leda P. Summers in coöperation with the office of radio research of Columbia university and published by WHO, Des Moines.

Some 5,000 housewives in 77 cities and towns and many in farm communities were questioned in the network poll. What they had to say wasn't very comforting to the advocates of soup and soap operas. For one thing the housewives declared there are altogether too many serials. Some 50 per cent of all network time is said to be devoted to such dramas. Seventy-nine per cent of network daytime sponsored hours are devoted to the serials.

53 Per Cent Hear Serials.

Only 53 per cent of the housewives polled admitted to listening to any of them. Of these 36 per cent said there were too many on the air. Twenty per cent argued that there are too few serious music programs; 12 that there is too little popular music in the daytime, and 10 per cent that there is too much of the latter.

Of the daytime radio families 81 per cent follow the newscasts; 49 per cent popular music, and 32 per cent serious music.

One Per Cent Wants More.

Dissatisfaction with current daytime radio fare is also indicated by the fact that only 28 per cent of the homes polled use their radios during daytime as compared to around 40 at night.

Of 5,324 women polled in the tall corn state some 52.2 per cent said they were nonserial listeners. [This cross-checks well with the other survey.] Of the serial fans 10.3 per cent listen to seven or more and 21.5 from 3 to 6 and 16 per cent one or two. And 40.8 per cent think the soap operas help them solve their personal problems.

Incidentally, 1 per cent of those in the Blue poll said there were not enough serials on the air. And at last count there were about 60!

Corp. Lane wears the purple heart and four bronze stars, signifying participation in four major battles. Corp. Lane has been in the service three years. He is convalescing at the O'Reilly General hospital, Springfield, Mo.

War Gardens in Railroad Yards to Be Described

Ben Markland, war garden editor of THE TRIBUNE, will describe an unusual war garden project on the program "Know Your Onions" over W-G-N at 9:30 a. m. today. Markland will tell about some 40 garden patches in the North Western road's Proviso freight classification yards. He will interview some of the railroad workers who are making gardens.

New Radio Team

Songstress Dinah Shore and Paul Whiteman will co-star in the summer series replacing the Charlie McCarthy program on WMAQ-NBC at 7 p. m. Sundays.

"PAPER HEARTS" SLATED NEXT ON THEATER OF AIR

June Time Love Story Scheduled.

A June-time love story titled "Paper Hearts," featuring music of many lands and starring Marion Claire and Thomas L. Thomas, will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air from 8 to 9 p. m. next Saturday on W-G-N and Mutual.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be the speaker.

"Paper Hearts" tells the story of puppets come to life before a love stricken lad. Each puppet represents a girl from a different land. He falls in love with them successively.

Miss Claire and Thomas will be supported by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus directed by Henry Weber. Miss Claire will sing "When You're in Love" from "Rio Rita"; "Je Suis Encore" from 'Manon"; 'The Rosary" by Nevin, and "Habanera" from "Carmen." She will be joined by the chorus in the latter selection.

Thomas will sing "Rio Rita," "All Through the Night," and will join with the chorus in the march from "Three Musketeers" by Friml and in the "Toreador Song" from "Carmen."

The orchestra will play "Following the Sun Around" from "Rio Rita," "Dance of the Tumblers" from "The Snow Maiden" "Girl With the Flaxen Hair" by Debussy, and the introduction to "Carmen."

How to guard your Weight and Energy during food rationing

From all information we have been able to gather, America will probably eat more starchy, fattening foods this year than ever before. That's why, now, more than ever, you must guard your weight to avoid putting on pounds of ugly fat. And here's probably the easiest way to do this you ever read about. Simply mix ¾ glass* of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass* of water. Drink before meals and at bedtime, and this remarkable action follows. First, you have less desire to eat starchy, fattening foods. Thus, you cut caloric intake without having to suffer a hungry moment. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime not only aids nature in consuming excess fat, but increases energy at the same time. You lose fat naturally; look and feel better. Don't take chances on gaining weight during food rationing. Get genuine Welch's Grape Juice today, and follow this verified way to lose weight. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N.Y. *8 oz. glass.

How To Save Ration Points

Welch's Grape Juice is richer in energy value than the 4 leading fruit juices. It is so rich, it can be diluted with ¼ water and still taste delicious. When served this way, it takes less ration points than any of 4 leading fruit or vegetable juices. Serve Welch's regularly and save ration points.

URGE GARDENERS TO FLAY PESTS THRUOUT SEASON

BY BEN MARKLAND.

If the gardener's Utopia ever is found, it's certain there will be no beetles or cabbage worms or aphis therein. Until that time, however, gardeners will keep their spray guns and dusters in a handy place.

Novice gardeners often are confused and misled on the subject of garden insects and insecticides. "Homemade cures" such as gasoline sprays and medicine cabinet disinfectants, are mistakenly recommended to novices who don't believe it's necessary to use the standard insecticides. The confusion and damage resulting from such practices should be avoided this year.

Keeps Insecticide Available.

Ordinarily the insecticide problem is a simple one. The gardener on the Tribune farm, for example, has available at all times a commercially manufactured insecticide which effectively defeats more than 25 of the most common garden pests. More than three-fourths of all the troublesome insects in a small vegetble and flower garden can be destroyed by this one spray, the active ingredients of which are pyrethrum [one per cent], rotenone [1 per cent] and other derris products.

This spray is used in combating cabbage worms, potato beetles, bean beetles, and many other insects of both the sucking and chewing types. It is a liquid which is diluted with water before spraying.

In general, there are two types of garden insects—those which chew and eat parts of the plant and those which suck the plant juices. To destroy most chewing insects it is necessary to use either rotenone or a poisonous material such as arsenate of lead or paris green. Sucking insects can be destroyed by contact poisons such as rotenone, pyrethrum, or nicotine sulphate.

Double Feature Spray.

The general duty spray used by the farm gardener has two advantages. One is that it contains both rotenone and pyrethrum and therefore kills most of the chewing and sucking insects. The other advantage is that it is nonpoisonous and therefore can be used on vegetables until harvest time.

Miscellaneous garden insects which require specific treatment include the cutworm, aphis [or plant lice] and corn ear worm. The cutworm already has shown its work in some gardens by chewing off tomato plants and other vegetables at ground level. This insect can be destroyed by making a mash of one-half ounce of paris green, one-half pound of bran, and a half cup of lubricating oil or molasses. This mixture can be placed in small containers in the garden in the late afternoon, but never should be left where children or dogs can reach it.

Aphis, commonly called plant lice, may be noticed on cabbages, melon crops, peas, and potatoes. To destroy them, place a tablespoonful of nicotine sulphate dust and a pound of hydrated lime in a cheesecloth bag and shake this dust thru the bag over the affected plants.

Persistent Cabbage Pest.

The cabbage worm, which affects all members of the cabbage family, is a persistent pest in Chicagoland gardens. The general purpose spray which contains pyrethrum and rotenone will destroy this enemy.

The potato beetle may attack potatoes, eggplants and tomatoes, and should be dusted with one part of lead arsenate mixed with three parts of hydrated lime. The Mexican bean beetle, which affects only bean crops, can be combated with the all purpose spray.

Hebrews Call Meeting to Honor Late Leader

A meeting in memory of the late Chaim Zhitlowsky, Jewish leader who died recently while on a tour thru the United States and Canada will be held at 2 o'clock next Sunday afternoon in the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard. Rabbi Solomon Goldman of Anshe Emet temple is chairman of the memorial committee.

Garden Enemies

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, June 7.

Gardeners living in suburban sections or where space is at hand should make another sowing of sweet corn, cucumbers, and cantaloupe to provide a continuous supply. Late cabbage can go in up to July 15. Try a few sweet potatoes, which will grow rapidly now that warm weather is here. Tomatoes also may be planted.

Tuesday, June 8.

Don't allow weeds to get a start, for they consume plant food in the soil, shade desirable plants, and use soil moisture for their own needs, resulting in poorer vegetables and flowers.

Hoe between rows and practice hand weeding to disturb growing plants as little as possible. Destroy all weeds growing in nearby plots, if the garden is in a sparsely settled community, for weeds are the breeding places of innumerable insects. Cut out weeds along the rear lot line.

Wednesday, June 9.

In lieu of watering, cultivate. Cultivation serves two important purposes: It kills weeds and stirs the soil. Cultivation begins as soon as possible and may consist, at first, of simply raking between the rows to loosen the small weeds. Hoeing should be carefully done, to protect plant roots.

Thursday, June 10.

Plant onion sets as long as they can be obtained from supply houses. Seedling onions, such as the Bermuda, can also be planted, if obtainable. They attain a large size and are most desirable for slicing.

Resow or replant all vacant rows for a succession, and remember that it is best to sow a different crop in the row that has produced another.

Friday, June 11.

Thin out all plants, whether flowers or vegetables, to give space for development. Why not plan now for indoor window boxes? Enjoy a few pansies next winter by sowing seeds at this time.

Saturday, June 12.

Keep all vines properly tied in place, using soft yarn, strips of cloth, binding twine, or other material. The stems should not be tied so tightly that they are injured.

Iris may be transplanted after flowering. Peonies are best transplanted in September. There is still time to plant peppers for a good crop. Chinese cabbage may be planted up to Aug. 1.

LODGE GIVES 4 PICTURES TO DANTE SCHOOL

Four new pictures, color reproductions of art masterpieces, are hanging at Dante school, 840 South Des Plaines street, the gift of the Johanna lodge, No. 9, of the United Order of True Sisters.

The lodge began its donations of pictures to schools 34 years ago and makes its gifts thru the Chicago Public School Art society, founded in 1894. "Our idea," said Mrs. Lewis Degen, 6803 Ridgeland avenue, lodge art chairman, "is to put examples of good art in the schools which have poor pictures or no pictures at all."

The lodge presented seven pictures to the Dante school last year and the four given this year include Renoir's "Margot Berard."

Theaters in Chicago Show Upswing in Prosperity

30 Plays—16 of Them New—Presented in '42-'43 Season

By Cecil Smith.

The theatrical year officially ends on May 31. This may sound arbitrary, especially in a season which finds seven Chicago playhouses active in June, but there is a reason. On May 31, and only then, Actors' Equity grants to all actors, whether or not they are bound by run-of-the-play contracts, the right to call it a season and withdraw from their rôles. By virtue of this fact, and also because in other years the theater has begun to slip into summer slumber at about this time, the records of this department have been kept on a June 1 to May 31 basis. This year the calendar is not quite convenient; therefore in order to make weeks begin on Sunday and end on Saturday I have boldly designated May 30, 1942, to May 29, 1943, as the span of the season just closed.

Since the last seasonal summary, the theater in Chicago has shown a marked upswing in prosperity. The professional legitimate theaters of the city were in operation for a grand total of 235 weeks. When this is compared with the previous season's figure of 195½ weeks, and with 178¾ weeks in 1940-'41, it becomes plain that Chicagoans are becoming increasingly willing to go to the theater.

Much of this gain may be traced to the fabulous career of "Good Night, Ladies," which kept the Blackstone theater busy all 52 weeks of the season—a record not achieved by any other theater. "Maid in the Ozarks" also must come in for its share of the credit since the hillbilly comedy, for which no critic was willing to hold out a single ray of hope, completed 37 weeks on May 29 and is still going strong.

These were the only really long runs of the season. In third place, but very far out of the competition, was "Junior Miss," whose potentially long run was limited to 17 weeks by the inadequacy of the Chicago company. On May 16, 1942, "My Sister Eileen" began a return engagement which ultimately tallied up 18 weeks, but only 16 of these can legally be chalked up in the 1942-'43 record. It is only fair to point out, also, that "The Doughgirls" and "Kiss and Tell" are both likely to achieve considerably longer runs before they are thru, but such speculations belong in the realm of crystal-gazing.

The three most spectacular hits of the season, however, were attractions which were booked for limited engagements. "This Is the Army," the Irving Berlin soldier show, filled the Civic Opera house [3,500 seats] to absolute capacity for two weeks. Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady in the Dark" played for five weeks to houses that were nearly always sold out, taking in a gross of well over $200,000. "The Three Sisters," about which current statistics are printed in another column today, left not a single seat unsold in the Erlanger in the fortnight which falls into the 1942-'43 tabulation.

The other outstanding box office successes of the year, in addition to all those I have listed up to now, were "Priorities of 1942," the first three weeks of "Best Foot Forward" [it slumped when it had to change houses midway in its run], and a revival of "The Student Prince." The remaining attractions enjoyed satisfying business, except for the following which did not live up to advance expectations: "Café Crown," "Watch on the Rhine" [return engagement], "The Eve of St. Mark," "Claudia" [return engagement], "Cocktails at Five," "Cry Havoc," "Her First Murder," "Stage Door," and "Headliners of '42."

Apart from the Blackstone, the busiest theater in the city was the Harris which operated during 45 weeks. The others achieved the following record of tenancy: Great Northern, 37; Erlanger, 35; Selwyn, 32½; Studebaker, 23; Civic Opera house, 7 [exclusive of ballet, musical events, Yiddish plays, and other special engagements which accounted for most of its season]; Grand Opera house, 2½ [before it was turned over to the movies]; Foresters', 1; Civic theater, one afternoon [Ruth Draper].

A total of 30 different productions was presented during the year. [The Gilbert and Sullivan repertory of the Boston Comic Opera company, consisting of eight different operas, is here tabulated as a single item.] Only 16, or slightly more than half, of these were new attractions; 13 were revivals and return engagements, and one — "Good Night, Ladies"—was held over from the season of 1941-'42. Of the 16 new attractions only two were serious dramas, seven were musical or vaudeville shows, and the remaining seven constituted a miscellany of comedies, farces, and melodramas. The list of revivals and return engagements fell into a similar division, with two serious dramas, four musical works, and seven comedies, farces, and melodramas.

Here is the season's list, arranged in the order of length of runs: 52 weeks, "Good Night, Ladies"; 37 weeks, "Maid in the Ozarks"; 17 weeks, "Junior Miss"; 16 weeks, "My Sister Eileen" [return engagement]; 12 weeks, "The Doughgirls"; 11 weeks, "Porgy and Bess" [revival], "Private Lives" [revival]; 9 weeks, "Priorities of 1942," "The Eve of St. Mark"; 6 weeks, "Best Foot Forward"; 5 weeks, "Lady in the Dark"; 4 weeks, "Spring Again," "Life with Father" [return engagement], "The Student Prince" [revival], Boston Comic Opera company [Gilbert and Sullivan revivals]; 3 weeks, "New 1943 Hellzapoppin," "Arsenic and Old Lace" [return engagement], "Claudia" [return engagement], "Cry Havoc," "Kiss and Tell"; 2½ weeks, "Headliners of '42," "The Merry Widow" [revival]; 2 weeks, "Café Crown," "Watch on the Rhine" [return engagement], "Her First Murder," "This Is the Army," "Stage Door" [revival], "The Three Sisters" [revival]; 1 week, "Cocktails at Five," "Uncle Tom's Cabin" [quasi-revival].

Twelve out of the 30 productions were acted by the original New York companies, completely or largely intact. [The record in 1941-'42 was 11 out of 31.] Seven were presented by duplicate companies brought together specifically for Chicago. Seven others were itinerant road companies which had no parallel New York companies tho they were sent out by New York producers. The remaining four were reserved specifically for Chicago consumption. These were "Good Night, Ladies," "Maid in the Ozarks," "Headliners of '42," and "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

GLAMOROUS NEW INGENUE

The reshuffling of the "Good night, Ladies" cast brings Peggy Drake, Hollywood starlet, to the Blackstone theater as ingenue lead with Stuart Erwin and Skeets Gallagher.

Drama Notes

Clay Clement, whose performance as the father is one of the best of the many good things in "Kiss and Tell," at the Harris, has just been elected to the council of Actors' Equity, the theater performers' union. An aristocrat of the theater, Mr. Clement represents the third generation of actors on his father's side and the fifth on his mother's. His father, also named Clay Clement, was a considerable matinée idol around the turn of the century. One of his greatest successes was "The New Dominion," which ran off and on for 25 years.

The Actors' Fund benefit performance of "The Three Sisters" on May 27 was the most profitable ever given by a dramatic attraction in Chicago, according to Robert Campbell, executive secretary of the Actors' Fund. Over $2,600 was taken in at the box office, a figure surpassed only by a benefit matinée of "Rosalie," a musical show, several years ago.

NEVER TO MARRY

men—who had a great, browed face like a brown eagle—took a hand in the proceedings.

"Look, Miss Hastings," he said, "maybe we ought to tell you that one of the help who was passing the door testifies he heard him say to your mother that he looked upon you as his wife."

Gemma's whole face set in a sort of agony, and then she spoke in the same silky tone. "I don't think he can have said that, officer—or I can't understand how—you see, I am already engaged . . . to Mr. Baird."

In the silence that followed, Lorna heard to her horror the sound of her own hard-drawn breath. Gemma was lying, she said to herself—it couldn't be true, but in a split second of time she was aware that Andy wasn't denying it—he was accepting the statement quite calmly—it was true. Well, why not? He had never said anything to her about marrying her.

Then, as if to settle the question forever, the trooper asked: "Is that right, Mr. Baird?"

"Quite right, officer."

"Did this man—this count—know it, Miss Hastings?"

"I think my mother must have told him in their interview. It was supposed to be kept secret for the present."

"No one else knew?"

Gemma smiled at Andy, her upturned eyes incredibly lovely. "I'm afraid a good many people suspected."

Across the room, Lorna could see Marion's white, agonized face—another victim to Andy's charm—a companion in misfortune.

He Was Just an Adventurer

At this moment, Mrs. Hastings pushed her way thru the crowd about the door. She had on a long, white dressing gown, her curled hair stood out about her head in a pale fuzz, and her eyes were almost white in the bright lights.

"O, don't you see, officer," she said, "the man was just a common adventurer—this was his last hope. My daughter has a great fortune of her own—perhaps you didn't know."

The man smiled. "O, yes, lady, we know—we read the papers. I'd like to congratulate you, Mr. Baird, if I may."

Lorna suddenly saw that they knew Andy well—liked him, respected him, regarded him as a great local asset. They had never doubted him—there had been no danger. How fortunate that she would not be required to compromise herself for the sake of another woman's fiancé.

She took the chair vacated by Gemma.

"You sleep in the cabin in front of which the shooting took place?"

"Yes."

"I suppose you were awakened by the shots?"

"No, officer. I was awake before that. I heard Miss Hastings' voice calling Mr. Baird."

"Was he in the cabin at the time?"

"Yes, he was."

"How do you know?"

"Because as soon as she called, I heard his steps running downstairs."

"He didn't go until she called?"

"No, but he went immediately after."

At this, she gave Andy a steady look, but he did not turn his head in her direction. Presently the officers asked where there was a telephone, and Andy took them away with him. At once Marion crossed the room and kissed Gemma. "I hope you will be very happy, Gemma," she said in a deep, false voice.

In the outburst of talk that followed, Lorna slipped away unnoticed. She knew that the telephone in the study was a private wire. The police wouldn't be using that. She called the operator and sent a telegram to her aunt:

"Please, on receipt of this, wire me to come home at once on account of your health. Conditions here unbearable. See papers. Love, Lorna."

She knew there was a night train. An answer should come in time to let her catch it—12 hours—one could almost endure anything for 12 hours.

In her own room she found herself so much exhausted that her wrists and ankles felt as if they were made of putty. She lay down on her unrumpled bed, and at once fell asleep.

At half past 1 she was waked by a servant knocking at her door to say that luncheon was being served.

Everyone was at table—except Andy, who had gone to town with the police, arranging about the inquest and the funeral and trying to discover if Von Sternwetz had any relatives in the United States.

The Edsons had already left—by car. Lorna thought: "All the ladies who love Andy are withdrawing." There was an air of excitement about the table. Death is always exciting. The survivors are stimulated with a sense of the shortness of life. And to this excitement was added the interest of Gemma's engagement.

"I should think you might wear your ring now that we all know," Dolly Gibson was saying as Lorna entered.

"Darling, I haven't got my ring yet. We weren't going to announce it until the spring."

"What do you mean to have—a solitaire . . ."

"I'll leave it to Andy."

"Safe enough, too. Andy has wonderful taste."

Stevens, the butler, approached Lorna and offered a folded paper on a tray. This was the form in which telegrams reached the guests in camp. She opened it and read, in Stevens' clear, neat writing: "Please come home as soon as possible. Have had slight relapse. Nothing serious. Love. Cornelia Carey." Lorna gave a low exclamation and gave the paper to Mrs. Hastings.

"O," said Mrs. Hastings, "isn't that a pity. However, I shouldn't worry if I were you. It doesn't sound too bad." She added to the others: "Lorna is leaving, her aunt is ill."

No one seemed greatly interested, and Mrs. Hastings told Stevens to see if he could get the drawing room on the train that night.

"No, Mrs. Hastings, not the drawing room—just a lower."

"My dear, you'll be so uncomfortable."

Lorna was firm. She knew that in the opinion of those who listened to her only ladies' maids traveled in lower berths. She didn't care. Already her visit had been more expensive than she could afford. She wasn't going to buy two tickets for a drawing room—and lie awake wherever she was.

Mrs. Hastings made one more faint protest. "I think Andy always reserves the drawing room for any of his guests going by that train."

Lorna smiled. "Not for this guest."

"You're so Spartan, my dear."

Lorna had an impression that being Spartan wasn't much admired.

Gemma, on the same side of the table, leaned forward. "I do hope that Andy gets back before you go. He'd be so disappointed not to see you again."

"He'll have to bear up," said Lorna gayly. It was not the first time that she had had reason to suspect that in her, Gemma instinctively recognized a threat. Yet she couldn't have seen anything—unless Andy had told her. Of course—that was it . . . Andy wouldn't have secrets from his fiancée.

She began to torture herself with imaginary conversations between Andy and Gemma: "Yes, darling, I have to be nice to her—to string her along—she's so awfully useful to me . . ." No, no, Andy wasn't like that—faithless, but not like that. She thought how wonderful it would be if he didn't get back—if she never had to see him again as long as she lived.

Late in the afternoon she and Billy Bishop went skating for the last time. There was no doubt that he felt badly about her going. They skated a long time in silence—each one absorbed in different thoughts, while a pale, full moon came floating up as the sun went down.

"I suppose you know how I feel about you," the boy said suddenly. "You know I'd like to ask you to marry me—only I haven't any money, and if I had, I don't suppose you'd look at me."

It was a comfort to hear her own voice pronouncing the familiar formula again—this time with complete sincerity. "Dear Billy, I shall never marry. If you were as rich as Croesus, it wouldn't matter. I have a job that takes all my time and thought, and makes me happy as well——"

"That's nonsense, Lorna. If the right man came along . . ."

"But he never will."

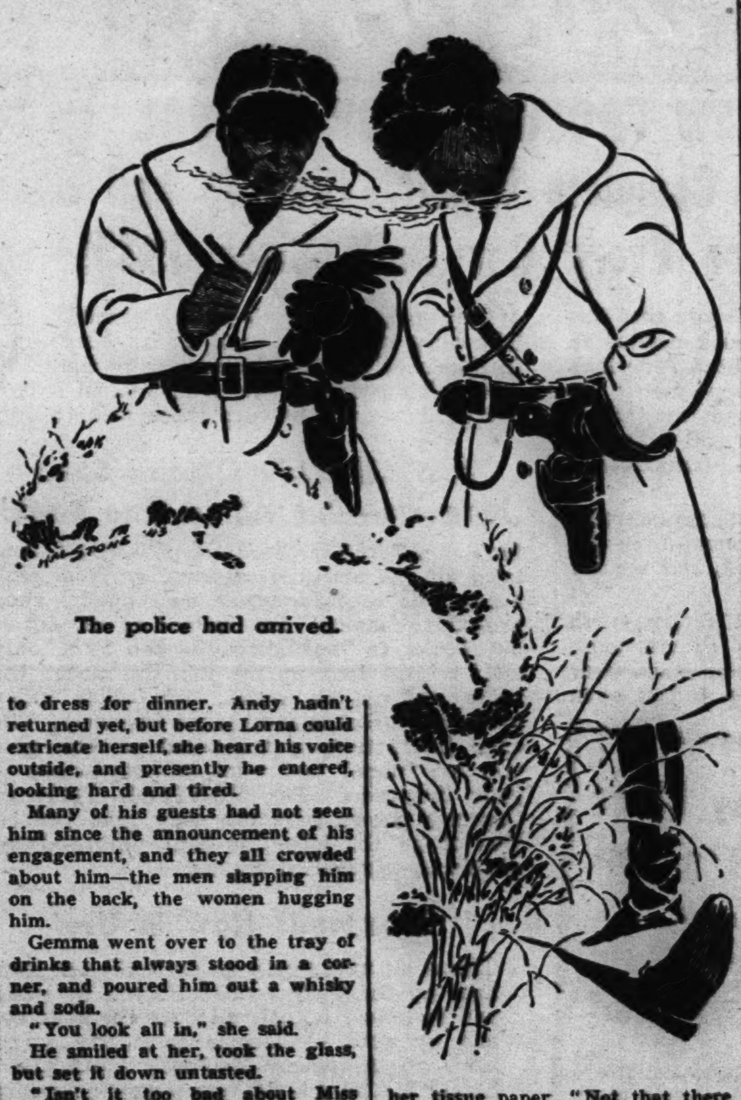
"Of course he will, if you don't frighten him to death. You know, you're pretty unapproachable—men are afraid of you, Lorna. No man would dare to take you in his arms and try to sweep you off your feet the way he would with any ordinary girl who talked like that."

"Wouldn't he, Billy?"

"No, a fellow could be awfully in love with you without having the nerve to let you know it at all."

O, God, she thought, he would be talking just like this if Gemma hadn't called—if Stefan hadn't shot himself—that would be part of the price she would have paid—that nice boys like Billy wouldn't believe it possible that she had done what she had meant to do. . . .

They went in about 7 and found everyone sitting about before going to dress for dinner. Andy hadn't returned yet, but before Lorna could extricate herself, she heard his voice outside, and presently he entered, looking hard and tired.



The police had arrived.

Many of his guests had not seen him since the announcement of his engagement, and they all crowded about him—the men slapping him on the back, the women hugging him.

Gemma went over to the tray of drinks that always stood in a corner, and poured him out a whisky and soda.

"You look all in," she said.

He smiled at her, took the glass, but set it down untasted.

"Isn't it too bad about Miss Carey?" Mrs. Hastings said.

For the first time he turned and looked at Lorna. "What's too bad?"

Would Be Wiser if He Didn't

Lorna swallowed hard preparatory to making the colossal effort of speaking to him directly, but Mrs. Hastings spared her the trouble.

"She's going tonight—her aunt's ill again."

"I don't think it's serious," Lorna said, "but she wants me to go back, and I'm taking the night train."

"I'll drive you over."

"Please don't—it's such an awkward time for you—just after dinner."

"Nonsense," he returned, almost rudely, and walked out of the room.

Gemma sprang to her feet. "He's tired to death," she said. "He's in that mood you get into when you're overtired—trying to do everything yourself. I wish he'd let the chauffeur drive you to the train—all that way there and back in this bitter cold. You wouldn't care, would you, Lorna, if he didn't take you?"

"No," said Lorna. "I think it would be much wiser if he didn't."

"I'd love to drive you over," Billy said hopefully.

"Why not," said Mrs. Hastings, as if the distance and the cold wouldn't affect Billy. "Go and speak to Andy, Gemma, dear. He'll listen to reason from you."

Gemma rose and left the room. Lorna said to herself that he would not listen to reason—he would insist on driving her to the station no matter what any one said. She hardly knew whether she wanted it or not—it was like some terrible operation that stood between you and death—terrible, and yet when that was past . . .

She lingered in the sitting room. If she went back to the cabin, she was afraid that Andy might come to her room—seizing the first opportunity for an explanation. But she didn't want him to explain. What could either of them say to the other—perhaps on the long drive she would find words to express her horror of what he had done—but not in a hurried moment with his man running up and down stairs to lay out his things, and the maid coming to draw her bath.

When she reached her room, however, she found that there had been no danger. The maid was there packing for her. She was a middle-aged woman, the wife of one of the guides, who came in to help out when the house parties were large. She and Lorna had become great friends.

"We'll all be sorry to see you go, Miss," she said, above the rustle of her tissue paper. "Not that there will be much more fun—after such a tragedy. It's good news about Mr. Andy, tho, isn't it?"

"Yes, indeed—and such a lovely young lady."

"Well, all of these young people nowadays seem very different from those who used to come here in old Mrs. Baird's time. Ben, my husband, tells stories about what happens when he takes them into rough camp in the summer time. Still, I'm glad to see Mr. Andy marrying. Some of us thought he never would."

"A good many people thought that, I imagine."

"When you have the whole world to choose from, I suppose it's hard to make a choice. You'd be surprised, Miss, the way young ladies made fools of themselves—yes, and ladies not so young, either. This room, now—you'd be surprised the way some ladies have fought to be put down here, thinking—well, goodness knows what they thought. Only last summer Mr. Andy said to Mrs. Brown, the housekeeper—'only men in the cabin after this, Mrs. Brown.' You're the first lady to be put down here—but I guess we all know a real lady when we see one."

Lorna's heart contracted—how nearly, had it not been for poor Von Sternwetz, she had stepped out of that rôle. When she came back from her bath, and had put on her heavy, gray tweed coat and skirt for traveling, the woman had one more observation.

"We've all known about this for a long time," she said. "Known, I mean, that Mr. Andy was in love. He had a miniature made of Miss Hastings—the loveliest thing—like an angel set in pearls, and he kept it in his top drawer until he gave it to Mrs. Hastings. Windham, his valet, told me about it last August. He said to me then, 'It's a go, Maria.' I knew he was right."

Lorna smiled mechanically. Somehow the thought of Gemma's face, hidden among Andy's pocket handkerchiefs, seemed to make his engagement more real than anything that had happened so far. She thanked Maria for her trouble and kindness, pressed $5 into her not too reluctant hand, knowing that any other member of the party would have given her $10, and went off to dinner. Only dinner now, between her and that long, long drive.

At dinner she sat next to Claude Lorrington. Lorrington was one of those fortunate people whose time is so completely filled doing things they want to do—whose friends are so exclusively those whom they want as friends that they feel no temptation to adventure into new fields.

He had been perfectly courteous to Lorna, but quite uninterested. Billy had told her a great deal about him.

"Claude ought to marry an heiress," he said, "but he never will. He's too self-indulgent." It seemed to Lorna he hight have married any one, for he was charming and managed to achieve a sort of integrity in his idle, pleasure-loving life by never accepting favors from any of his acquaintances except those he really liked.

He spent a great deal of time with Andy—they had been friends from their boyhood. During the brief hours when Lorna had expected to marry Andy, she had thought, with some pleasure, that Lorrington would be interested—would even, perhaps, be pleased. But now she saw that he was really pleased with the idea of his friend marrying Gemma.

They May Make Each Other Happy

"It's just right," he said. "Rich people ought to marry each other. It's generally assumed that a poor man ought to marry a rich girl—and the other way round—so as to distribute wealth, but it never works out. It's like people of different civilizations marrying—you ought to marry some one with the same economic background. No, these two would have made anyone else wretched—both spoilt and conspicuous and under the impression they can do anything they want to do. They may make each other very happy."

"I'm sure I hope they will."

"It's rather amusing," Lorrington went on, more confidentially. "Andy has always been so sure he would never marry—marriage was a trap—a living death—he never was going to put his head into that noose. I find that people who talk like that fall the fastest when the right person comes along."

"Will you be a case in point some day?"

"I? No, I shall never marry for an excellent reason—I can't afford to marry a poor woman, and I don't think I could contrive to fall in love with a rich one. As a matter of fact, I nearly did fall for Gemma. She has a lot of stuff, that child. But I'm really better pleased with this solution."

Presently he got to his feet, rapped on the table and said in his educated, rather drawling accents: "I don't wish to appear overoptimistic, but I really believe that good has come out of this tragedy—it's stopped Gemma and Andy fooling about and brought them to their senses, and I wish to propose a toast to their happiness—is everybody's glass filled? To Gemma and Andy."

Andy's dark brows drew together. He answered, without rising: "I'm sorry, Claude, but I don't think this is any time for speech making. I'm sure Gemma agrees with me. I've spent the afternoon with sheriffs and undertakers, and I can't respond to good wishes."

Mrs. Hastings sprang up. "There's one thing Andy may as well learn at once," she said gayly, "and that is that he can't suppress his mother-in-law. Of course, we'll drink their healths, and there's no use in being cross, Andy, dear, because that's what we're going to do."

So all the party stood up and drank to Andy and Gemma.

NEVER TO MARRY

By ALICE DUER MILLER

(Copyright: 1943: News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

At this moment Mrs. Hastings pushed her way thru the crowd.

What Has Gone Before

Lorna Carey, attractive 26-year-old mathematics teacher with a Ph. D., swears she will never marry, as she is too interested in her career. But her Aunt Cornelia, who plans parties for Manhattan's elite, becomes ill and persuades Lorna to get a leave of absence from her school to take charge of two parties for Mrs. Hastings and her spoiled daughter, Gemma. At the Hastingses' dinner party Lorna refuses to admit Andy Baird, as he has no card. Then she sees he has got in by some other passage. Mrs. Hastings tells her Andy is a rich young aviator just returned from abroad and is working on an invention for the government. She says Gemma and Andy are to marry when Gemma gets over her fling. Andy invites Lorna to a house party at his Adirondack camp. She goes, but feels like an outsider among Gemma and her giddy friends. Gemma is openly playing around with Von Sternwetz, her ski instructor, but Andy does not seem worried. Lorna learns that a number of women have fallen in love with Andy, particularly Mrs. Ina Edson, who is also at the house party. Altho Billy Bishop is attentive to Lorna, she realizes there is a bond between her and Andy. She sees a mathematics problem on Andy's desk and starts studying it. Andy walks in, and she suggests she help him solve the problem. They work until 5 a. m., and Andy makes her promise to work with him every night but not to tell the other guests. When he asks her how he can repay her she tells him she never intends to marry, but that she would like a professorship in a university. He introduces her to Herbert Hollinger, who is supposed to help her get a professorship. Andy seems to understand Lorna's attitude toward marriage. They kiss and confess their love for each other, but Lorna is disappointed that Andy does not try to overcome her objection to marriage. Von Sternwetz asks Mrs. Hastings if he can marry Gemma. When she objects he shoots at Gemma and then commits suicide.

INSTALMENT VI.

GEMMA explained to Lorna that she had felt in mere humanity that she must say a soothing word to Von Sternwetz alone. She had told him to pretend to go home, and then to stop his car outside the gates of the camp and come back on foot—she would let him in.

She shook her head. "It's a mistake to be humane with foreigners—they don't get it. As soon as I saw him I knew it had been a mistake. I was scared to death, and I don't scare easily. He began to talk about our dying together and finding eternal peace in each other's arms. I said eternal peace was about the last thing I wanted, and then he took out a horrid little blue revolver—fancy his coming out to dinner with a gun!

"He locked the main door, but I managed to sneak over to the other—the one that leads down to the dining room. I thought if I could slide out of that door and lock it behind me, it would take him some time to find his way round—but, of course, that door hasn't any lock. So I just ran for it. I wanted to get Andy.

"For some reason, Andy had left the front of the cabin open and all the lights on. I ought to have known that the instant I got into the light, Stefan would shoot—I did know it, for something inside me suddenly told me to drop, and I fell flat on my face in the snow—and the bullet went over my head. He must have thought he had killed me—anyhow, he killed himself. Poor Stefan. I couldn't imagine killing myself for any girl, if I were a man, could you, Lorna?"

"Well, not for a girl like you, Gemma." Lorna's voice was perfectly friendly.

Gemma grinned at her. "I rather like you for saying that—cold water in the face—very steadying. And it's true. I'm not much. And yet you'll have to admit that men will go on falling in love with me, and not with you—altho you're so much more worth while than I am—and a professor and everything."

"Do you think no man has ever fallen in love with me?"

"Of course I don't. I bet the professors have all been crazy for you. But I was thinking of men like Stefan and Claude Lorrington and Andy—men who think themselves connoisseurs. You're not their dish. Of course, they're fools. You are worth twenty of me—good looking and clever and good. But no man will ever blow out his brains for your sake—and that's rather silly."

Lorna looked at her and thought: What's silly, my girl, is that you can't see things going on under your nose because you're blinded by your own successes. How would you feel if you knew Andy—that well known connoisseur in feminine charms—had been in my arms at the moment you called him——" And then suddenly her heart stood still—suppose that fact were Andy's only alibi—suppose he were to be accused of murdering Stefan thru jealousy—that old, old situation that she had skimmed idly thru in so many novels. How different when it became your own life's story.

Her quick, wild imagination rushed forward—she saw herself testifying in a crowded courtroom—the lawyer saying sternly: "And do you tell this court that Mr. Baird was in your bedroom alone at 2 o'clock in the morning?" Well, that would certainly finish her academic career, yet somehow the thought was not all horror. "This is love," she thought, "true love—you don't feel shame—you feel a sort of wild pride in being compromised with some one you love—you actually like the world to know." It was clear, too, that it would solve all their problems—they would have no choice—they would be married and forget that they had ever had other plans for a life together.

She was brought back by hearing Gemma's voice saying: "You don't like me much, do you? But I like you. I trust you. You see, all the other girls I know are really envious of me—even Dolly and Marion—they'd do me in if they could. But you wouldn't. You just go your own way, not caring what anyone thinks. O, dear, I wish I were like that."

Deep Voices and Heavy Steps

Lorna did not think of an answer, and in the silence she heard the sound of deep voices outside and the trampling and creaking of heavy feet in the snow. The police had arrived—the body was being examined and removed.

The two girls did not speak again, but sat silent, staring into the fire, until after half an hour Andy returned. He held out his hand to Gemma.

"Come, my dear," he said to Gemma, "I want you to go and wake your mother and then see the police."

"You don't mean Mums isn't awake!"

"She hasn't appeared."

"O, isn't that just like her—to sleep thru the whole thing. She thinks she never closes an eye, but she never hears anything that happens."

She rose obediently to her feet and Andy led her away, saying to Lorna over his shoulder as he went, "I think you had better dress, too, and come over to the main building. The police want to question everyone who was on this side of the camp."

Lorna thought the tone cold in contrast to the almost maternal solicitude of his manner to Gemma.

She dressed slowly. His manner—or perhaps Gemma's remarks about him—had made him seem a complete stranger. Impossible for Lorna to believe that an hour before she had been almost swooning with love in his arms. Must she save a total stranger—must she tell the police the truth?

As she walked up the path to the main house, the sky was beginning to turn a pale, cold gray—a faint light illumined the tops of the trees and showed a dark blotch on the snow—colored only by her own imagination.

In the sitting room she found a strange looking group assembled. About the further door menservants were huddled, with their coat collars turned up to hide their pajamas. A few of the women had come downstairs—Marion, who had not remembered to take the cold cream off her square, determined young face—Dolly Gibson, with too much lipstick, too hastily applied. Apparently the sound of the shots had not reached as far as the bachelors' house, for none of them was there. A table on which bridge was being played when Lorna went to bed was now being used by the police—two large, rather awkward state troopers in their heavy uniforms and high boots, who somehow represented terrifyingly the power of the law. Gemma was sitting opposite them, with Andy's hand on her shoulder. Her voice was very low, and tears were flowing slowly down her face. She was nearly at the end of her ordeal when Lorna entered.

"Nothing Else—Absolutely"

"You say you were not engaged to him?"

"O, no."

"Sure about that?"

"O, yes, officer. He was my skiing instructor. I liked him very much—I felt sorry for him, but nothing else—absolutely."

Lorna stood listening, her heart thumping intolerably. Were they trying to establish a motive of jealousy? What ought she to say when her turn came? If only Andy would speak to her and tell her what to do, but he remained aloof with his hand on Gemma's shoulder. The tall head of Edson appeared above those in the doorway. Lorna beckoned him to her and asked what had happened.

He gave her a brief account, so that she had an excuse to ask, "There's no question of its being anything but suicide?"

"O, no. It's clear enough—his own gun—he had a license to carry it—and it was obviously pressed against his forehead."

She felt immensely relieved and a little let down, as everyone does who has resolved to be heroic and finds the necessity for heroism has disappeared.

"Then why are they questioning every one?"

"Just a form; they have to get the facts."

Suddenly the older of the two

Lively Summer Concert Season Promised for City

Ravinia Opens June 29; Grant Park Series to Begin July 6

By Claudia Cassidy.

The summer concert season looks lively enough, with Ravinia opening June 29 and the free concerts at Grant park starting July 6, but the summer operetta season is just as dead as ever. Each spring some new project for big outdoor shows pops up like a hopeful crocus, only to be nipped by the frost of facts. We have no suitable place for such performances. Soldiers' field is a spectacular site for a festival or a pageant, but it lacks the stage, the auditorium, and the acoustics for theatrical performance. If you went there to the Chicago Opera's "Carmen" last summer you know that performance conditions were far below standard.

Pierre Monteux.

Another idea, revived again this season, was to give Wrigley field to the Cubs by day and the Shuberts by night. This fell thru for several reasons, one of them said to be worry about possible damage to a playing field which finds the baseball cleat more sympathetic than the actor's buskin. At best, this scheme never sounded too attractive. It involved cutting an imaginary piece of pie from the stands for an amphitheater and building a portable stage below. Approximately that same plan was carried out by the May Festival at Dyche stadium in Evanston some years ago. On paper it looked all right—not pretty, of course, because a stadium is just as barren as a baseball field—but comfortable and workable. It wasn't comfortable and it didn't work. Acoustics were terrible. The experiment lasted one season and killed the festival deader than a doornail. It hasn't been heard from since.

For my part I'm willing to wait for summer operetta until Chicago can wangle something to rival the St. Louis Municipal theater at Forest Park. This lovely place, with a huge stage caught between the natural proscenium of great trees and with a hillside amphitheater seating more than 10,000 flung out in the frame of cool colonnades, is my idea of what a summer operetta theater ought to be like. It's beautiful and it's comfortable. You can see, you can hear, you can even rent a cushion to sit on. Such a place deserves the success that in 24 seasons has lured about 13,000,000 people to its performances.

Success in this case does not refer snobbishly to artistic endeavor which snubs the box office. The shows aim at popular success and the season has no subsidy, except in the affectionate loyalty of its customers. It pays its own way. The silver jubilee season, just opened with "Balalaika," is giving 1,000 reserved seats each night to men and women in uniform. It looks like a melodious summer. I hope I get a chance to use the key sent by the management in hospitable token of festive welcome—if not this month or next, then late in August when the season ends with the fabled Methuselah of musicals, "Chu Chin Chow."

Year after year I write wistfully about the Municipal Opera, hoping that some doughty Chicagoans will leap to the operetta rescue, building us a hillside habitation even if they have to create the hill and bring the trees on trucks from the lordly forests. Why not, in the vast post-war scheme of things, consider a music center on those much discussed islands which may rise along the lake front? Somewhere in that maze of marvels you could shelter an outdoor theater whose customers would have a lot of things to watch if the show happened to be dull—the stars above, the lake, and that bejeweled beauty, Chicago's skyline. Come to think of it, with such rivals for attention the show wouldn't dare not to be good.

And if post-war speculation seems at the moment a bit like a blue skyrocket to a planet still inhabited by Mars, consider the case of London, even now planning for what it believes will be a post-war boom in opera. Public sentiment favors a national opera subsidized by the government, and the Old Vic-Sadler's Wells project has its own ideas on the subject. Bombed out of its theater in its second century of existence, this honored, nonprofit organization now uses two London theaters and has Tyrone Guthrie as director. Its opera group dwindled to 25 in the worst of the bombings but it now has recovered to a personnel of 80. According to Mr. Guthrie the post-war opera scheme includes a school of opera and a plan to encourage writers and composers to create new operas, all to be sung in English. Emphasis will be on ensemble rather than stars and the whole idea has a familiar ring to ears tuned to the trend of contemporary opinion.

What will happen to our own opera, which is quite another matter from a season of summer operetta, remains fascinating guesswork. It is hard to project a post-war future for an organization so nebulous it doesn't even know what it will do in the autumn of 1943. Almost certainly the Metropolitan will return, perhaps for a fall and a spring season. Whether or not the Chicago Opera will operate as a kind of sandwich between Metropolitan visitations, word from 20 Wacker drive sayeth not. Nowadays our opera expires at the end of each season and is belatedly resurrected in time to start the next one. Most of us philosophically wait to see what happens.

Waiting for information on the Grant park concerts finally paid dividends. According to the Chicago park district, its sponsor, the ninth season of free concerts will open at the band shell east of 11th street Tuesday evening, July 6, with a concert by the Civic Opera orchestra, and will close Saturday evening, Aug. 28, with a concert conducted by Rudolph Ganz. There will be five concerts each week, skipping Monday and Thursday nights, and there will be no concert Saturday evening, Aug. 21, when the 14th annual Chicago Music Festival takes place at Soldiers' field.

No concerts are scheduled this summer for Lincoln, Garfield, or Jackson parks. Curtailment is due to two things: A cut in the Chicago park district appropriation and the fact that the Chicago Federation of Musicians is no longer paying a large share of the cost. The musicians' union is coöperating as cosponsor to the extent of selecting all bands and orchestras to play at Grant park, and of paying such minor expenses as insurance of instruments, cartage, the cost of the announcer, and other incidentals.

Among the additional orchestras and bands to be heard during the season of 38 concerts are the Chicago Symphony orchestra, the Woman's Symphony orchestra, the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra, Cavallo's Symphonic band, Armin Hand's band, Thaviu's band, and orchestras under the direction of Jerzy Bojanowski, George Dasch, Herman Felber, Rico Marcelli, Walter Steindel, and others to be announced later.

Not much is new on the Ravinia front, where the management and the guest conductors wage the usual preliminary battle of programs. When the smoke clears, in a week or two, final announcements will be made. Meanwhile, soloists have been anchored to definite dates, and here is the complete calendar for Ravinia's eighth season of concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, opening Tuesday evening, June 29:

First week—Désiré Defauw conducting. No soloists.

Second week—Howard Barlow conducting. Marjorie Lawrence, soprano, soloist Thursday evening, July 8, and Saturday evening, July 10.

Third week—Pierre Monteux conducting. Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, soloist Saturday evening, July 17.

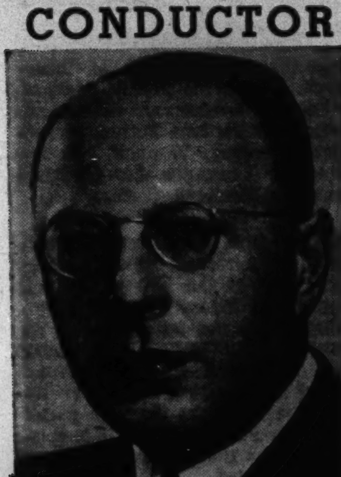
Fourth week—Efrem Kurtz conducting. Mr. Piatigorsky reappears as soloist Tuesday evening, July 20.

Fifth and sixth weeks: George Szell conducting. Artur Rubinstein, pianist, soloist Thursday evening, July 29; Saturday evening, July 31; Tuesday evening, Aug. 3, and Saturday evening, Aug. 7.

Seventh week—Budapest string quartet in four performances of chamber music.

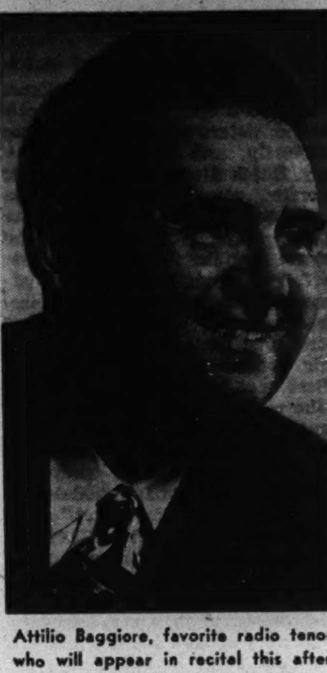
Concerts are played each Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

CONDUCTOR



George Szell, popular Hungarian conductor, who returns to Ravinia this summer to conduct the fifth and sixth weeks of concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. His first performance is Tuesday evening, July 27.

IN RECITAL



Attilio Baggiore, favorite radio tenor, who will appear in recital this afternoon at the Blackstone hotel ballroom to benefit the Chicago Woman's Club campaign to raise money for nurses' scholarships.

Noel Coward to Appear in U. S. After the War

After the war Noel Coward expects to return to this country to appear in the two new plays of his authorship in which he is now acting in London. They are "Present Laughter" and "This Happy Breed."

Current Music News

The De Paul University Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Richard Czerwonky, will present its final concert of the school year at Thorne hall Tuesday evening at 8:30. There are numerous soloists, all students of the school of music.

The Symphony Orchestra of Mexico opened its 16th season last Friday evening at the Palace of Fine Arts, Mexico City, under the direction of Carlos Chavez, known here as conductor and composer at both Orchestra hall and Ravinia. The season includes a 14 week subscription series on Fridays and Sundays; a popular priced series, and a Festival of Contemporary Music, to be held Oct. 22, 26, and 29, the latter featuring music of Hindemith, Chavez, Poulenc, de Falla, Milhaud, Villa-Lobos, Copland, Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Satie, and Bartok. Plans also are being considered for a tour thru Mexico and the southern part of the United States.

Guest conductors for the regular season are Eugene Goossens, who appears the week of July 11, and Sir Thomas Beecham, engaged for the week of July 18. Soloists to be heard are Claudio Arrau, the Chilean pianist, who will play the Chavez Piano Concerto Aug. 6 and 8; Imre Hartmann, cellist in Bloch's "Schelomo," June 25 and 27; Henryk Szeryng, Polish violinist, in Ponce's Violin Concerto Aug. 27 and 29; and the pianists, Miguel Garcia Moro, who plays Poulenc's Concerto Champetre June 11 and 18, and Salvador Ordonez, to be heard in Brahms' Second Concerto Aug. 20 and 22.

The season opened with the first performance in Mexico of Pergolesi's "La Serva Padrona," featuring Irma Gonzales and Roberto Silva. Mr. Silva sang with the Chicago Opera in the season of 1941.

Rudolph Ganz.

Two well known Chicagoans, Rudolph Ganz, pianist, and Attilio Baggiore, tenor, will appear in recital at the Blackstone hotel ballroom this afternoon at 3:30, to aid the Chicago Woman's club campaign to raise funds for nurses' scholarships, a work undertaken at the request of Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, surgeon general of the United States army. Mr. Ganz will play a Chopin group, Griffes' "The White Peacock," which was dedicated to him, MacDowell's "March Wind," his own "Little Sphinx" and "Little Elf," and Debussy's "Ondine" and "Fireworks." Mr. Baggiore, with Robert MacDonald as accompanist, will sing the Invocation of Orpheus from Peri's "Eurydice," Carissimi's "Vittoria," Rossini's "La Danza," Handel's "Where'er You Walk," and songs by Protheroe, Dvorak, Mendelssohn, Hageman, and others.

New York's Stadium Concerts by the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra will open June 17 under the direction of Fritz Reiner, who conducts the first five concerts. In addition to the orchestra concerts there will be four performances by Ballet Theater, scheduled for June 24, 25, 26, and 27, and two performances of opera under the supervision of Herbert Graf, stage director of the Metropolitan.

The Teatro Municipal of Rio de Janeiro opens its season July 30 with the première of "Lo Seischiabo," a new opera by Charles Gomez, which will feature Frederick Jagel, Metropolitan Opera tenor, in the leading rôle. Also engaged for the season are Florence Kirk of the New Opera company, and Charles Kullman, Jarmila Novotna, Leonard Warren, and Raoul Jobin of the Metropolitan.

Dimitri Shostakovich apparently is taking a holiday by returning to his old custom of writing theater music. He is reported at work on a new score for "The Bluebird," and to be planning incidental music for "Othello."

John Gielgud will be the narrator when London hears Aaron Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" at a Promenade concert July 29.

The choir of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Michigan avenue and Delaware place, will sing a choral service this evening at 8 o'clock with Bruce Foote, baritone, singing three of Dvorak's biblical songs. The choir will sing anthems by Rachmaninoff, Bairstow, Tschaikowsky, and Everett Titcomb.

Les Brown Providing Intriguing Music at Sherman

Superb Acrobatic Dance Team Is Hit of Panther Room Show

By Will Davidson.

It really isn't derogatory to say that there's Les music in the Panther room now—but that it's done up Brown. Because the way Les Brown's young and strong lunged crew of musicians play for the crowds in the Hotel Sherman's hot spot is wonderful to behold. The music is loud, it's hot, it jumps. Yet it has a certain variation that sets it apart from a lot of music that is just hot, and loud, and jumpy.

Les believes strongly in individual arranging for swing bands, stating with all of the vehemence his press agent can muster that most name bands all sound the same. The Brown arrangements do have something intriguing about them. Just what it is I'm not musician enough to know, but it's there. Not so strongly as in some of Raymond Scott's best numbers, by any means, but noticeable.

Les presents some good entertainment from the band. The Town Criers are a cute quartet of brothers and sisters who harmonize harmlessly and rather ingratiatingly. Butch Stone is still doing his animated comedy songs, and Roberta Lee does well with the "Five o'Clock Rag" sort of thing. Hal Derwin handles the ballads just tearfully enough, and sundry musicians, such as Drummer Dick Shanahan, Trumpeter Randy Brooks, and Trombonist Dick Noel come out for their specialties.

Best spot in the show, however, is the work of Son and Sonny, the suave and amazing acrobatic dance team that had such a sensational run there once before. They are superb. The College Inn models are back in the "Black Market" skit, which gives them a break. They are entirely fetching and at ease in the black lingerie they model. I strongly resent, however, the off color comments they are forced to accept as a spoken background for their skit. It is in about as poor taste as anything I've ever heard in a good spot.

Charlie Wright and his adorable wife, Dawn Roland, bring their band back home to the Camellia house June 22. I hope the Drake really gives them a chance to do the entertaining, for they are tops. Tuesday, Maureen Holmes arrives to finish out Ray Benson's last two weeks. She's a newcomer to the song field, and very attractive. The Blackstone augmented its Giovanni show with the sparkling dances of Eunice Healy when the new revue opened Friday. Neil Bondsu has until June 22 in this room, then goes to St. Louis. Ramon Ramos follows.

The Palmer House show, which opens the 17th, will feature some of the most expensive and luxurious costumes in the history of Merriel Abbott's always lavish and sartorially exquisite productions. And if I hear correctly about that Andree and Andre act in the show it will be one of the most unusual the Palmer House has presented in its history.

The Chez has added Evelyn Farney, popular dancer, to the Mitzi Green revue opening Friday. As an unusual feature Fred Evans' Adorables will give way in the two finales to the superb Katherine Dunham dancers.

SONGSTRESS

Luba Malina is the tall beauty whose singing is such a popular feature of the current show at the Latin Quarter.

Galente and Leonarda are the dancers now appearing in the Blackhawk. They'll be there another week. This coming Wednesday the Imaginators, young impressionist trio, replaces Dick Buckley for an indefinite run. They do the sort of things the Makebelieves did, and are good.

Boswelling the Bistros:

It was nine years ago that Larry Adler tooted his first toot on a harmonica in the Empire room of the Palmer House. He's a far better entertainer now. A very impudent gent, but highly amusing. . . . Winnie Hoveler and her girls go into New York's La Conga June 14. . . . Fat Billy Blair is the center of a lot of attention. He might front Chuck [1A] Foster's band or he might go with a more famous one now starring here. . . . I just wonder if the hot weather makes Billy see the error of his weigh.

Jose Ferrer Acquires Play, "Night Song"

Jose Ferrer has acquired a play which he plans to produce on Broadway next fall. Entitled "Night Song," it was written by Howard D. Richardson, an army air forces cadet. The play will have music by Douglas Moore. It is "based on a North Carolina version of the Barbara Allen legend." Mr. Ferrer expects to costar in it with his wife, Uta Hagen. Robert Edmond Jones will design the scenery and Eugene Loring will devise the choreography.

Drama Notes

"The Three Sisters," now entering its fourth and final week at the Erlanger theater, has some remarkable figures to divulge. This is the proper time to divulge them, for next Saturday's performances will be the last gathering of the remarkable acting clan Katharine Cornell brought together for her Chekhov revival. During three weeks of pre-Broadway touring, beginning Nov. 30, 1942, in Washington, the play grossed $80,000 even tho the pre-Christmas lull is traditionally a slow period at theater box offices. The New York run—123 performances in 15 weeks—brought in another $305,000. Six weeks on the road in Boston, Buffalo, Toronto, Detroit, Cleveland, and Pittsburgh accounted for $135,000 more. Here in Chicago the total intake for the four weeks at the Erlanger will approximate $100,000. The grand total therefore is about $620,000.

This sounds, as Variety magazine would say, like healthy coin. But, as a matter of fact, it does not bring in much profit to Miss Cornell and her director-husband, Guthrie McClintic. Salaries are huge, and during a tour railroading runs up important costs. Despite capacity houses, it was not until the end of the second week here that the Chicago engagement was breaking even. The expense of such an all-star revival and the risk of choosing a none too popular play certainly indicate that Miss Cornell and Mr. McClintic are not in theater business primarily for the money.

What does the future hold for the Chicago stage? This, at deadline time, is a question without any clear answer. A return engagement of "Junior Miss"—the original Boston company this time—at popular prices, seems to be in the offing for the Erlanger theater, but no contract has been signed; nor will it be, in all probability, until the prosperity of the current Detroit engagement begins to taper off. Another likely arrival is Frank McCoy's revival of "Abie's Irish Rose," which has done smashing business in the first three weeks of its touring career. Also ZaSu Pitts might like to recover herself by coming here in "The Bat," in which she is co-featured with Jane Darwell and Warren William of the movies. Except for these three light attractions, the future is murky.

Peggy Drake, the new ingénue who joined the cast of "Good Night, Ladies" at the Blackstone last Tuesday, was born in Vienna. At the age of 2 she was brought by her parents to Salt Lake City. Her father is Carl Meyer, who has appeared extensively in light opera both here and in Europe. Peggy's first important dramatic training was obtained in the Max Reinhardt school.

The St. Louis Municipal opera opened its big season of outdoor operettas last Wednesday in the beautiful amphitheater in Forest park. The first opera, which continues thruout this week, is "Balalaika." Among the artists engaged for the 25th anniversary season are Marthe Errolle, Irra Petina, Gladys Baxter, Evelyn Wyckoff, Jimmy Savo, Bob Lawrence, Joseph Macaulay, and Leonard Ceeley.

During the last war Joseph Fields, who wrote "The Doughgirls," now at the Selwyn, helped raise $60,000 for navy relief when, during his service an as ensign, he concocted "Biff Bang," an all-navy show. His navy career, however, was by no means confined to literary work. Before the war ended he became a lieutenant [j. g.], commanding the gun crew of a transport to Finland.

—DURIVAGE.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

HILARY AIDAN ST. GEORGE SAUNDERS was Chicago's most exciting literary visitor in many moons . . . exciting because he is now the world's best selling author . . . the 6 million sale of Mr. Schicklegruber's "Mein Kampf" is put in the shade with his 12 millions . . . exciting because he is a truly engaging, real human being.

But first about those fantastic sales. . . . Mr. Saunders is the author of "Combined Operations," that straightforward, thrilling record of the Commandos which the Book of the Month club sent to its members this month . . . of "Bomber Command," "Coastal Command," "Front Line," "The Battle of Britain" . . . all official British government publications . . . available at cost to every Englishman . . . he has the knack of making into a thrilling, stirring narrative for every man the hard facts about this every man's war . . . his books are popular, current, panoramic, living history . . . hence the staggeringly large sales.

A True Democrat.

Simultaneously with the choice of "Combined Operations" by the Book of the Month club Mr. Saunders arrived in America . . . his arrival shadowed by the effulgent presence of England's No. 1 writer as well as her No. 1 great man. . . . Mr. Saunders and I agreed that when the sands of time have sifted thru a century or so, Mr. Churchill's speeches will be read by school children in the same way that the speeches of the great Greek orators are read by today's school children . . . for their beauty of language and as great orations even tho by that time the burning and historical immediacy of their appeal has ceased to exist.

Mr. Saunders, like Winston Churchill, seemed to those who met him truly democratic. He is open-faced, open-minded, and openhearted. He talks, of course, like an Englishman educated at Oxford. But he looks like a big, honest, friendly, second-generation Swede from Minnesota, with his sandy hair, his square face, his gentle smile, his firm jaw, his tired, kindly but sharp eyes, and his air of being at home with anybody . . . the kind of air that Americans are wont to feel is typically American. . . . He is just what our own college boys used to call "a good egg."

Architecture Like Life.

Mr. Saunders was the guest of honor at a small dinner given by the Chicago chapter of the International PEN. . . . a world-wide association of writers, of which John Galsworthy was president from its founding until his death in 1933. . . . It was held in the lovely Empire green and silver-mirrored fountain room of a famous Chicago club. . . . Mr. Saunders said it looked as if Mme. de Pompadour had dreamed it. . . . It led him to the observation that American architects have an instinct for the appropriate . . . the canyons of New York were startling but beautiful, he said. Mr. Saunders was sitting on my right at that moment. On my left was William D. Clark of the British Press Service, Mr. Saunders' guide and friend . . . noted for his wit . . . who quipped: "I always say that American architecture is like American life, tall story upon tall story."

After dinner Mr. Saunders told two not tall but true and spine-thrilling stories. . . . We went into the drawing room, closed all the doors, turned out all of the lights except one, gathered round him as one used to in ghost story telling days, and heard about the fantastically dramatic adventures of the Commandos. . . . One of the stories you can read in "Combined Operations"—the one about the capture of the lighthouse off the French coast when the German in charge fainted from sheer fright and a handful of German men done up in hair nets were nabbed. The other story made me want to ask Mr. Saunders if Helen MacInnes had got her material for "Assignment in Brittany" from him.

With Friendly Frankness.

When it was all over, the lights were turned up and everybody blinked himself or herself back to Chicago, United States of America, and finally went home . . . Mr. Saunders, and Mr. Clark, and Arthur Meeker Jr., who is secretary of the PEN, stopped in for more talk in front of our fireplace and behind rejuvenating liquid. Mr. Saunders asked the most intelligent questions I had heard any visitor ask about the way Americans feel about the war and the peace . . . talked with the friendly frankness that gives an impression of being charmingly indiscreet, just as he talked before the PEN . . . the kind of intimacy that always makes a group glow and come alive and become itself indiscreet and confiding. . . . But after it was all over I realized that never once had Mr. Saunders really spoken an indiscreet word, but that he had really been masterfully discreet . . . because by nature and training he is one with whom any confidence, either public or private, would be safe.

That is why he is the ideal father confessor of the Commandos . . . of any group he writes about . . . and that is the way he writes these official government books. . . . Into the official data he breathes life with the stories which the men who return tell him. . . . He has that rare gift of being all things to all men. . . . He has, by choice, no rank—says that thus nobody has to call him sir.

He Had Good Training.

The technical reason why his books are so popular is that Mr. Saunders has been trained in writing the most exciting kind of stories . . . mysteries . . . detective stories . . . spy and espionage tales. . . . He is, with John Palmer, "Francis Beeding," one of the most popular mystery and thriller writers in English. . . . They also took a joint flyer in historical romance in "So Great a Man," about Napoleon . . . with the pseudonym "David Pilgrim."

He joined his old friend, John Palmer, in Geneva from Balliol college, Oxford . . . to which he returned after joining up at the age of 17 in the first World war. . . . Charles Morgan, author of "The Fountain," was his roommate at Oxford . . . he once acted in a college production of Hardy's "Dynasts" with Raymond Massey. . . . Both Mr. Palmer and Mr. Saunders were for 17 years members of the permanent secretariat at the league of nations. . . . He left there in 1939 to join the air ministry in London and to start becoming the world's most popular author.

Flattery or Truth?

"Most popular" may well be true in more senses than in mere sales figures. . . . Indeed, he numbers among his friends the greatest of the earth, and, one is certain, also the least. One sure way of making friends is by making such appreciative remarks as he did about the not overlavish PEN dinner . . . or perhaps it was simply a grim war time truth . . . "This is the best dinner I have had in two years."

John Brophy, whose novel about the Commandos, "Spearhead," was published last week by Harper. He was also the author of "Immortal Sergeant."

There Is a Good Side to Gremlins

"THE GREMLINS" [from the Walt Disney production], by Flight Lt. Roald Dahl. [Random House, $1.]

"THE GREMLINS OF LIEUT. OGGINS," by Irwin Shapiro. [Julian Messner, Inc., $1.50.]

So you don't believe in gremlins and their girl friends, the fifinellas, and the baby widgets? Before it's too late, you'd better profit by the example of Samuel Tilden Oggins, who hailed from Missouri and had to be shown—painfully. Three authors of a single mind have set out to show you—merrily—that the little imps have a good side to them. In fact that they're calling off their tricks on allied flyers and ganging up on the axis.

Of the three books, children will like best the Dahl story with the inimitable illustrations of Walt Disney. Adults should find the tale of Lt. Oggins refreshing relaxation from victory gardening. It is written in mock heroic couplets.

Each author has given individual characteristics to his gremlins. All add a breezy chapter to mythology, 1943 style.

"I WAS ON CORREGIDOR," by Amea Willoughby. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

One might think the subject of Corregidor a little exhausted by now, but readers of Amea Willoughby's book have a surprise in store, for it is engrossing.

The author is the wife of Woodbury Willoughby, who went to Manila in 1939 as financial adviser to Francis B. Sayre, United States high commissioner to the Philippines, and in the first 50 pages of her book she tells of pleasantly lazy days in Manila and of official visits to "impregnable Corregidor." But even then the air was full of portents, for the white man already had lost face in the far east, she writes, and year after year his prestige was running downhill.

She writes in graphic detail of the bombing of Manila, of the flares set off by fifth columnists to outline Nichols field, and of her evacuation to Corregidor on Christmas eve with the official family of Manila. Calmest of them all, in that hurried trip on an inter-island boat, was Mrs. Quezon, wife of the president, "in a yellow cotton housecoat, with her hair hanging down her back in braids and magnificent diamonds in her ears."

Once on Corregidor, the official ladies lived in a lateral of the Malinta tunnel, their festooned laundry making it look like an oriental bazar. They ate with the doctors and nurses and, when they could be of service, helped with the wounded. As the author's husband was in charge of the millions of dollars of American and Philippine money carried from Manila, her job was helping record it.

Many are the tales she tells: of the Filipino storekeeper who, remembering how fond the Japanese are of whisky, forbore to pour it out, as so many did, but took each bottle, poured off a small quantity, and refilled it with Lysol before fleeing; of the marine at Corregidor who used to apply for week-end leave to Bataan to "clean out a pocket of them yellow bellies"; of the diary taken from the body of a young Filipino, daily entries in which were like prayers, asking again and again that American planes might come—"And in the whole diary," she wrote, "no word of doubt that they would not come"; of the daily news bulletin from the Voice of Freedom which they called their daily dose of buck-you-uppo; of how staggered the morale was when word came of the American expeditionary force to Ireland and the Wrong Way Corrigan jokes it engendered; of the gallantry of men and nurses alike and the soldier who, after his ambulance had been reduced to dust before his eyes, said of it laconically, "Well, it jarred me some."

Much of the book is devoted to the escape from Corregidor and the rescue of the gold. When her husband reached San Francisco, she relates, officials reproached him. The millions in gold and silver had arrived in good order, the securities were there, he had done a nice job, but, sourly, "It's $306 short." With that Mr. Willoughby reached inside his brief case and pulled out a piece of gold the size of a matchbox. "Is this it?" he asked wearily.

Pacific Islands Described: Good Reference Work

"ISLANDS OF THE PACIFIC," by Hawthorne Daniel [Putnam, $2.50]

Reviewed by Mason Warner.

This book is a good mail order catalog of more than 10,000 islands in the Pacific Ocean. It is comprehensive, terse, concise—and as discreetly restrained in selling talk as if the eyes of the federal trade commission had been glaring over the compiler's shoulder.

Its compilation was an Herculean task, for it gives distances between the various groups from the Philippines to the Aleutians; describes the location, contour, size and formation of important [and many unimportant] islands, atolls and reefs; tells of the physical characteristics and customs of the inhabitants; truthfully depicts the different climates and does not suppress fever, dysentery and other facts of life in the tropical isles; and briefly notes the flora and fauna of the different groups.

A number of good maps and a practical all-embracing index add to the value of the book as a reference work. But, if you have a copy, make these corrections: [page 144] The natives of the Solomon Islands use shell money, not "porpoise teeth," in transactions between themselves. Then, too, [page 194] strike out "2,000,000 tons" as the rubber production of Borneo in 1939. The United States department of commerce announced the total world production for that year as 1,017,458 tons, of which the entire Middle East produced 985,141 tons.

Authorities are not in agreement on the spelling of the names of some Polynesian and Melanesian Islands, but they do agree on Upolo, not Apolo, and Apolima, not Apolina, in the Samoan group.

Somehow, "Islands of the Pacific" causes the reader to suspect the author's knowledge of his subject was gained by library research, not by travel.

Author Gives Lowdown on World War II.

"MEN IN MOTION," by Henry J. Taylor. [Doubleday, Doran, $3.]

Reviewed by Edward Barry.

Germany will attempt to end the present war before she is exhausted, will jettison Hitler and his group, and will start building up her strength for World War III.

Europe is an exhausted, worked out "dust bowl" which will never be able to support its population and has not been able to for a generation.

Europe's salvation must be worked out not by Americans but by Europeans themselves in the hard way—by opening up Africa, for instance, as our forefathers opened up America.

The sudden, unprecedented technological advance of the last few generations has put the human mind and temperament centuries behind their tools and created a lopsided condition favorable to war.

America did not "let Europe down" after the last war. We let her down later when we partially Europeanized and "collectivized" ourselves instead of giving the world a badly needed example of self-faith.

This war is not the end of anything. The world is just starting.

The interest of the world is not in the glory of this war. The work of the world is devoted to guns and death. The thought of the world is on food and peace.

The Germans probably never had the air strength they were given credit for.

We [Americans] need a new start, not in Europe but at home.

These are a few of the conclusions which Henry J. Taylor, reporter and business man, puts forth in his latest opus. Reading "Men in Motion" is like having a well traveled, well connected, voluble and opinionated man grab one by the lapel and pour a torrent of facts, theories, predictions, and proposals into one's ear.

The book has the fascination which nearly everything that purports to give the lowdown and the inside has. It also possesses a certain plausibility, for Mr. Taylor seems to be a confidant of the great and to know virtually everything. He can explain the allied nations' basic war strategy as clearly as if he had been concealed behind a vase at Casablanca; he can tell you what was in Rommel's mind when he began his push to the east in the spring of 1942.

The book is not made up entirely of this sort of thing. There is much excellent narrative in it, for the author has the knack of communicating to his reader the tenseness and excitement of war time travel by air. Also, there is an able description of an experience which, more than any other, perhaps, is typical of the enlightened age we live in—the experience of being bombed.

"Men in Motion" is a valuable and stimulating book, whether or not the reader agrees with Mr. Taylor's ideas. To attempt to refute these ideas will in some cases require an amount and intensity of thinking which may result in clarifying some of the worst of the still unsolved post-war problems.

"FOUNDED UPON THE SEAS," by Walter Oakeshott. [Macmillan, $3.50.]

This little volume, printed in England at the Cambridge university press, is a narrative of English maritime and overseas enterprises during the period, 1550 to 1616, when John Hawkins, Sir Francis Drake, and Sir Walter Raleigh were active. Well illustrated with quaint maps and sketches. —A. C.

What's Going On in Europe? 2 Books Tell

"WE WERE FREE," by Constantin Joffé. [Smith & Durrell, $2.75]
"THE FIGHTING FRENCH," by Raoul Aglion. [Holt, $3.]

Reviewed by Arthur Frederic Otis.

It is odd that two books by different authors, from different publishers, should so definitely complement each other — and that they should be released only a week apart. To get a clear picture of what happened to Frenchmen in 1940—not to France, but to Frenchmen—both should be read.

"We Were Free" is the story of a Russian who made France his adopted country, who volunteered for service in the French army, and was taken prisoner by the Germans when French resistance collapsed. It is almost entirely a story of the prison camp near Vienna, where Joffé and thousands of other Frenchmen underwent a living death.

If you have taken stock in the various rumors which divide Germany, into two classes, with the common people out of sympathy with the Hitler group, you will be enlightened by the account of the prisoners' progress along a steep road lined with jeering civilians who rushed out to snatch canes from the walking wounded so that they fell.

"Prisoners of war in Germany" is a vague phrase until its exact significance is revealed thru these pages. Such as the case of the Frenchman who could not read the German signs stating that smoking was forbidden and so was shot dead as he smoked.

Of the whole narrative, Louis Bromfield writes, in his foreword: "Of all the books I have read about this war, none is more revealing than this one. Its very simplicity and directness produce a devastating sense of reality."

"The Fighting French" is another first hand account, this time by a French officer who happened to be in Beirut when news of Petain's request for an armistice was broadcast. He heard De Gaulle's historic radio plea of June 18, 1940, which was the beginning of the Free French — later the Fighting French—movement.

He traces the effect of this electrifying message on Frenchmen all over the world, and recounts the progress of the movement from then until now.

This book is more than a first person story of experience, because it represents a vast amount of research.

It's Hard to Stop Reading This Mystery

"CRIMSON FRIDAY," by Dorothy Cameron Disney. [Random House, $2.]

Reviewed by Drexel Drake.

The Village of Merristone had puzzled for a year over the enigma presented by Mrs. V. Moran. Thruout that time, living with her oldish maid, Hannah, in a furnished house rented from the local bank, she had succeeded in avoiding even a nodding acquaintance with any of her neighbors. Hannah did the household shopping in the early mornings and was equally noncommunicative.

What made the puzzle particularly provoking to Harriet Strings and Aunt Mildred, and their gossip circles, was that on such occasions when Mrs. Moran was observed out of doors, she wore some outlandish museum costume and led two cats on leashes. What went on inside the house remained carefully guarded from the villagers until Mrs. Moran entertained Jane and Alan Blake at tea. But even that exotic ceremony had not prepared Merristone for the terrifying revelations that were to be unfolded after the finding of Hannah's corpse in the basement of the adjoining house that the Blakes were remodeling.

The reader finds himself getting into this story with steadily mounting apprehension. The atmosphere of impending tragedy is built with remarkable skill. There is such a sensation as might be produced by following a maze of passages, dank and creepy and foreboding, creating almost a half formed wish to turn back, rather than encounter what may be beyond the next turn. Yet, the spell to go on is irresistible.

Altho this story has distinctly a war background, it offers positive diversion for any one seeking recess from the stark realism of war dispatches. It is a nerve tingling adventure in northwestern Africa while the Gestapo was still there in force. It is packed with such exciting frills as murderous Arabs lurking in dark passageways, beautiful women using their wiles to ferret out important secrets, bloody encounters, and sharp contests of detective finesse.

Paul Kilgerrin, detective of international repute, is sent to Morocco to accomplish one of two results with respect to expatriated Prof. Granger: Either to bring back to the United States the professor's secret formula for petroleum, or to make sure it never gets into axis hands. Just about every spy in Fez knows why Kilgerrin is there the moment he arrives. All of the secrecy employed in Washington was just wasted effort. Of course, that makes it quite a task for Kilgerrin.

Mr. Leonard does this kind of stuff with a sure hand and satisfying results.

Edith Talbot, young New England divorcée, went to New York to become a WAAC. Instead, she ran into one continuous round of terrifying experiences, just because she was assigned to a hotel room near some mysterious neighbors. Among other things, some one deposited the corpse of a man in her room.

After that, there was new excitement at every turn, and it all led to amazing revelations for Edith, along with hairbreadth escapes from the plots of ruthless traitors. This is strictly entertainment, but it never gets dull.

A Historical Novel About Williamsburg

"DAWN'S EARLY LIGHT," by Elswyth Thane. [Duell, Sloan, and Pearce, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Edith Weigle.

Colonial Williamsburg is the center of this readable and entertaining historical novel, and, thru its chapters go Thomas Jefferson, Washington, Patrick Henry, Cornwallis, Marion, Greene, and many others whose names were news in 1775 and 1776.

Events are seen thru the eyes of a tall, cultured, personable and rather timid young Englishman, Julian Day, who, when he first lands in Williamsburg from his homeland, is a Tory, a loyal supporter of the king, but who in time falls under the spell of the vigorous, young minded colonists and begins to understand their cause. He is received with the famous southern hospitality in the community and becomes a schoolmaster there.

Here the author paints one intriguing picture after another of the town now restored by John D. Rockefeller Jr. There are descriptions of the beautiful houses which were built with an eye to the climate, of the people who lived in them and of the customs of the time. And there is a gentle and rather sentimental little love story that runs thru the pages.

In a very human way Miss Thane recounts the rising wrath of the southerners against the stupid, high-handed treatment of the king, and, finally, the open rebellion and the battles of the revolution that were fought in the territory around Williamsburg and Charleston. Her word portrait of Francis Marion, the uncouth, brilliant fighter and one of the great heroes of his day, is unforgetable, as are similar glimpses of Lafayette in his campaign against Cornwallis, and Nathaniel Greene, who threw aside his Quaker belief in peace to fight for freedom for his country.

The end papers of this book are identical, being maps of Williamsburg. Had one of them been a map of the area in which the battles were fought it would have been much more valuable to the reader. That the author has done painstaking research over the entire period is evident thru her story which, while being lively and full bodied, has the ring of historic truth about it.

Trio of Deft New Novels from Sweden

"RIDE THIS NIGHT," by Vilhelm Moberg. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]
"THE SHINING SEA," by Kjerstin Gorranson-Ljungman. [Sheridan House, $2.50.]
"MY DARLING FROM THE LIONS," by Edita Morris. [Little, Brown, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark.

All three of these novels are exceptional. All three are by Swedish authors and have Swedish characters and Swedish backgrounds. "Ride This Night" was translated by Henry Alexander and "The Shining Sea" by Barrows Mussey. We wouldn't know how these two novels read in the original, but if they read half as well in Swedish as they do in English, they read very well indeed.

"Ride This Night," altho it deals with the fight of the Swedish peasants and freeholders against the tyranny and oppression of the nobles during the reign of Queen Christina in the 17th century, is the most burningly contemporary and timely of the three. It invites comparison with Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down," and as far as we are concerned, it does the job much more convincingly and effectively. "Ride This Night," by "Sweden's foremost living novelist," is an exciting narrative and a heartening, highly suggestive parable. It materially strengthens one's conviction that there are far worse things to be suffered in this world than death.

"The Shining Sea" was awarded the prize for the best Swedish novel of the year. We are sure the judges could have done a great deal worse. This is a first person story, simple and austere, nothing if not elemental and earthy — the sort of novel that Willa Cather might have written had she been born John Millington Synge. There are passages in "The Shining Sea" that are frank to the point of coarseness, and there are occasional lapses into sentimentalism, but when you finish this book you are not ashamed to admit that you are a member of the human race, even if you are not exactly in the mood for shouting the fact from the housetops.

The author of "My Darling from the Lions" was born and schooled in Sweden, but left it when she was 18. Since then she has lived in England, France, and all over. Since then, also she has acquired a new language. And her handling of this new language is really something — something to cause most native born American writers to feel that they were cheated out of their national literary and linguistic heritage by reason of the fact that they weren't born in Sweden of Swedish parents. But there is more, a whole lot more, than just deft, graceful, vivaciously witty writing in "My Darling from the Lions." There is, to put it all too briefly, a refreshingly youthful and gayly romantic brace of love stories, charmingly developed and charmingly consummated; and there is a passel of characters, and we really mean characters, that for richness and variety makes the Forsytes of Galsworthy appear in retrospect like so much genealogical deadwood.

The only weakness of this novel is to be found in the philosophical underpinning. It, in our opinion, is decidedly shaky. Most of the candles in this story burn at both ends. But at least they burn with a bright, if not a hard, gemlike flame.

Lenore Ulric Welcomes Variety of Present Role

New Ulm, Minn. Girl Appearing in 'Doughgirls'

By Cecil Smith.

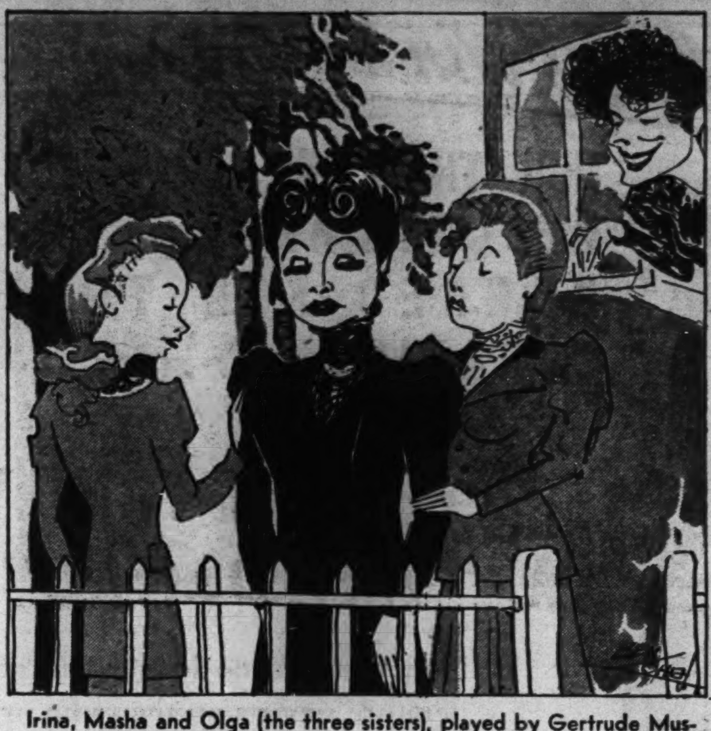
The week's mail included a justifiably irate letter from A. Scott of New Ulm, Minn., taking umbrage at another Chicago newspaper for calling Lenore Ulric "Wisconsin born." New Ulm gladly and eagerly claims the Russian sniper of "The Doughgirls" as its native daughter, and wants it understood that she owes her allegiance to the state represented by the gopher and not the badger.

For my edification Mr. Scott encloses a handsome brochure telling all about New Ulm in prose and photographs. I have never been there, but since pictures do not lie it must be an attractive little city [1940 population 8,640], with its broad, shaded parkway known as the Broadway boulevard, its several wooded parks, its lakes, its homes, its churches, and a very modern looking cinema called the New Ulm. Moreover, it is a historic place, for two important battles with the Indians took place here, and it is an educational center, for it is the seat of Dr. Martin Luther college.

I am glad to pay tribute to the civic pride of New Ulm, but my original purpose was to write about Miss Ulric and what happened to her after she left New Ulm, and perhaps I'd better stick to that intention. All the same, it is handy to have added Miss Ulric's name to those of the other two Minnesota artistic celebrities I can remember without running to a reference book—Sinclair Lewis and Florence Macbeth.

"THE THREE SISTERS"



Irina, Masha and Olga (the three sisters), played by Gertrude Musgrove, Katharine Cornell and Judith Anderson, console each other while sister-in-law Natasha (Ruth Gordon) looks on unconcerned. "The Three Sisters" is at the Erlanger.

[Drawing by Ben Cohen.]

You would not associate Minnesota with the Lenore Ulric you see in "The Doughgirls," with her trusty rifle slung across her shoulder and her Russian accent that sounds as if it had been laid on with a trowel. And, indeed, a remarkable career on the American stage has separated her from New Ulm and made her national property.

It was the late David Belasco who first fully appreciated her smouldering talent. Her dusky beauty and intense emotionalism raised her to stardom, under his direction, in such well remembered exotic dramas as "Tiger Rose," "The Son Daughter," "Kiki," and "Lulu Belle." The type of rôle in which she became famous is perhaps best characterized by the title of the play she last appeared in here, in 1933, "Hard Boiled Angel." [In the interest of historicity it is necessary to point out that the management got cold feet about that title, and three days before the performance changed it to plain "Angel," which was nicer but less descriptive.]

Since Belasco's death Miss Ulric has been, so to speak, on her own, altho the Belasco influence is still important in her professional life, and she often mentions his name in conversation. She admits that she would like to branch out into rôles of many sorts, and she welcomes her part in "The Doughgirls" as a juicy opportunity to break away from type casting. In recent seasons she also has appeared in such contrasting rôles as Martha in Max Reinhardt's Hollywood Pilgrimage theater production of "Faust" and the Lynn Fontanne rôle in "Idiot's Delight," which she undertook at Michiana Shores.

In offstage life Miss Ulric retains the quality of fascination which makes her such a personality on the stage. She is human and direct, vigorously candid in her opinions, and forthright without being unfeminine. Like Natasha in "The Doughgirls," she loves to walk and frequently covers the mile between her hotel and the Selwyn theater on foot four times on matinée days.

Another celebrity of the theater, George Jessel, has leapt into prominence this season, first by spanning the Broadway season in an exceptionally successful vaudeville revue called "Show Time," and now by publishing, thru Random House, his autobiography. He calls the book "So Help Me," as if to indicate that every word of it is true.

This seems like an unnecessary precaution, for nobody could invent the tales Mr. Jessel tells about himself. The bulk of the book, or at least so it seemed to me, is occupied with play by play descriptions of the game of love as Mr. Jessel has played it. If you are attracted by an utter lack of inhibition in the discussion of the causes of his various divorces, this is the book for you.

Since Mr. Jessel has devoted an unusual amount of time and thought to his connubial adventures, his explicit retailing of them naturally shrinks the total page space available for anecdotes and memorabilia about the theater and its people. As a footnote to the recent history of the stage, "So Help Me" is largely disappointing.

The foreword is written by, of all people, William Saroyan. In between the lines you can read that even the humanity loving Saroyan was somewhat taken aback by Mr. Jessel's conception of the things it is desirable to be honest about in print, but he manages to work his remarks around into a nice puff at the end. That is more than I can do.

Players' Club Gives Data to N. Y. Library

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—The late Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, if you were to go by the biographical files of the Players' club in New York, was the most interesting, if not the most popular actress of the first 30 years of the 20th century. Maude Adams was the second most interesting and Ethel Barrymore the third.

Ethel Barrymore.

This rating was adduced from the 600 clipping files of the Players, which were last week turned over by the club to Director Franklin Hopper of the New York Public library, after having rested in and outgrown the space available for them in the old Edwin Booth home in Gramercy park, which that actor dedicated to his fellow actors the night of Dec. 31, 1888.

It isn't an altogether fair rating, inasmuch as it could easily reflect the taste and preferences of the librarians who did the clipping and filing. But it does indicate that from 1900 to 1930 or thereabouts there was more publicity given these three actresses in newspapers and magazines than any others.

Mrs. Fiske's record fills six of the portfolios. Miss Adams' clippings take up five and Miss Barrymore's four. A dozen of the older favorites fill three books each, and as many more take two books apiece. But all the rest of the chosen 600 fit very neatly into a single portfolio each.

Which isn't surprising, excepting that older playgoers would naturally assume that so popular an actor as the late George M. Cohan, for example, or Billie Burke, Lionel Barrymore, Blanche Bates, Georgie Cayvan, Marguerite Clark, Fanny Davenport, Arnold Daly, Maxine Elliott, William Faversham, Helen Hayes, Herbert Kelcy, Effie Shannon, Robert Mantell, Julia Marlowe, Chauncey Olcott or a hundred others of the chosen 600 would have built up an equally imposing collection.

Lillian Russell gets three books and Annie Russell two. E. H. Sothern is given three and his wife and co-star, Miss Marlowe, as noted, has but one. Jane Cowl fills three books, and so do George Arliss, Judith Anderson, Margaret Anglin, Alice Brady, and Grace George. While Ethel Barrymore takes up five books and Lionel only one, John, the cut-up, fills two. He could, I feel sure, have filled a couple dozen if the clippers had followed him closely.

It isn't surprising that Maurice Evans isn't mentioned, seeing that the Players' librarians did not get much past 1930 in their formal filing. The first Evans hit was scored in 1935, when he played Romeo to the Cornell Juliet, and the Dauphin in "St. Joan" the same season. When the Players' loose clippings, which accompany the gift, are added, the current Shakespearean leaders will undoubtedly be included.

But it is a little surprising to find Mr. Evans' English contemporary, John Gielgud, who did not come to America until 1928 and then appeared only briefly in "The Patriot," which failed, filling two books. In 1936, however, he did play "Hamlet" in New York for 108 performances, which broke the Edwin Booth and John Barrymore records. Later Evans played the uncut version of "Hamlet" for 96 performances one season, and added 40 more the season following, which tops all other Broadway experiences with this particular classic.

Lina Abarbanell, the first of the touring "Merry Widows," is alphabetically honored by heading the list of 600, and Blanche Yurka, by the same ruling, closes it. There are many forgotten anecdotes of the old-timers and many, too, of the old-old-timers, which have been forgotten. And many half-tone illustrations of them when they, too, were young and gay.

Mr. Hampden was conscious of these, I suspect, when he concluded his presentation remarks by reading the W. E. Henley tribute to the beloved departed in his "Ballade of Dead Actors." "Where are the passions they essayed, and where the tears they made to flow? Where the wild humors they portrayed for laughing worlds to see and know? Othello's wrath and Juliet's woe? Sir Peter's whims and Timon's gall? And Millamant and Romeo? Into the night go one and all. . . ."

It was good of the Players to give these files to the public library, that they may be made available to any public interested in them, and wise as well. The Gramercy park clubhouse is stuffed with treasures which only a few hundred visitors a year ever see. Its library is probably the most complete and most valuable theatrical library in America, if not in the world.

As the older players, and the older stage enthusiasts, whose souvenirs were of the theater, go seeking their next adventure they most frequently leave their theatrical books, programs, and pictures to the Players. The accumulations carry such sentimental value that it is not easy for the actors to give them up, and so they accumulate and gather more dust than attention.

Champion of Jews' Right to Palestine

"MAX NORDAU: a Biography," by Anna and Maxa Nordau. [The Nordau committee, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy.

The two daughters of the subject of this fascinating biography have given us a faithful and at times spirited portrait of their father, free, for the most part, of obtrusive and exaggerated filial adulation. One can even accept, with certain neutral reservations, their claim for him to greatness.

In the 80 odd years [1849-1932] of Nordau's life, he did an enormous amount of writing, literary, scientific, and political. His was an exceedingly versatile Muse, as a glance at the list of the products of his pen, given in chronological sequence at the end of the volume, testifies. If there be added to this the ephemeral pieces that he did as "newspaper" man, reporter, correspondent, feuilletonist, and column conductor, one is amazed at his enormous output.

Besides these journalistic activities, the man practiced successfully his profession of medicine and found time to philosophize, to travel extensively, and to help found and lead the Zionist movement—to mention only a few of his avocations. His literary as well as his scientific work was of a very high order. He was one of those rarely gifted men who exercise many talents and do many things equally well—excellently, it may be said—yet who are not supreme in any single field.

Nordau's fame will rest on his personality. He will not be remembered for his clever and original "Conventional Lies" or his brilliant and prophetic "Degeneration," both of which books created a world-wide sensation and made their author internationally famous or infamous, nor even for his really profound "Morals and the Evolution of Man," but for his "all too humanness." Physically handsome and energetic, mentally vivacious and keen, he impressed all who met him, great and small. This does not imply that his glamor was shoddy; far from it. He was warm, frank, earnest, scrupulously honest, and actually exuded charm. His conversation like his oratory revealed a rich mind and a passionate tender nature.

The anti-Semitism in France as revealed by the Dreyfus affair made Nordau into a tribune of his people and set the Hungarian born cosmopolitan on the road which led him back home to the scattered flock of Israel from which he had temporarily strayed.

The plight of the Jews in eastern Europe under ruthless Czarism in Russia and the succsssful imitation of such Jewish persecution in Roumania, the overt hatred of the Jew in Germany and her western neighbors led him with Herzl to propound the philosophy of Zionism and to launch the movement for the return of the dispersed Jews to their ancestral patrimony and the restoration of the homeland to its ancient settlers, homeless and unwanted in the modern world.

For the remainder of his life he devoted himself unsparingly to this cause and is as much responsible as any other single individual for the reality of Palestine and for the hope that it promises to the Jew. This phase of his career comprises the major portion of the biography and perhaps the most interesting.

The world will forget his books; he was not a professional thinker nor a first rank author, but his fellow Jews will ever hold in grateful remembrance the great champion of the Jews' right to be a people on their own soil. Appropriately he sleeps in Palestine, where he spent the last years of his full and active life.

Rackham Holt and the late George Washington Carver at Tuskegee institute in 1942. Mrs. Holt will be interviewed over W-G-N at 10:45 tonight.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

THE international trade winds that used to sweep strongly thru the American book business have died down to almost a dead calm—"light airs," as the sailors say. Literary refugees now colonized in this country, chiefly around New York, manage to supply a few whiffs from the pre-war European scene, but the general state of affairs suggests that North America will have to roll its own literature for the duration. In this emergency it is fortunate that every war correspondent has a possible best seller in his notebook.

Publishers' scouts who are veterans of many happy European tours in quest of Scandinavian, Czecho-Slovakian, and Jugo-Slavian genius have been seen of late in the clubs and studios of Chicago, muttering feverishly: "Author, author, who's got an author?"

The naming of Bret Harte among world famous Jews, at a recent pageant in Chicago, surprised the literati. His background as an early Californian and his devotion to far western themes had never suggested a kinship with the Jewish tradition. A scurry to the most comprehensive encyclopedias of biography supported the pageant's announcement. Bret Harte had a Jewish grandfather who was a clothing merchant in New York. This ancestor's family name was Hart. Bret himself added the final "e" as a romantic flourish, but another slight alteration of his correct name was an accident. He was Francis Brett Hart. The second "t" in Brett was dropped by a printer's error on his debut in San Francisco, and he accepted this stroke of destiny.

The sophistication of modern literature seems to have killed the ghost story, a genre in which there have been many eminent practitioners. Nevertheless, several anthologies or omnibus volumes in this field have been published within the last year or two, and they make good reading, altho they have a tendency toward duplicated selections. The latest is "The Midnight Reader," edited and supplied with an introduction by Philip Van Doren Stern [Henry Holt].

Mr. Stern opens and closes with his choices for champions—"The Beckoning Fair One," by Oliver Onions, and "The Turn of the Screw," by Henry James. The former was new to us, because when Mr. Onions was going strong as a serious novelist rental libraries were harder to find than they are now. We rejoice, therefore, to learn from experience that Onions is a grand master at tales of haunting and horror.

Onions, now 70 years old, is a Yorkshireman whose name can be correctly pronounced by any war gardener, in spite of printed reports that it should not sound like the vegetable. The name became a social annoyance to him after many years, and he lopped it off legally to meet his friends as George Oliver [his given names], but he continued to use it as a pen name. His books of ghost stories—"Widdershins," "Ghosts in Daylight," "The Painted Face"—were issued in a single volume in 1936.

"The history of China," a Harvard professor used to say, when opening a course in this subject, "is tedious, monotonous, repetitious, and there is altogether too much of it." An easy byway thru it, however, may be found in "A Short History of the Chinese," by Mary A. Nourse [New Home Library]. This book is a reprint from 1935. It was first issued under another title—"The Four Hundred Million."

The Boswell club, recruited from publishers and other bookish fellows, has become so active that the need for a casual luncheon rendezvous was apparent. It has selected the Fish and Chips restaurant, close to the public library. Over the table set apart for the Boswellians the management has placed an inscription from Johnsonian lore. It is the crotchety doctor's opinion of a French menu.

"Sir, my brain is obfuscated after the perusal of this heterogeneous conglomeration of bastard English mis-spelt, and in a foreign tongue. I prithee bid thy knaves bring me a dish of hog's pudding, a slice or two from the upper cut of a well roasted sirloin, and two apple dumplings."

War gardening corner: Sage, flavoring for the Thanksgiving day turkey, was widely used in England for tea before the introduction of the Chinese beverage. The Chinese themselves have been known to trade three pounds of their tea leaves for one pound of sage. [From "Spice and Scent," by Lee Maril.]

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

THE author of a current best seller, "George Washington Carver," will be interviewed over W-G-N at 10:45 tonight. . . . She is Rackham Holt, former Chicagoan, and she spent four years in writing the biography and keeping in close touch with the work of the great Negro scientist. . . . In tonight's talk she is to tell of some of the aspects of the life that came to an end last January. . . . The interviewing will be done by Clifford Campbell, acting director of the Dunbar Vocational school. . . . Mrs. Holt was originally called Margaret. . . . She came by the name of Rackham after her marriage to Guy Holt; then friends recalled that as a child she bore a striking resemblance to some of Arthur Rackham's illustrations. . . . She inherited her writing ability; an uncle on her mother's side was Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Irving Stone's new book, "They Also Ran," was published a few days ago by Doubleday, Doran. . . . Now he has joined the Research Institute of America as editor in charge of post-war planning. . . . Chicagoans recall him as the author of the biography of Clarence Darrow; he also wrote "Sailor on Horseback" and "Lust for Life." . . . "The Fighting American," edited by F. Van Wyck Mason, will be issued June 21 by Reynal & Hitchcock. . . . It is an anthology of stories of American soldiers from the French and Indian wars thru World War I. . . . Carroll Alcott's "My War with Japan" [also Reynal & Hitchcock] will appear June 14. . . . Alcott spent 15 years as a correspondent in the far east. . . . Robert P. Tristam Coffin's "Primer for America" is to be published Tuesday by Macmillan. . . . In 138 ballads he has compiled an informal almanac of American myths and legends, pastimes and pieties, prides and attitudes, heroes and devils.

De Lancey Ferguson has dug up a lot of hitherto unpublished facts about Samuel L. Clemens, and the result appears in his "Mark Twain: Man and Legend," issued recently by Bobbs-Merrill. . . . Reed Kinert, author of "America's Fighting Planes in Action" [Macmillan], once ran the airport at Richmond, Ind., and later taught flying at Terre Haute and Anderson, Ind. . . . Harper & Brothers have signed a contract with Thomas Sanction for a book to be called "A Whole New World to Build." . . . Sanction, a former New Orleans newspaper man, had a Nieman fellowship at Harvard, and has just received a grant from the Rosenwald Foundation to enable him to write his treatise. . . . Publication is scheduled for this fall. . . . Another newspaper writer, Isabel Paterson [I. M. P. of the New York Herald-Tribune's Weekly Book Review], has another book out. . . . It is "The God of the Machine" [Putnam].

Bellamy Partridge, who did "Big Family" and "Country Lawyer," is writing a history of the automobile and its effect on small town life. . . . The title is "Excuse My Dust"; Whittlesey House will print it this fall. . . . Sidelight on history: Now that the allied forces have cleaned up the Tunisian situation to nearly everybody's satisfaction, they're singing "Home, Sweet Home" with renewed fervor. . . . In the late Alexander Woollcott's "As You Were" [Viking] it is set forth that it was exactly a hundred years ago—in late spring, 1843—when John Howard Payne, author of that nostalgic classic, took office as the American consul at Tunis.

Orchids Again for Max Miller

Lower California is as far removed in everything but latitude from southern California as the movies are from the drama of the sixteenth century. Yet from its barren and rugged length came at least part of the blood stream that flows thru the somewhat varicose veins of our present southwest.

Max Miller, an excellent reporter remembered especially for his "I Cover the Waterfront," made a semi-scientific trip the length of Lower California's gaunt peninsula a year or so ago. He studied the people, the history, the culture. He found the sixteenth century alive today, and came back to tell about it in an admirable book. It's a splendid antidote for an over supply of war reading.

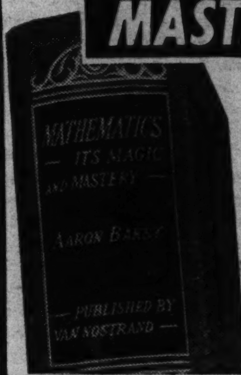
NEW, Easy, Entertaining Way to MASTER MATHEMATICS!



HERE are just the simple, time-saving methods of math-mastery which you have long been hoping to find! Never before has this vitally necessary ability to handle short-cut ARITHMETIC, practical ALGEBRA, GEOMETRY and "TRIG" been made so painlessly easy to gain as AARON BAKST has now made it—through his great new book—"MATHEMATICS—ITS MAGIC and MASTERY"!

Bakst's novel methods of teaching you make math easy to learn because they give you the greatest possible variety of practical applications—to interesting, timely problems. For instance, he calls his section on TRIGONOMETRY—"Man's Servant, the Triangle." This chapter enables you to solve timely problems in calculating the firing angles and "veering off" curves of artillery—in telling how a bomb falls, where it lands, etc., etc. Over 350 diagrams make every explanation clear at a glance! 790 pages. 7 x 9 inches. Handsomely cloth bound. Only $3.95 at bookstores or direct from publisher, D. VAN NOSTRAND CO., Inc., Publishers, 250 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

THIS great new work presents—for the first time in one volume—a complete coverage of the terms of science and engineering. Principles are clearly explained—methods of calculation are fully described with the formulae and units—also chemical structures and reactions, physical laws and instruments, engineering design, construction, and operation. These are merely suggestive of its tremendous scope. The great number of photographs, diagrams, and charts have been specially prepared and selected to show the salient facts most clearly. Many tables and summaries make all this information easily available for instant reference. 7¼ x 10¼ inches. Handsomely cloth-bound. Only $10.00 at bookstores, or direct from publisher,

Army "Brat" Writes Book Thus Titled

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

To civilian kids "brat" is a fighting word, but to army families on the west coast or the east, in scattered garrisons thruout the midwest, in posts from Florida to Alaska and the Philippines, kids born in the shadow of the flag flying over their homes are known lovingly as brats, "army brats."

And it is of one of these brats that Tommy Wadelton, himself a boy with a khaki background, tells his story. It is the story of young Jim Tucker, born and bred near army barracks, whose mother died when he was almost too young to remember, and who was raised by a round faced, straight thinking Chinese named Sui Jen. Following family tradition, Jim joined the United States army air force to fight for the freedom of China, a country whose dignity and worth he had learned from the yellow skinned man who had helped him to learn his first Christian prayers, taught him to eat with chop sticks, and encouraged him thru the difficulties of West Point.

Altho the first half of the book, written in running prose, is pleasant with misty and childish reminiscences, it is only the strength of the unusual characterization of Sui Jen that carries the story to the end. Young Tommy, altho a veteran at 15 of three books, falls short when he tries to handle the puzzling adult problems of love and marriage. He shows more charm and honest humor when he keeps his writing in short trousers.

However, the book has a plot with a sufficiently unusual twist to have merited a profitable movie sale, and the insight and ability shown by this 15 year old augurs well for the novels he will turn out when he comes of draft age.

This Tale Forces Even a Book Reviewer to Read Every Line

Reviewed by William Shinnick.

Here is a story that has what it takes to make even a book reviewer read every line of it and wish there were more. It is a tale of heroism; of mighty men who performed mighty deeds; of folksy men who loved their homeland and their families; of gallant men who looked into the face of death and did not quail; of warriors who fought against odds of ten, twenty, a hundred to one, and made no complaint.

But most of all it is a narrative of heartbreak. W. L. White has let his characters—Lt. Col. Frank Kurtz and the members of two bomber squadrons operating in the Pacific war—relate their adventures as they saw them. He lets them lead us thru that terrible period in which the yellow enemies of America and Britain swarmed thru the sultry seas to Java, and Singapore, and Timor. They bring back Bataan, and Corregidor, and Borneo, and the Macassar straits, and the seizure of the islands that menaced and still menace Australia.

That is where the heartbreak comes. Kurtz felt its impact first when he looked upon the charred ruins of his first Flying Fortress in the Philippines, made into a wreck as it lay unprotected on Clark field as the Jap planes swept over. He felt it again when, in the Dutch Indies, he learned that the promised 1,000 planes that were coming to help the handful of Fortresses stand off the enemy were written off with an actual arrival of about 50 aircraft of various classes.

The history of the early months of the Pacific war is not all written yet, but there is enough known about it to justify the speculation that 1,000 planes in the vast theater of operations might have halted the enemy progress short of Java.

The queens that die proudly are the big four engined bombers. They were designed to carry out long distance bombings at high altitude and would normally operate with fighter plane protection. But the exigencies of war were such that they were sent on dive bombing and dock strafing missions, and a few at a time. They were, in the last days of Dutch Java, about all there was in the way of allied air strength and were used as they needs must be. They shot down many Jap Zeroes, but sometimes they were overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers and had to die. How?

"The plane was settling faster, in that steepening curve now, because it was all over. So we who have seen a Fortress die in battle can tell you how they do it. They die like the men who fly them and fight in them would want them to die! They die like the great sky queens they are."

Books like this one—and there are not so many combining first rate writing and the drama of combat—serve to destroy some of our civilian notions of military air fighting. The portrait of the pilot and his crew marching out after a big breakfast and taking over, dapper and confident, from the efficient ground crew, and sailing away to bomb a helpless enemy from an unapproachable altitude isn't the right one. Certainly it isn't the one Lt. Col. Kurtz presents.

He is completely realistic. He tells of battles to get spare parts, of the bomber crew making their own repairs, of their wondering whether the over-used engines are going to hold up for the next mission, of the bad weather that could not be advanced as a reason for failure to take off, of the utter weariness of aviators flying day after day with little sleep—and of the temptations to despair when it looked as if the American side was always to be outnumbered and never given a real opportunity to show its stuff.

He tells of Colin Kelly, of Buzz Wagner, of Wheless, and of Maj. Robinson, and the insouciant attitude each took toward his job and its dangers. He tells how they and many others learned in battle things that instructors never taught them because the instructors didn't know the answers, and of how the design of bombers gets better and better as the men who fight them report on the weaknesses of the craft.

And "Queens Die Proudly" ends on a note of cheer. In the Australian regions, it is related, American airmen now are meeting the Japanese on even terms and walloping them soundly whenever they can be lured into combat. Another point is that the high command out there is sold on the coördination of sea, land, and air power, and gaining successes thru the combination. Not big successes, to be sure, but the kind that augur well for the time when the time for the grand attack comes.

Nearly all of the action in White's book took place more than a year ago. But that action is still spot news. It will continue to be that until Pearl Harbor, and the Philippines, and Java have been avenged.

Canine Hero of Sea Epic Tells Story

"ADMIRAL WAGS," by Fanny Jessop Sherman. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

Reviewed by Bob Becker.

When Stanley Johnston was writing his series of Tribune stories about the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington, he stopped at our desk one day to tell us about the mascot of the ship, a friendly little black cocker spaniel named Wags, that was saved when the gallant Lexington went down in the Coral sea. We were so thrilled by Johnston's description of how this little cocker, owned by Capt. [now Rear Adm.] Sherman, survived the shot and shell of battle and the way it was taken off the sinking carrier, that we asked for more stories about Wags.

This book answers all our questions about Adm. Wags, for Mrs. Sherman has this famous dog tell his own story. It's a true dog story and also a true war story that will make splendid reading for every child.

The book tells with sympathy and actuality of Wags' love of the sea and his roving life before he went aboard the Lexington, how the men on the ship were rescued, and how Wags was fitted with a life jacket by the sailors when he had to abandon ship. The charm of this book is enhanced by artist Paul Brown, who made an attractive two color picture for almost every page.

Gay stories about dogs, sad ones, some that are philosophical and others that are frankly sentimental, are assembled in this 608 page anthology which undoubtedly will be ranked as the top book of its kind, for Editor Goodman includes in it two complete novels about dogs, 33 short articles, and several novelettes.

Among the well known writers of dog stories who are presented in this entertaining volume are Robert Louis Stevenson, Don Marquis, O. Henry, Rudyard Kipling, and Booth Tarkington. The reader need supply only one thing in order to enjoy this book—an attachment for dogs, because it contains every conceivable type of dog story. The jacket of the book is unusual in that it is double printed. When opened up it is a magnificent dog map of the world in color and featuring 66 breeds of dogs and their places of origin.

Living Story of Mexican Revolution

"THE WIND THAT SWEPT MEXICO," by Anita Brenner and George R. Leighton. [Harper, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

For a third of a century Mexico had basked in the Diaz doldrums. The stony old Indian and his élite cronies had the country by the throat. The disenfranchised 97 per cent enjoyed their punishing poverty in peace. Foreign nations paid recurrent honors to the old man who made his country a rich poaching ground for them.

But by 1910 breezes were springing up in the hills and in the valleys, out on the sun baked deserts and up in the cold mountains. They were little zephyrs of resurgent independence. Here and there they converged and formed impressive gales, and eventually all merged in one swirling, destroying wind that swept Mexico into a new period of revolution, a new period of growth and liberation.

It is this story—the story of the guerrilla chieftains such as Villa and Carranza, Obregon and Zapata; of the inept foreign interference; of the rising cry for human rights—that Anita Brenner tells so feelingly and yet with such dramatic and graphic restraint and clarity. Hers is a significant, if brief, history—important in a world that today is swept again by that same wind of liberty.

To make this a unique history, George R. Leighton has assembled in dramatic chronology 184 superb photographs of the very things of which Miss Brenner writes. Her text, in fact, furnishes the captions for a living history of the revolutionary period.

Saludos Amigos
The Ape Man

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Besides handing out some pretty nice things in the way of violets, lilacs, wrens, robins, and one day when you didn't need an overcoat, May came across with some likely movies.

"The Immortal Sergeant" tells the story of an Irishman, "born in the slums and educated in the army—he'd been in World War I—whose body dies in action but whose influence and remembered voice live on to spur a timid corporal on to great things." . . . Featuring Thomas Mitchell as the sergeant, Henry Fonda as the corporal, and Maureen O'Hara as the girl in the case. . . . Good!

"The More the Merrier"—"This hilarious comedy kids the pantaloons off the housing situation in Washington . . . sparkles with unexpected touches . . . best acting money could buy. . . ." With Charles Coburn, Jean Arthur, and Joel McCrea.

"Cabin in the Sky"—Co-stars Ethel Waters and Eddie [Rochester] Anderson. . . . "Delightful all-Negro production . . . most beguiling of fantasies, brimming over with laughs and music and the sort of homespun pathos that's so dear to all Americans. . . ."

"This Land Is Mine"—Story of underground revolt with Charles Laughton, Walter Slezak, George Sanders, and Maureen O'Hara. . . . "Flawlessly acted and directed movie . . . of big drama and touching detail. . . ."

"Keeper of the Flame"—"Atmospheric, cannily dialoged, well photographed and directed with finesse. . . . With Katharine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy, Richard Whorf, Frank Craven, Margaret Wycherly . . . a quiet melodrama. . . . The ending is very 'different.'"

"Saludos Amigos"—Walt Disney goes Disney in South America—and is he rare!

"The Ape Man"—"Audience loves the clever blending of the humorous and the horrific. . . . Light touch is everywhere." . . . With Bela Lugosi.

Something for everybody, I says!

See you tomorrow.

Idea for New Play.

Joseph Fields, author of "The Doughgirls," has an idea for a new play. He is secretive about the subject matter, tho he confides that it will be "more of a story," and that he hopes it will be "of contemporary interest."

"SLIGHTLY DANGEROUS"

"Slightly Dangerous" is the title of the United Artists' current movie featuring Lana Turner and Robert Young. They both look more than "slightly" dangerous here.

Lana Turner a Brunet.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. (AP). — Waiting for her baby, Lana Turner has darkened her hair. She's wanted to do this several times for the screen, but the studio said she was more glamorous as a blonde. The moguls did compromise and let her wear a dark wig in the beginning of "Slightly Dangerous." She figures now that she'll be going straw-colored again about August, worse luck.

How the Directors Express Approval of Finished Shots

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—When directors finish scenes they think are exceptionally well done, they all have pet phrases to express their approval.

Sam Wood, once a real estate operator, says "I'll buy that one!" . . . Mitchell Leisen "It's a lily!" . . . Preston Sturges, "It's a masterpiece!" . . . John Farrow, merely "Thank you!" . . . while Mark Sandrich says "That's it!" . . .

Most extravagant is Billy Wilder's "Champagne for everybody!" but the trouble is, co-workers say, the drinks so far have been wholly imaginary!

This Town Called Hollywood

By Philip Scheuer

War pictures are still the industry's No. 1 paradox. Hollywood dreads making them but goes right on doing so. Exhibitors squawk against booking them and then take them anyway. The paying public cries "Fed up!"—and lines up outside the theaters for blocks. Critics, divided squarely into two camps, grumble either that they are "not entertainment!" or "not realistic enough!" and war pictures, like the war, keep coming at us just the same.

The writer is one who has fervently espoused the cause of realism from the beginning. His reasons are simple: Pride in country and pride in cinema. America's crisis is also Hollywood's; the first, fighting for its life, must demand—and receive—the utter support of the second. Unanswered, and perhaps unanswerable, is the question of whether greater support can be given with realism or with escapism.

Some pictures have tried to include both. "Crash Dive," "China," and "Five Graves to Cairo," to name three, offhand, deal with the war romantically. The exploits of their heroes are hoked up, their truths sugar-coated. Along with many other reviewers, I took cracks at them. Not because they are such bad movies in their way; they are bad in our way. Yet we could easily be wrong. If their heroes inspire thousands—or even one!—to go and do likewise, we ARE wrong. The question, again, is where inspiration ends and false optimism begins!

It is bromidic by now that false optimism can lose the war.

The critic, as I say, is feeling his way like any one else. As if in answer to his pleas for more realism—even for reality—the studios are now releasing such uncompromising tragedies as "Bataan" and "Action in the North Atlantic." In "Bataan" 13 men, fighting a delaying action from a Philippine grove, are picked off one by one. They live, they are alive—13 men with eyes, ears, hearts, lungs, loves, hates, hopes, dreams—and then they are dead. In the North Atlantic merchant marine film, they are blasted and seared by fire and bomb, altho more of them survive. The effect on spectators who had sons, husbands, brothers, in the Philippines, or whose loved ones ply the ships of the merchant marine, will be indescribable.

Equally so is the dilemma of the critic, who has finally got what he asked for. Should people see what is "good for them," and is "Bataan" good for the greater number, regardless of the pain it may cause others?

Both Tay Garnett, "Bataan's" director, and Nelson Poynter, local head of the office of war information, say it is. Both, indeed, used an identical phrase: Wake people up. If the picture helps to wake "some" people up, they stated, it will not have been made in vain.

"Bataan is too recent as history to pervert the facts," Garnett said. "If we had dramatized or hoked up the picture, the newsreel quality would have been lost. The preview cards bore us out; they arrived two, three, and four weeks later—as if those who wrote them had been too stunned to make up their minds—and the majority applauded what we had tried to tell. Yes, even a mother who has three sons in the service!

"The OWI wants a realistic policy. As for the war department—'Bataan' was a 'must' for its entire general staff in Washington, and they called it Hollywood's most important single contribution to the war. I think that's your answer."

"Even so," Garnett added, "the Hays office deleted some of the more gruesome shots, despite the encouragement we had received from the OWI to include them."

"On whose authority?"

"Its own."

The OWI's Poynter later explained to me that his capacity is purely advisory. He denied that he or the OWI can arbitrarily regulate production or censorship. Personally he pins his hopes on fewer war pictures and more artistry in those that are made. "A year ago Hollywood was getting ready to turn out 60 per cent war films. Now it is down to 40 per cent, which is as it should be. It takes longer—longer than radio, for example—for the cycle to work around, but we're getting there," Poynter said.

Oriental theater. Kenny Baker, popular lyric tenor of screen and radio, shares top billing with Dave Apollon, expert on the Russian instrument known as the balalaika. For reasons which are not quite clear from the geographical or ethnological point of view, Mr. Apollon is assisted by a group of Filipino boys. Others in the program are Jimmy Costello, Allwhite and Blue, and Anthony, Allyn, and Hodges.

Mackinlay Kantor Prepares to Write of His Third War

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

MACKINLAY KANTOR is around in a brand new uniform, with a passport in an inside pocket and full credentials of a war correspondent assigned to the United States army. Kantor is going abroad for the Saturday Evening Post. No one is supposed to know where he is going, but the supposition is England. And no one is supposed to know where he goes after that, but the supposition is that he is to be ready to jump with the troops and cover the great invasion, wherever it comes.

It's Kantor's first real war. As the grandson of a Civil war veteran he heard all about the G. A. R. He wrote a novel about Gettysburg and ballads and stories about the Civil war and then turned to the Spanish-American war. It will be interesting to see what the present war does for his writing imagination.

Sherwood Anderson's Naive Letters.

There are one or two shocks of recognition in Edmund Wilson's anthology of writings, "The Shock of Recognition," that won't please everybody. Wilson's desire to publish papers showing "the developing self-consciousness of the American genius" is laudable enough, but some of his selections are curious. For instance, a whole sheaf of letters from Sherwood Anderson to Van Wyck Brooks appears. The letters show a great deal of self-consciousness, but what they have to do with developing genius is a puzzle. For the sake of Anderson's reputation they might better have been omitted. Certainly the replies by Van Wyck Brooks should have been published so that we could see to what extent he led Anderson on. For Anderson could be dreadfully naïve, sometimes professionally so. His opinions about his contemporaries varied with his digestion, his self-analysis, and the reviews he received. Basically he was inclined to be friendly and generous, and Van Wyck Brooks says "he was the most natural of men, as innocent as any animal or flowering tree." But those who knew Sherwood Anderson in his advertising days were not so sure of the innocence. They rather thought of him as a tortured man, groping in literary expression, but able also to hold his own at an advertising conference. According to the Wilson book, Van Wyck Brooks was of considerable help to Anderson at the time he was writing "Winesburg, Ohio." Waldo Frank, Paul Rosenfeld, James Oppenheim, Randolph Bourne, and Brooks were in the Seven Arts circle and Anderson found them congenial. He was especially interested in Frank and Brooks. Bourne, Oppenheim, and Anderson are dead; Paul Rosenfeld edited "Sherwood Anderson's Memoirs."

More About Churchill's Mother.

Interest in "Young Lady Randolph," by René Kraus, is based on the fact that the young lady was the mother of Winston Churchill. Her story is a chapter in that movement across the sea that fired the imagination of Americans 40 or 50 years ago and sometimes exasperated them. The marriage of young American women of rich families to titled foreigners, some of them broke, became the subject of caricature, and Charles Dana Gibson's life had a great time with them. But Jenny Jerome knew a great deal about Europe; her father, Leonard Jerome, had served his country abroad. He was born in Pompey Hill, N. Y., and had opened his law office in Rochester.

Winston Invited to Party.

The other day the Jerome Family association was meeting up there and toasting its famous members. It sent a wire to Winston Churchill at the White House to come on up and talk to his cousins and his aunts. Today he is the most famous of the Jeromes. But he is the most famous only in this generation. The Jeromes don't let any one push Leonard W. Jerome into the background. He was a big American capitalist in his day, a man familiar with politics, railroads, and fine horses. The Jeromes feel that Winston Churchill was lucky in his American forebears. Leonard Jerome was never seen without his pocket toothpick. He belonged.

Winston Churchill couldn't go, but he sent a friendly greeting. And René Kraus' book went into its third printing. Kraus, who has caught the spirit of light American biography, is a capable continental journalist who long represented Austrian papers in London. He is now living in South Deerfield, Mass., and writing a biography of Gen. Smuts. Putnam will publish it.

Adventures of the Chetniks.

A novel has been written about the Chetniks, the guerrillas who are fighting the Nazis and Italians in the Balkan mountains under the leadership of Draja Mihailovitch. It is "The Wrath of the Eagles," by Frederick Heydenau, and it is being published this month by Dutton. Heydenau is a Jugo-Slav, now a resident of New York City. Actually he is an Austrian, for he was born in Vienna and his family had lived there for generations. His father was a dramatic critic, and the son served in the first World war in the Austrian army. When he was 4 years old, Heydenau first met Johannes Brahms. In later years, when he was a Viennese journalist, he helped put a marker on the house in which Beethoven composed the Ninth symphony.

Carver Biography Selling Well.

Just to show how good book sales are these days, there is word from Doubleday that "George Washington Carver; an American Biography," by Rackham Holt, has just gone into its fourth printing and thus is reaching a total of 50,000 copies. Priced at $3.50, this means good selling. The author shares the royalties with the Carver Foundation at Tuskegee. She is returning to Chicago this week.

One Gilpatric Book Not Serialized.

It is customary for a publisher to tell the readers of a book if it has been serialized in one of the large-circulation magazines. But in the case of Guy Gilpatric, it's the other way around. Gilpatric is known so widely for his stories in national weeklies that when he writes a book that has not been serialized it's news. So when his "Action in the North Atlantic" appears this month it will bear the Dutton announcement: "This book has not been serialized in the Saturday Evening Post or any other magazine." Specific, isn't it? But the joke is that millions will see it in the Warner Brothers film under the same title.

The Third Term Tradition: A Scholar Looks at History

"THE THIRD TERM TRADITION," by Charles W. Stein. [Columbia University Press. $3.75.]

Reviewed by Kenneth C. Kaufman.

A comprehensive and searchingly critical analysis of the inception, growth, and collapse of the tacit assumption that no American President should succeed himself more than once. It is based on a great deal of research in the conventional sources, as well as in voluminous files of newspapers, and in documents, many collections of which have only recently become available. It is painstakingly careful, and much too full of detail, and especially of quotation, to become very popular. It must prove correspondingly valuable to scholars, and it contains much information which no intelligent citizen can overlook. A half score of contemporary cartoons help bring back ancient battles.

The subject falls naturally into three parts. The birth of the tradition was not implicit in the Constitutional convention philosophy; indeed, there is ample evidence to show that the fathers were much more concerned with the question of whether a President should be eligible for a second term than for a third.

Washington's precedent was clearly based on his own private inclinations and the state of his health. Jefferson's fear and hatred of monarchical institutions led him to formulate the no-third-term rule, altho he was not averse to naming his successors. Jackson's love of democracy made the tradition into the unwritten law which prevailed until 1940.

From Jackson's tutelage of Van Buren until Grant's second term expired, the whole question went by default; it was not challenged in practice, altho in the first 100 years of the republic's existence over 125 Constitutional amendments were submitted to congress limiting the President's reëligibility. The preliminary campaign of 1880 brought the problem sharply before the American people, and they replied with a decisive "no." Grant was still a popular idol; but an idol who had disappointed. Grover Cleveland began his first administration by advocating a Constitutional limitation on reëligibility; he ended with a receptive attitude toward a potential drafting of his services.

Most dramatic of all attempts to break the precedent was that of Theodore Roosevelt and the Bull Moose revolt of 1912. Mr. Stein adduces ample evidence to show that the third term tradition did not enter greatly into his defeat. In other words, it had ceased to be the vital issue of 1880. Machine politics beat the popular hero. Coolidge is still—after a perusal of Stein's chapter on the 1928 campaign—a sphinx; a guess is still permissible as to what his "I do not choose to run" really meant.

The discarding of the tradition in 1940, as well as the violent overturn of the trend of popular feeling, came, as Stein views it, from the concurrence of three events, two of which were, in 1938, unpredictable [the words are Frank Kent's]: "The almost impossible combination of a great national crisis, a super-President, and an election year." Stein obviously sees a danger in the breaking of the tradition, and would favor a Constitutional limitation. Yet he realizes the possible cause of a breakdown of our democracy is an internal one. "How far" he asks, "may the people be trusted?"

Cohn Views Woman and Civilization

"LOVE IN AMERICA," by David L. Cohn. [Simon and Schuster, $3].

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell.

Mississippi, the University of Virginia, Yale, Sears Roebuck, travel at home and abroad with particular attention to food and people, eight years of authorship, and determination to understand American life have made of David Cohn a clever essayist and an urbane yet convincing Jeremiah. When he checks the actualities of our life against his own conception of a civilized society, we come off almost as badly as we did in Henry Morton Robinson's severe arraignment of America in "Fantastic Interim." But where Mr. Robinson clubbed us over the head for our sins, Mr. Cohen, no less eager to reform, employs laughter as his corrective.

"Love in America," its author announces, was written to support seven theses: The fundamental relationships between American men and women, if measured by humane standards, are not satisfactory. The fault rests more with men than women. The real status of woman, inside and outside the home, is low. Americans are emotionally adolescent. Our life has, during the last 25 years, been shabby and vulgar. We believe that, if we have the price, we can get the other fellow to do it for us. If the war which we are winning abroad is not to be lost at home, women must become civilizing agents in American life.

The most significant chapter is the first—on marriage—which any great foundation looking for an opportunity to do good, in the manner not of the monstrous Gideon Planish but of the sage and witty David Cohn, would do well to distribute as a tract. It should go both to youngsters in state universities who hopefully enroll in marriage courses designed, according to one instructor, to demonstrate "how to drop a hot kiss before it burns you," and to their elders who "want to make a go of marriage" but have no more idea of how it is done than did George Babbitt.

Less memorable but even more incisive are chapters on the appeals and pressures which deluge American women:

Mr. Cohn is at many points so unflattering in his honesty and at others so rash in his generalizations that only wise women who do not need his guidance will be able to read him without anger.

The real theme of the book, it should now be clear, is not love but woman. [The charge of misbranding a product, which Mr. Cohn brings against American business, may with justice be brought against him.] In a final chapter, he diverges even farther from his announced subject, to define the civilization which he covets for all Americans. That definition is so sound that I must quote a sentence from it, even at the risk of making what is actually a lively, spirited book appear heavy and hackneyed:

"In a civilized society, the arts are cultivated and the artist holds a high place; there is respect for learning and a passionate intellectual curiosity, a disdain for the cheap and the vulgar, a development of manners and the graces; while, during the last 2,000 years at least, civilized societies, however slowly and with whatever retrogressions, have constantly increased their ethical content so as to alleviate misery, protect the weak, and guard the dignity of the individual."

"Love in America" is the most amusing and one of the most pungent of the volumes which have come out of our current, and highly salutory, reëvaluation of our way of living. As long as such books are written and read, there is a future for America.

Tarkington's Latest Up to His Standard

"KATE FENNIGATE," by Booth Tarkington. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

Delving now in Hoosier archives, Booth Tarkington nonetheless started his writing career with what might be called the international point of view. Howells' early sketches with their Italian backgrounds, Henry James' meticulous tales of contrasting cultures, and Mrs. Wharton's vivid histories of continental social life had set the style for American novelists. Tarkington wrote "Monsieur Beaucaire" and "The Gentleman from Indiana," and was a cosmopolite, too. It took some time to convince him that nature had not intended him for a citizen of the world, and that "Home, Sweet Home" should be his theme song, and Hoosierdom his dwelling place.

It was then that he became not only a prolific but an important writer. He could interpret the American small town as a happy and an innocent community. He has a natural aptitude for drawing children, and could depict them with that humorous understanding that made him a genius. Among the adolescents his talent is absolutely brilliant, and he is still at his best when picturing men and women who are children at heart. Small town people are his special province. He's indulgent, understanding, observant, but untroubled by their convictions.

Indiana family life is as clear to him as the honeysuckle to the bee. He believes that only love and adversity ruffle the surface of the placid lake of family emotions. The two are interchangeable in his stories, and that's what makes the plot. Amiable stupidity he believes is worth chronicling, and he makes its possessors as likable as can be, all the while sympathizing with them, and laughing gently at their mild difficulties.

So good old Indiana is the Tarkington dish. Worlds may tremble on their foundations, storms may rock the universe, thrones may perish, and the dictators may thrive, but Indiana will carry on.

Kate Fennigate is the good little girl of the town, always sacrificing herself to somebody's selfish aims, never slapping back. Her father, a brilliant lawyer, drank himself to death, but before he did it he had an affair with the glamorous and robust Mrs. Capper, who lived across the street. And here both their houses get described, so perfectly, so carefully, so amusingly that they are unforgettable. When Kate goes to keep house for her widower cousin, whom she has loved all her life, he falls in love with Mrs. Capper's daughter, Leila. So Kate is robbed as was her mother.

If only Kate would slap back, just once. But her monosyllabic patience is as enduring as cast iron, and, tho things come out all right in the end, it's on this theme that Mr. Tarkington plays his village tune. These people he knows as he does the inside of his own house, intimately, unconsciously. He can find his way in the dark, no doubt, about his own room, and that's the way he is with his characters. So that after the story's read, the reader knows them, too, and has made friends with the heroine, and hopes to goodness that the lovely villainess will stub her toe, or that the hero will find she tells lies. And it's all good reading and so absorbing that the problem of Kate, the lovely innocent, becomes as engrossing as tho Shakespeare had written it.

In the first World war some of the Tarkington placidity was dynamited. "Alice Adams," for instance, carried implications of what was happening in some of our villages and hamlets. But not so "Kate Fennigate." Here the family life rolls on like a placid stream, rippling gently to eternity, the great chemical mixture that brings out the picture on the photographers' plates. And it's all as clear and as microscopic and as well done as the best of the novels by this stalwart writer, who was born in the year 1869, and is still in his prime.

Rats of Reich Placed on Trial for Murder!

"THE DAY OF RECKONING," by Max Radin. [Knopf, $1.75.]

Reviewed by James E. Sloan.

Set in a Luxemburg courtroom in the year 1945, "The Day of Reckoning" puts Hitler, Goebbels, Himmler, and their satellites on trial as common criminals on the charge of—murder. Victims of the murder were not the countries over which the Nazi war machine smashed, nor the bomb torn cities that stood in its path, but three little, unimportant persons: a Frenchman, a Czech, and a Russian Jew.

Written by an able legal authority, "Day of Reckoning" is a fine exposition of humanity's charges against Germany and how they might be encountered by the counsel for the defense, if any. Highly realistic are the courtroom scenes, and written for the layman. Not until the final pages is the fate of Germany's Inner Council of Defense told, after a stirring outburst by der Fuehrer, for whom one final and believeable defense had been entered.

"Day of Reckoning" is a fantasy, but one which has the power to make you think. It also might well be the textbook for the coming denouncement of the rats of the reich.

East vs. West: Here the Twain Can Really Meet

"CHINESE READER FOR BEGINNERS," by Shau Wing Chan. [Stanford University Press, $4.]

The Chinese language really is two languages—written, and spoken. Each has its own development, so that today a page of Chinese written in the literary style, altho quite comprehensible to the reader, if read aloud, can scarcely be fully understood by even the well educated listener. This is one of the imposing intricacies that has barred a better communion of ideas between the masses of the west and the east.

Prof. Chan's Reader goes a long way toward opening up the mystery chest of the language to the occidental mind, making quite possible a fascinating progress toward a working knowledge of Chinese. Even to the layman who has no desire for such a practical knowledge, Chan opens vistas that are enchanting. The very explanation of the origin of Chinese words gives a warm picture of the Chinese mind, a better understanding of China's philosophy.

Typographically the book is unique. Printed by the photolith process, it is set up on a proportional spaced typewriter that gives each line the spacing effect of normal typography, altho lacking the even right hand margin of printing. The necessity for hand drawn characters makes the photolith process particularly appropriate. This book has won citations for its format.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

FIFTY years ago this morning, at New Bedford, Mass., Miss Lizzie Borden, a tight-lipped maiden of 33, wearing a new dress of black mohair with leg-of-mutton sleeves, was put on trial for the murder of her father and stepmother—a singularly malevolent crime perpetrated ten months previously in the city of Fall River. The case, still without parallel in the crime chronicles of the nation, divided honors in the Chicago press with the Columbian Exposition of 1893. The lady was subsequently acquitted, in what many students have called the most shameful miscarriage of justice within living memory.

A Favorite of Authors.

The lethal weapon was an ax; it is still celebrated in a "bloody versicle" of the period that has come down the years with the sprightly persistence of a nursery rhyme. But the quatrain concerning Lizzie Borden's ax is not the only literature inspired by the crime. Few murders in history have so stirred the imagination of the scribbling race.

Forgetting newspaper accounts of the event, the Fall River horror was first turned to fictional advantage as early as 1895, by Mary E. Wilkins, in her story, "The Long Arm." A little later Lily Dougall used it in "The Summit House Mystery," but neither tale is of much interest now except to bibliographers. More pertinent is the psychological study in Edward Hale Bierstadt's "Satan Was a Man" [Doubleday], a fine Jekyll-Hyde performance that also makes skilful use of the "Jack the Ripper" murders in London, a decade before the Massachusetts contribution to human history.

Revived Once Again.

The Borden murders reached the New York stage, apparently for the first time, in 1933, when Broadway saw "Nine Pine Street," by John Colton and Carlton Miles, with Lillian Gish unforgettably portraying Effie Holden. And the most recent whisper of the classic case occurs in Kaufman and Hart's "The Man Who Came to Dinner," in which Mr. Sheridan Whiteside, the persistent guest of the unhappy Stanley family, saves himself from forcible ejection by his timely recollection that Stanley's wacky sister is the notorious Harriet Sedley of murder fame. The Borden murders were a favorite subject with the late Alexander Woollcott, who was travestied in the play as Sheridan Whiteside. [Incidentally, how long, I wonder, must a man be dead before one stops calling him "late"? Is there any rule of ethic about this convention?]

But the man who wrote most voluminously about the Borden case was the late Edmund Pearson—there it goes again: Pearson died in 1937—who turned out no fewer than five comprehensive studies and edited the trial proceedings for the specialists. Pearson almost made a career of Lizzie Borden; but it is all the most fascinating reading imaginable. And as all the principals in the case are now dead—even the attorneys—it is possible to hold some pretty strong opinions.

He Was a Syndicate.

It may be well to reveal at once, and be done with it, the mystery of Marshall Everett. I mentioned this gentleman, some weeks ago, as one of a group of Chicago writers who produced full length volumes of contemporaneous history, almost overnight, to meet the demands of an avid public curiosity. I said that Marshall Everett was—or had been—a citizen of Oak Park. Well, he was "Judge" Henry Neil, widely known as the "father of the mother's pension law."

I have had a number of inquiries about my earlier paragraph, and now I have an informative letter from his old friend, and mine, Maj. Otto McFeely of Oak Park, who confesses that he was one of Neil's assistant authors. Indeed, in view of all the circumstances, it might be more accurate to say that Marshall Everett was a syndicate, with Neil at its head.

Done in 24 Hours.

"I was the author of one of his books, 'The Great Omaha Cyclone and Dayton, Ohio, Flood,'" writes Maj. McFeely. "Both occurred on the same Easter Sunday, about 1912. The book was done in 24 hours."

This letter also reminds me that Neil's biggest financial success was his "Life of Christ," which was published under several different titles, at one time and another, always with a hideous new cover design.

An Incurable Bibliofool.

A friendly soul reveals that she likes this department best when it discusses adventures among old and rare books. So does its conductor, an incurable bibliofool, who has had more honest happiness out of collecting books than out of any other transaction in life. In appreciation, he relates his most painful experience:

Years ago I wrote an article for the Saturday Evening Post, under the provocative title, "Have Your a Tamerlane in Your Attic?" I revealed that there were fewer than a dozen copies of the first edition in existence and that a single copy, turning up in a garret, would bring $10,000. From the shoals of letters I received it was clear that I had hit on a popular subject, not "Tamerlane," but something worth $10,000. Most of these could be quickly dismissed, however, since it was obvious that their writers were excited about quite ordinary volumes of Poe, worth perhaps 10 cents.

But one day, in my absence from the city, there arrived a letter from a Mrs. Dodd—Ada, I think—of Worcester, Mass. It set forth in convincing detail the appearance and history of a small book, just resurrected from her attic, and asked a pertinent question: Where could she get $10,000 for it?

He Bought the Book.

I knew a number of places, but by the time I had returned to town and answered her letter, Charles E. Goodspeed, the well known antiquarian bookseller of Boston, had heard the mounting rumor of her excitement. He at once entrained for Worcester and bought the book—it was the real thing, in magnificent condition—and, half an hour after he had left her, Mrs. Dodd received my cautious letter of inquiry from Chicago.

The whole story is now pleasantly told in Mr. Goodspeed's delightful volume of old book gossip, "Yankee Bookseller" [Houghton Mifflin], which is recommended to all bookly minded persons.

P. S.—She got the $10,000.

Catholics Protest Federal Aid to Education Bill

Oppose Grant of 200 Million for Salaries

By the Rev. John Evans.

A protest of the Catholic hierarchy of the United States against the federal aid to education bill, known as Senate bill 637, which is now before the senate education and labor committee, is reprinted in part in the current issue of the New World, official publication of the Catholic archdiocese of Chicago.

The bill, if passed, would appropriate federal funds to assist states and territories in advancing their public education systems during the war emergency and thereafter indefinitely.

The stand of the bishops was communicated to Sen. Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the committee, by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. George Johnson, direction of the education department of the National Catholic Warfare conference, Washington, D. C.

The measure calls for an appropriation of $200,000,000 for teachers' salaries and employment of additional teachers where needed and to raise substandard salaries of teachers in line with the cost of living.

It also provides that $100,000,000 be appropriated annually to aid the states in equalizing public elementary and secondary school opportunities.

Msgr. Johnson pointed out that a part of the bill calls for a permanent setup rather than a war emergency measure. He added that it would work a hardship upon the Catholic people of the United States who are maintaining 2,105 secondary and 7,944 elementary schools with a total enrollment of 2,396,305 children.

"This bill," Msgr. Johnson's letter says, "deliberately confuses an issue which has been before the congress and the American people for a number of years—namely, the wisdom and desirability of the federal government assuming a large degree of responsibility for the support of general education in the United States. The bill confuses this issue by attempting to meet an alleged emergency in American education due to teacher shortage and at the same time introducing a permanent pattern for federal aid to education.

"If there is need for any type of federal aid to education in the emergency, this need should be considered on its own merits and not used as a subterfuge for facilitating the passage of legislation which would bring about a permanent change in the method whereby the American people support their schools.

"With regard to the emergency aid, which would provide $200,000,000 for the payment of the salaries of teachers to keep schools open, to employ additional teachers, to relieve overcrowded classes, to raise substandard salaries of teachers, and to adjust the salaries to meet the increased cost of living,' it may be pointed out that the information which is supposed to establish such need has been brought together by the groups that are promoting this legislation and would be beneficiaries thereof. As a consequence, it is open to question. Not until congress has before it a disinterested factual study of this whole situation can it properly consider legislation of this nature.

"The amount of money which this bill would appropriate for teacher salaries is to be distributed to the states on the basis of average daily attendance and not on the basis of need. This means that the money would go to the wealthier states as well as to those that are poorer.

"At the present time state and local governments, due to the great rise in the national income, are in a position to increase their tax revenue for the support of education. There are large surpluses gathering in some state funds. In most of the states of the union the crisis with regard to teacher shortages could be met without recourse to federal aid. In the others emergency aid might be made available on the basis of existing federal legislation. If any new legislation is required, it should provide for aid on the basis of need."

The letter concluded with a statement that it is the right of the Catholic church to maintain its own schools in order that their children be brought up according to the spirit of the religion they profess. It added that the church's right to maintain its schools is protected by the Constitution and explained that an added tax burden renders it more difficult for the church to support its own schools, and tends to interfere with freedom of religion and conscience.

Second Edition of "Meet the People" Is Planned

A second edition of "Meet the People," the revue which played successfully for 12 weeks at the Grand Opera house in the fall of 1940, will see the light of day on the Pacific coast this summer. Henry Myers, Jay Gorney, and Edward Eliscu, all of whom were associated with the earlier edition, are the authors. After a coast engagement the revue will move eastward.

CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

By Claudia Cassidy.

Columbia's journeys into the archives continue to yield treasure. This time the prize is two albums of Bach's Brandenburg Concertos, played by the Busch Chamber Players under the direction of Adolf Busch [M-249, $8.25; M-250, $6.50]. Volume one holds the first four concertos, volume two the fifth and sixth. Solo players are Mr. Busch, violin; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Marcel Moyse and Louis Moyse, flutes; Evelyn Rothwell [Mrs. John Barbirolli], oboe; Aubrey Brain and Francis Bradley, horns, and George Eskdale, trumpet.

Bach wrote the six concertos over a period of about two years, on commission of the Margrave of Brandenburg, thanking that gentleman for "your condescending interest in the insignificant talents with which heaven has gifted me." Apparently the Margrave was not unduly impressed by those talents, because the concertos were not listed with his valued acquisitions, and after his death were sold for about eight cents each. Fortunately, one of Bach's pupils rescued them for posterity.

Johann Sebastian Bach.

They are, of course, concertos in the 18th century sense of music written for a group of solo instruments with accompanying orchestra of strings and clavier. Using the form as an exercise in variety, Bach shifted solo voices from strings to woodwind and brass and even to the clavier, at will. The Concerto No. 5, D major, gives the leading voice to clavier, and is here particularly lovely because Mr. Serkin's piano has such sensitive texture it fits beautifully into the design of the music.

For that matter, it would be difficult to discover more satisfying performance of all the concertos. The Busch Players have a solidity that suggests the impregnable integrity of Bach, and with their soloists they take on a virtuosity that captures the radiance that lights the scores. The piercing sweetness of the oboe in the first concerto, the splendor of the violin in the lovely fourth, the clean brilliance of the trumpet in the second, the dark sheen of violas in the sixth, the full ensemble precision in the presto of the fourth — these are qualities that make chamber music irresistible.

The recording is smooth and clear, with several sides fading into oblivion in a way that must have made the engineers feel smug. My second set developed a quaint touch by pasting the label of Bruno Walter's "Eroica" on what happens to be the opening of the sixth concerto, but at least it's Bach keeping good company. And that reminds me. Don't think they have skimped the third concerto, which in so many ways is the most magnificent. That limpid slow movement Chicago knows so well is an interpolation by the late Frederick Stock of the andante from the Sonata in A minor for solo violin.

Benchley Wit Leads One to Forget Cares

"BENCHLEY BESIDE HIMSELF," by Robert Benchley. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

I am ashamed to say that for the first half hour of reading this book I forgot about the war. It has been a long time since that happened. In fact, not since the beginning of the war.

Nor had I expected to be so completely diverted when I sat down to read a collection of Benchley essays which had all been printed before, some of them years ago. It may have been the total concern with mere amusement which gave the book its special pleasure in this time of total war. With the vast bulk of our movies, magazines, and books, even those ostensibly funny, engrossed with the war, it came almost as an astonishment to pick up 300 pages devoted to nothing more than the trials of an old-fashioned Christmas and the dangers of an old-fashioned Morris chair.

Mr. Benchley has been writing so long that he can now be seen in retrospect [indeed, he can now be seen to great advantage in profile, with several quaint rolls under his chin and a fine executive type curve at the middle].

The humor is nearly all of one kind, centering on unexpected phrases and quick, out-of-the-corner-of-the-mouth remarks, as his description of "helping out" at a church supper, which "consists of putting on an apron over your good clothes, tucking up the real lace cuffs, and dropping plates." There is a vast amount of that, and for a while it is very comforting, the rest of the world being what it is just now.

Mr. Benchley had purchased a set of rustic pottery in France, and left it to be sent to America, with the following results: "Today I got a notice from the Custom House saying that there was a bbl. on the good ship 'Hannoy' for me. The only bbl. that I can think of which would take a ship like the 'Hannoy' is a bbl. of dishes. I don't suppose that any one would be sending me a bbl. of beer, because it is pretty well known around France that I don't drink. Certainly not French beer. . . ."

There are several pictures of Mr. Benchley included, all from movies in which he has appeared. They show the jolly author in various expressions of delight and disgust, grabbing a midnight snack, lying for some unexplained reason across several electric light wires while dressed in evening clothes and reading a business letter, bending a formidable horseshoe, and being measured for a large sack which is firmly snugged in at the neck and suggests either a trip over Niagara Falls to ease a broken heart, or what the well dressed humorist will sleep in on Attu Island.

There are also many drawings by Gluyas Williams which tend to slim Mr. Benchley down to a boyish grace and give him a shyness and wistfulness I am sure he has lost these many [O, so many] years.

It happens to be warm weather now, but Mr. Benchley is all-weather, guaranteed not to shrink. He can be recommended as suitable for any season, but especially years of violence. He is like his own medicine, whisky, which he drinks in the winter for frostbite and in the summer for snakebite.

Sparkling Whimsy for Young Readers

"THE RUNAWAY TRAIN," text and photographs by Creighton Peet. [Holt, $1.75.]

Of course, no electric train could run right out the front door, thru the chicken yard, across Aunt Mary's weekly bridge game, into the College barber shop, and finally home again to the living room. Readers of this tale will know that the trip is imaginary, in spite of the real photographs that show the train's antics. Here is a new kind of whimsy that seems like reality but fools nobody. Boys and girls of 8 and 10 are sure to find it delightful. F. D. H.

"Fall of Paris" Is One of This War's Great Historical Novels

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

Published last year in Moscow—in Russian, of course—"The Fall of Paris" won the 100,000 ruble Stalin prize for fiction. Thirty-five thousand copies of it were sold in London the first week of its publication in the English translation by Gerard Shelley. Its popularity in both Russia and England was foreordained . . . in Russia because in it is included an enthusiastic, even inspired fictional history of the Communist party's attempts in France to serve France as well as itself; in England because, in 529 detailed pages, is told the whole sad story of France's last years of political corruption, of treachery in high places, of German bribery and France's rulers' working theory that the Germans were more to be trusted than the English. In the beginning, in 1935, and again and again deputies, ministers [some real, the most vociferous, fictional] proclaim Germany's good intent toward France. Some of the proclamations are the result of mere dunderheadedness, some of venal corruption, practically all of them of political chicanery or a fear of the Communists, cleverly used for political ends.

Ilya Ehrenburg, a Russian newspaper correspondent who lived thru the whole bitter period in Paris, has written the kind of novel that a Russian who lived most of his adult life in France would write by nature, training and conviction. That is, he has made a long, detailed, apparently unhurried report about many characters, with each character realized in his or her deepest emotions in the great tradition of the great Russian novel. And in the tradition of French literature, which he read avidly and with great appreciation, he has taken those characters from a complete slice of Parisian life, with Paris naturally almost as prominent a character as the men and women who live there.

As correspondent for a soviet paper and head of the Tass news agency in Paris, Ilya Ehrenburg's political sympathies were obviously with the Communists, but his long years of life in France trained him to an understanding of the French political system, and, altho in this tremendously vivid panoramic novel there is a group of passionate Communists, the tale of that group's convictions and actions is only one of the leaves of the triptych of France's fall. Political corruption and the willful blindness of France's leaders to the possibility of war, their utter, and, as history has proved, criminal policy of appeasement fill these exciting pages.

The fact that the reader remembers that the British government was also filled with appeasers, and that, to our shame, our own government kept sending scrap to the Japs, to be returned to us at Pearl Harbor and Guadalcanal, does not soften the impact of the appeasement which Ehrenburg carries to its tragic conclusion in his picture of the fall of France.

But, while "The Fall of Paris" is contemporary history, it is history distilled out of the general into the individual, and thus filled with a tensity and an intensity of feeling for the reader, as he watches the lives of men and women whom he comes to know very well being pulled up by the roots or burgeoning bitterly.

The people in this book are real and living. Their lives follow the general patterns of love, hate, idealism, cynicism, a struggle for bread for the body and the soul that the lives of other men and women the world over follow. But over them is inescapable doom, as in the plots of the Greek tragedies. But the reader is always conscious of the fact that it was a doom of only yesterday and hung over and finally enveloped people whom he knew or might have known, and not some far off mythical fury of the gods. There is nothing of the remote deus-ex-machina tragedy about "The Fall of Paris," but a pitifully human-made one.

Early in the book one cynical industrialist says that the French people have "the fever of liberty" and "the main thing is to lower the temperature." This graphic novel tells how that temperature was lowered, even for a time to an almost fatal subnormal, but returned to its natural liberty loving blood temperature despite the German occupation.

How the defeatist virus worked in France is depicted in one shocking picture after another. The novel has many vignettes of the government's refusal to strengthen its armaments lest Germany be displeased, its refusal to listen to the army about the exposed flank of the Maginot line, and the lack of sufficient air and tank power, for fear Germany wouldn't like it; its refusal to help the democratic Spanish government lest Italy object . . . "even Gamelin was powerless; it was the politicians who would decide everything." And finally, it etches sharply the disgraceful abandonment by their leaders of the French people and the French common soldiers. "Once upon a time they used to say: the rats are leaving the ship. Nothing of the sort—it's the captains who are leaving. They leave the rat to look out for himself," another cynic says. The author graphically describes the stillness over deserted Paris as the Germans arrived. "It must be like that when tourists walk thru the streets of Pompeii."

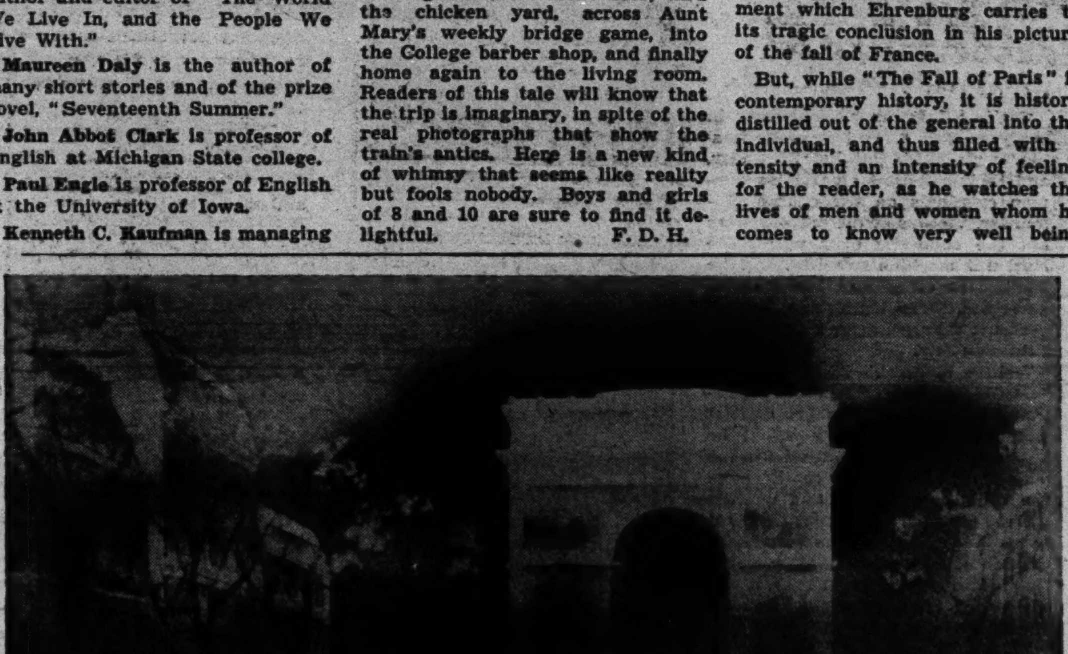
"The Fall of Paris" will probably take its place in literary history as one of this year's great historical novels rather than as a novel of a social movement, for it has much of the sweep of scene and the power of emotional appeal of the classic Russian novel.



Illustrating "The Fall of Paris," a novel by Ilya Ehrenburg. (To be published June 7 by Knopf.)

Jefferson Biography for Older Children

"WHEN JEFFERSON WAS YOUNG," by Mabel Ansley Murphy. [Whitman.]

Children in the upper grades and perhaps high school underclass men should enjoy "When Jefferson Was Young." It is biography and background, slightly fictionalized to make it human in detail, but the impression is it hews pretty close to fact in the best manner of Thucydides. The author leaves gaps, you gather, rather than takes flyers. L. T. H.

War Gardens Flourishing on Near North Side

By Cousin Eve.

War garden fever appears to be raging in and around Chicago. A short ramble up North State parkway showed 20 erstwhile lawns already changed into tidy little vegetable gardens. Maybe many people don't feel that way, but I like the smell of vegetable gardens, "the potager" of the French countryside.

The Ambassador hotel has the finest of all these potagers. What was once flowers and little barbered trees is now row on row of tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce, corn, beans, and beets. A V of red geraniums decks the corner, and a little wire fence surrounds it.

There are several things I miss in Chicago, things which Washington has and we have not. Among them are the little gay flower markets under big umbrellas. For a few sous you can buy lilies of the valley and roses, peonies, and cherry blossoms, and then they look so pretty, gladdening up the street. Another thing they have in Washington which we have not is arrests and fines for jaywalking—$25 for crossing against the light.

I was dining one night with some friends in Georgetown when the head of the family failed to come home. The dinner hour came and went and no pater familias. Finally the telephone rang violently and papa broke the news that he was in jail. He had been arrested for the 10th time this season for being caught driving thru as the lights changed. The family had to scurry around and get papa's bail, which was very, very big, and then the hero returned home. Hardly had he sat down to dinner when again the phone rang, This time it was a neighbor who was in jail, and the two gentlemen gleefully compared notes on their crimes.

As Georgetown is full and boiling over with fashionable young settlers, the circle expands and Washingtonians are taking houses at Fairfax, 12 miles out. Brig. Gen. Clifford Corbin and his wife have bought an old mansion at Fairfax after selling their Wyoming avenue house, and are enjoying suburban life in the quaint, pre-revolutionary town. Dolly Corbin continues to be a great belle in Washington and shuttles back and forth to parties in New York, while carrying on defense work in Col. William Donovan's department. Dolly is really a stunning brunet with lots of verve who has lived in many foreign countries when her father was military attaché.

Junior League to Train Its New Members in Social Service

By Irene Steyskal.

If the destruction of things built by hands, material things of usefulness and beauty, presents a tragic picture, there are few who would deny that a happier view may be taken of the wiping out, under the pressure of war, of those intangible walls and barriers which have separated classes of men, one from the other, and each to its spiritual loss.

When recently the Association of Junior Leagues of America held its annual meeting in New York, evidence of changing attitudes pointing to a better world tomorrow was the notable change of emphasis from Society to society—ostensibly the small matter of change from a capital to a small letter, but having far reaching implications.

Leaders of the leagues were insistent that the groups must search for "the best possible material" for membership, "looking to qualities of leadership, intelligence, and congeniality of purpose rather than to similarity of background and economic status."

"I believe," Mrs. Linville K. Martin, president, declared before the meeting, "the Junior league must play a vital social rôle in the post-war period or permanently disband."

That the Chicago leaguers concurred and are giving serious thought to their responsibilities as citizens of a community was shown last week when Miss Virginia Howlett, secretary of the community service department of the association of leagues, was called here from New York for discussion of the problems of the placement of volunteers and consultation on plans for a two week training school for some 40 provisional members.

Miss Howlett is a professional social worker who has directed the association's community service department, which originally was set up as the welfare department, since 1935. Her particular interest is in training the volunteer worker for effective and understanding service.

"Junior leagues thruout the country are stepping up their training of volunteers," Miss Howlett reported. "It is essential if community services are to function properly," she added, "that all citizens acquire better knowledge of the services which a city maintains, and the relations of these services to the nation and state, and also to private organizations.

"The place of the schools, churches, health services, recrea-

Salvation Army's Doughnut Day Scheduled for Tuesday

Volunteers gathering Chicago's contributions to the Salvation Army doughnut day drive Tuesday represent a home front force whose work in this war backs up Salvationist units in 97 countries and colonies thruout the world. American fighting men overseas, as well as the city's needy, will be the beneficiaries of the money Chicago home folk drop into the coin boxes of the volunteer corps.

Mrs. Henry Paschen.

More than 5,000 women are enrolled for the dawn-to-dusk campaign, but if all street corners, railroad stations, and other strategic collection points designated for the drive are to be covered, several hundred more volunteers are needed. The call for more volunteers comes from Mrs. Henry Paschen, chairman of the drive.

"Serving on All Fronts" is the slogan for the drive this year, and the phrase is a statement of literal fact. The blue uniform of the Salvationists is seen today on every war front where Americans are fighting. There are 2,000 recreation and refreshment centers, known as Red Shield clubs, circling the globe with 500 of them in operation in the United States.

Typical of many appreciative messages from overseas is this excerpt from the letter of a young gunner in New Guinea: "Down at the bottom of the pass is a Salvation Army chap who has tea or coffee and something to eat for every one who comes down from the top—front to you. Hats off to the Salvationists!"

In Australia, the organization's service to soldiers is functioning on a $1,000,000 a year budget. Five hundred mobile canteers for emergency service are on 24 hour a day call in England.

In China, India, and the Philippines, in Norway, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, and Holland, in Egypt, Malta, Iceland, Greenland, Alaska, New Zealand, Hawaii, South Africa, and the islands of the Caribbean, the Salvationists are carrying on their religious programs, relief work, and war service.

At home the women's division is knitting thousands of sweaters, making up khaki and navy blue kits of thread and needles, buttons, tooth paste, soap, and razor and blades for soldiers and sailors, and hundreds of infant's layettes for service men's wives.

Nor have the established home charities been abandoned for the emergency work. Here in Chicago the Army's shelters for women, medical and dental clinics, day nursery, men's industrial home, summer camp for needy mothers and children, and a score of services for the poor and unfortunate are being sustained.

Chicago Womans' Aid Will Hold Picnic for the Blind

The blind of Chicago and neighboring communities will look forward to June 15 as a red letter day. For the annual picnic to which all of them are invited is being given by the Chicago Woman's Aid at 10:30 o'clock that morning in Douglas park near the refectory. Luncheon will be served and candy and ice cream provided. A musical program has been arranged for the afternoon. Each blind person is permitted to bring one sighted guest.

Mrs. William Sultan.

The club's sight saving and assisting the blind committee, headed by Mrs. William Sultan, is supervising the outing, which last year was attended by more than 400 persons. Because of war time tire and gasoline restrictions the Aid is unable to provide its customary bus transportation for all guests. However, any blind person unable to reach the park by other means may obtain transportation by calling Mrs. E. A. Feldman, chairman of arrangements, at Superior 8500, or the Aid office at Central 9656. Douglas park was chosen as the picnic site because of its nearness to the Industrial Home for the Blind.

For 10 years, Mrs. Sultan has aided the blind thru her club. It was four years ago that, by chance, she had tuned her radio in to a broadcast by the late Alexander Woolcott. He was making a plea to the public to send discarded spectacle frames to Mrs. Arthur Terry of Short Hill, N. J., who used these frames to aid the needy blind and persons with impaired eyesight. Mrs. Sultan decided to attempt a similar campaign in this city, and each year since, her committee has been able to turn over hundreds of dollars thru this project to properly fit hundreds of needy persons with eye glasses. Wherever possible, frames are used intact. Otherwise they are sold for smelting. Even plastic frames are of value, according to Mrs. Sultan, since the metal rods within may be smelted.

As result of a recent intensive campaign, the Woman's Aid received more than a thousand discarded frames, from which a veritable history might have been gleaned. For in the collection were frames of numerous eras. And one of these, with an engraved date mark of 1700 and with quaint blinkers on each side remindful of miniature blinders on a harness, brought $25 from an art collector for furtherance of the committee's work.

The committee is responsible for the installation of the first model sight saving room in a Chicago public school. All material which children with impaired eyesight should have, such as large maps and typewriters with enlarged letters, was installed in the Volta public school on the occasion of the Aid's 50th anniversary.

Mrs. Martin J., Springfield, O.: When I want to keep my parsnips and carrots fresh and fit, I put them in a crock which I have filled with clean, damp sand. I always keep such a crock on hand for the purpose and only leave enough of the tops sticking out so I can pull them out when I need them.

Dora B., Chicago: When we want to roast any weiners at an outdoor or indoor fireplace, we just put them in the family corn popper. We all think the popper's long handle is a fine way to keep from getting our fingers scorched or burned.

Mrs. Berton B., Waterloo, Ia.: I have been keeping my coffee in a tightly closed can in the refrigerator. I learned quite some time ago that heat robs a coffee of its flavor. Also the pot gets a good scouring after every use these days. We want our coffee to taste twice as good as it ever did, and even a trace of rancid coffee oils can spoil the flavor.

Jane F., Peoria, Ill.: I keep a supply of Fullers' earth handy and as soon as a grease stain appears on my wallpaper anywhere in the house I mix some noninflammable spot removing liquid with the Fullers' earth and apply it to stain, about ¼ an inch thick. Later I use a soft brush to revoe the dried concoction and the chances are good that the spot has disappeared.

ful May debut party at 2430 Lake View avenue for Kyle, the first of their young foursome to grow up. In spite of the engraved couplet on the invitation, "In these very troubled hours, please no gifts nor fragrant flowers," there were a notable number of lovely bouquets, if not the mass of floral gifts which used to plague a hostess in bygone days when such things were overdone. Many boxes of magnificent roses have been sent to the hospitals unopened in the past.

Mrs. Adams received in gray muslin with a touch of rose. She is a fair, lovely blonde, and Kyle, the debutante, a bewitching black haired girl, sparkling, poised. Her frock was a gay print, her bouquet a small one of white rosebuds and lilies of the valley. Bob Adams was beaming with pride at his various handsome children — young Bob, who towers over six feet at 16, and Mervyn, named for her granny, the late Mrs. William Baum.

A number of young girls assisted in the dining room and at the punch bowl, and they, too, wore print afternoon frocks and no hats, and in keeping with the war times, the party was as simple as such a party can be.

A feature of the afternoon that added to its charm was the presence of Godfrey, the family butler in the old Winston house, and the chauffeur for many years at the door and the maids whom we have all known way back when—who assisted in the dressing room. Then there was a crowd of old longtime friends [nobody seemed to be forgotten], who were friends of the various families. Little did I expect to go to a debut party this spring in Chicago! Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick was there en grande beauté, the most statuesque blonde in town, Mrs. Edwin Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Cy Adams, Mrs. Herbert Bradley, about to flit for the Wisconsin lodge, Mrs. Freeman Hinckley, Mrs. Walter Cummings, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, to name only a few.

The Friday afternoon party at the Casino for Maj. Gen. Emile Bethouart, head of the Gen. Giraud French mission at Washington, didn't happen for the best of reasons—Gen. Bethouart flew to North Africa several days before on the most urgent business.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, newly elected president of the French society, "Rosettes et Rubans," which had arranged the reception for the general at the Casino, received first a telegram of regret from him, then a letter written by his own hand. In this he explains in the most courteous way the importance of his trip to Africa, and his deep appreciation of the effort and kindness of Mrs. Lewis and her committee in honoring and preparing for him. It is a most remarkable letter, genuine and considerate, and above all written under what stress! Gen. Bethouart said also that he hoped to visit Chicago at another time.

Alexander del Carril, the Argentine consul, is a handsome man with elegant manners, who joined our "diplomatic corps" a year ago. On Tuesday night of last week Mr. Del Carril held a large evening reception in the ballroom of the Lake Shore club, with music and a program of movies. There were many guests, South Americans, diplomats from the neutral countries and prominent members of our local society.

The movies were colored films of Argentina divided into three parts. One section was the Walt Disney film of a journey thru South America as seen by himself and his cartoonists, a most diverting travelog, full of strange animals and their goings on. Another that gave me a renewed zest for Patagonia had pictures of a luxurious train ride southwest from Buenos Aires to a magnificent summer resort hotel in the lowermost reaches of the Andes. The summer resorters seemed to be wandering in fields full of flowers and wearing the picturesque national dress. All around were the Andes blanketed in snow.

In the mail recently came a most interesting, unsigned memorial tribute to the late Caroline Dudley Harrison Owsley, who died in Chicago. Here it is in part: "Mrs. Heaton Owsley was the daughter of the first and sister of the second Carter H. Harrison. In her youth she was a beauty; and tho age had softened that beauty she was still very handsome. Her mind was as remarkable as her physical attraction. She was educated in Germany and at 18 made her debut in the court of Saxe Altenburg and was besieged by many suitors. Her father, however, was a stanch American and brought his family safely home. Thru all the busy years as her father's hostess Lina Harrison took up many activities that helped Chicago's progress, working on school and hospital boards and securing many fine endowments for the Mary Thompson hospital.

"Before her marriage she had a Washington winter when she was chaperoned by Sen. and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison. She married at 30 a man she had known all her life, Heaton Owsley, and was frequently the center of a brilliant society.

"Those who were associated with her in public work will remember her as one who never failed to do her share. She never flagged in her belief that each should help to the full measure of his ability to aid and benefit Chicago."

When she was over 80 Mrs. Owsley, then a widow, became a great traveler and journeyed round the world and up and down many times. Her summers for the past 15 years were spent at the Homestead hotel, Virginia Hot Springs, and she held that fashionable resort's record for queenly appearance and appropriate smartness in dress. Every one admired her.

Lately in New York I met one day at the Plaza hotel, rendezvous for conversative citizens, an attractive looking, older woman of maybe three score and ten. Women of Manhattan dress well as a rule and she was no exception. Only her hat was out of line, and this she told me was purchased in Chicago. On top of her fuzzy little gray head was a perky white chapeau garnished with a bunch of dogs. Yes, really, bowwows. Said she: "I went to this shop to get a hat with roses on it, and I saw this with the dogs and couldn't get it out of my mind, so I telegraphed back for it!"

Mrs. John A. Carpenter's last act before leaving town for a summer at Beverly, Mass., on June 3 was to preside at a Casino luncheon Monday to form a committee for Jugo-Slavia. Thomas Watson is the national chairman of Jugo-Slav relief in America, and with Mrs. Watson was guest of honor at the party, speaking later on the subject which concerns him greatly. John and Ellen Carpenter are also warm supporters of the Jugo-Slavs. The former once was decorated by the erstwhile regent, Prince Paul, for his contributions to the realm of music, and Ellen Carpenter's brother-in-law, the violinst Sladko Balacovics, is one of the most charming of men.

A long table for 30 guests was set crosswise in the Fountain room and Mrs. Carpenter took the center, seating Mrs. Emmons Blaine at one end of the long expanse and Silas Strawn at the other. Mrs. Blaine had the venerable, gallant Tom Watson on her right, and Mr. Strawn had Mrs. John Downes and Mrs. Watson as his partners, while the rest of the company included a varied assortment, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Welling, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, Mrs. R. T. Crane, Mrs. A. H. Patterson, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Wright, to name a few.

Tom Watson, who knows more ex-kings than any man alive, made a most moving appeal for a Chicago committee to carry on. Mrs. Carpenter was as always a gracious chairman, introducing Silas Strawn, who in his turn presented Mr. Watson, his old friend, to the company. Thomas Watson has done much business with Jugo-Slavia in the past and in his speech he forecasted interestingly into the future.

The Arts club ended its season of entertaining last week in a blaze of glory, with a dramatic evening, a series of three plays. The players concerned are "The Playwrights' Theater," directed by Floyd Mayberry. The producer was Alice Gerstenberg. As usual, there was a tremendous scramble for seats in the Arts club lounge, and an audience avid for amusement and not too critical.

The three short plays were "Perfect Ending," "Just Off Piccadilly," an up to the hour ghost story, and Thornton Wilder's "Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden." The last play, Maj. Wilder's, established Emily Goehst as Chicago's first amateur actress, and proved that she is quite as fascinating in light domestic comedy as leading off in a brilliant, dashing revue as we have seen her do with the Service club at the Auditorium.

Hendrick Dahl as "Elmer" scored also, altho his lines were few; and young Kathie Pargellis, child of Dr. Stanley Pargellis of the Newberry library, achieved success with her little brother, Arthur, in the automobile ride to Trenton which compasses the action of the play. It was a little all-American classic. Supper was served after the performance upstairs, where the little tables were laid out, and the buffets near-by heavy with layer cakes and sandwiches. Downstairs in the gallery, many of the audience rambled to see what the collection of "Twentieth Century Portraits" was all about. Loaned by the New York Museum of Modern Art, it certainly was worth a look even just to see one or two of these extraordinarily peculiar canvases. Salvador Dali's "Self-Portrait" for example, with ants crawling out of his eye sockets and worms wiggling in his hair, was something!

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, June 7, 1895.

Dear Julia: Two topics are uppermost in Chicago conversation this week: "Shall the Bible be read in our public schools?" and "What sort of garments shall women cyclists wear?" The Women's Educational union, founded five years ago to encourage the reading of the Bible in the public schools, has had a phenomenal growth and now it is offering a compilation of Bible verses selected to meet the approval of Protestant, Catholic, and Jew, from which book the teacher shall be required to read aloud each day. A large number of educators, of differing faiths, indorse the movement and many prominent citizens have been called on to express an opinion in the daily papers.

Henry Wade Rogers.

The matter has come to the front because a large part of the population of Englewood, Lake View, and other annexed suburbs, where formerly the Bible was read in school, feel they have lost much by annexation to the city. They feel the majority wants Bible reading, and they don't like to see it excluded because of opposition by a minority.

Cardinal Gibbons, writing from Baltimore, is quoted by the ladies interested in the new collection of Scripture verses. He says: "The men and women of our day who are educated in the public schools will, I am sure, be much better themselves and will also be able to transmit an inheritance of true virtue and deep morality to their children if at school they are brought to the knowledge of Bible facts and teachings." President William R. Harper of Chicago university, of whom many orthodox church members complain because of higher criticism of the Bible originating there, writes enthusiastically of the proposed little book. "It gives me pleasure," he says, "to recommend most heartily the book of selections from the Bible proposed for use in the public schools of Chicago. I am convinced that every cause has something to gain and no cause has anything to lose from this." Henry Wade Rogers, president of Northwestern university, writes in the same vein. He believes that "the principles of morality should be thus impressed on the minds of our youth, to their own good and the good of the commonwealth."

Here are some of the selections made for the book. Will and I are reading one each day, at breakfast, feeling that if school children will profit by hearing the verses, so shall we.

The Two Great Commandments. Matt. vi., 9-15.
The Beatitudes. Matt. v., 3-12.
A New Year Hymn. Psalm 90.
A Father's Instruction to His Son. Proverbs iv., 3-25.

It does seem that a child could get only benefit from hearing such words read daily. Of course, we must zealously guard that wise provision of our founding fathers which separates church and state, but Will feels, as I do, that no harm, but only good, could come of such instruction.

As to women's costume, that burning topic, the papers are full of the arguments of "bloomer" advocates and "knickerbocker" adherents. Bloomers appeared on our streets about a year ago and knickerbockers developed from that fashion. Most of the costumes are tailor-made and fashionable women's tailors charge a pretty price for them, from $75 to $150. There are some to be seen in State street windows for as little as $15, but they are rather awful looking. Martha Junior has a new one, with knickerbockers, made by Weeks on Michigan avenue, and I think it is very handsome. She wouldn't tell me what it cost, but she did admit that it took most of the last birthday check her father gave her. She has ordered gaiters, worn universally with the new costumes, from D. Sauer, our best known bootmaker, but they aren't done yet, he's had so many orders. She is wearing old ones until the new ones are finished.

I saw a statement in the morning paper that Miss Kate Kennicott, a member of the Englewood and Knickerbocker Cycling clubs, thinks she was the first woman in Chicago to wear knickerbockers. She was induced to adopt the fashion because she had had to take out a knife and cut off half of her skirt, which had caught in the wheel. That is dangerous, certainly. I approve of the new style. Ever affectionately,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Sally J. Kulze of Chicago sends us a bill of fare from the Washington cafe, Chicago, December 5, 1888. Prices cause a sigh for the days of yore. Chicken pot pie, with dumpling, cost 15 cents; braised pork tenderloin, with peas, 15 cents. "Bread, rolls, butter, and potatoes with all meat orders."

A Chicago Musician.

Robert C. Fergus of Chicago, writes of an early Chicago musician, August Hyllested, brilliant concert pianist, who gave a memorable concert in Brand's hall, Clark and Erie streets, in 1888. This musician married Clara Flotow, whose father was a member of the Chicago board of education. Hyllested is said to be living in Sweden at an advanced age.

Victorian Keepsake.

In this little red book you will find a delightful rhymed fable of "The Cow and the Ass," by Jane Taylor. [Jane wrote "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," too.] And you'll enjoy and profit by "Rules for Conversation" which are just as good as the day they were written, almost a hundred years ago. Price for the Victorian Keepsake, 50 cents, at the Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. By mail, 55 cents.

Women's Hall of Fame.

Don't forget we'd like to have letters about women of early Chicago who should be classed with the builders of our city. If you knew any woman who was a leader in any really important activity—business, professional, or social service before 1893—who hasn't been mentioned in this column, send us information.

Arkansas Spa Surprises This Fishing 'Vet'

By Bob Becker.

After reading for years about a vacation place, you can't help but form pictures of it in your mind. So we visualized Hot Springs, Ark., as a mountainous spot [it is], with lots of hot springs spouting all over the landscape, beautiful forests, and just a small town built up around this famous spa. Right in front of the hotels, we figured, there would be a nice lake [Catherine].

When we visited Hot Springs a few weeks ago, we discovered that our "imaginator" played us false. The hot springs don't spout. The "town" is a bustling, hustling city of about 37,000. And the lakes are much bigger than we thought they were. Then, too, nobody has done justice to the beauty of the entire area in which Hot Springs is situated. The mountains reminded us of the Great Smokies in North Carolina. There's a beautiful hill, or miniature mountain [altitude 1,200 feet], which slopes right down to the main street of the city. Inasmuch as it's part of a national park, it's kept up in splendid style, with perfect roads and well laid out hiking trails.

Beyond the city itself you come into the mountains of the Ouachita [pronounced Washitaw] national forest. The country is scenically beautiful. As for the hot springs, which mean health to so many thousands each year, they're harnessed in an unusual manner, as their healing waters are piped into luxurious bath houses. These places in which you can take a piping hot bath [and we do mean hot] are in a row at the base of the mountain. They fooled us at first. They're so big and swanky looking that we thought they were private clubs!

If you ever get down to Hot Springs for a vacation, you ought to take at least one hot bath in a bathhouse, if for no other reason than to see the routine. The residents of the town will tell you that you just haven't completed your visit until you get "steamed up" in one of those big bathhouses at the foot of the mountain.

It didn't take us long to learn why the golfers become slightly incoherent with enthusiasm when they talk about the golfing at Hot Springs. That rolling, hilly country is made to order for the fellow who likes beauty and sporty hazards in his 18 holes. As a matter of fact, it's worth going out to the course, even if you don't do any golfing. The views you get from the clubhouse, the vistas of rolling country sweeping to the mountainous horizon, are well worth the drive to the golf club. They have three courses out there and you can take your pick. One Chicago golfer told us that he never played a finer course, and when we left him he was playing his daily 18 holes in a temperature that ranged between 80 and 85 degrees [this was in midspring].

The fisherman is going to get the surprise of his life at Hot Springs because of the lake and stream fishing nearby. We weren't in Arkansas at the most desirable time for fishing, because the best sport with white bass was just ending, and the bass season wasn't due to open until May 16. But after catching a few fish in the Ouachita river, picking up some crappies below Lake Hamilton, and checking with local anglers, it's obvious that Arkansas has some of the finest fishing on the continent.

In Lake Hamilton a fisherman may catch all three of the basses—the large mouth, Kentucky and small mouth—as well as white bass, wall-eyes, and panfish of all species. Crappies up to three pounds have been taken from the lake.

We caught the largest white bass down there that we've ever seen. Dr. Lawrence Akers, one of the well known fishermen of Hot Springs, took us to the Ouachita river one afternoon, and we found the big white bass in such swift water that we thought we were fishing a fast mountain trout stream. A two and a half pound bass felt like a six pound black bass in the rapids of a river. This river flows into Lake Hamilton, so the bass come up from the big lake into the stream during their spring run.

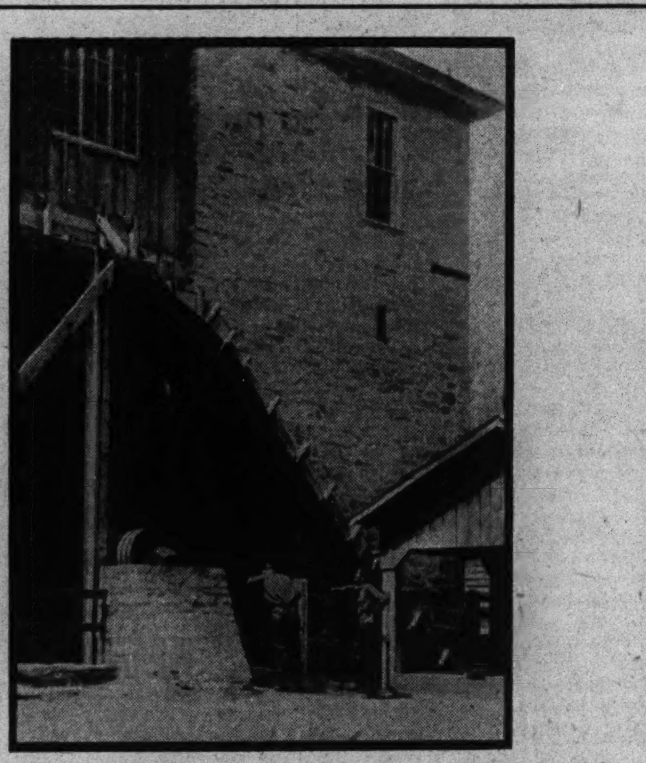
Both Robert Page Lincoln, the outdoor writer, and Akers, tell us that as far as bass fishing is concerned, we haven't seen anything yet. They point with pride to the winding streams in the Ouachita mountains, above Hot Springs, as the pick of 'em all when it comes to superb bass fishing, gorgeous mountain streams, scenery, and country, a section of the country where you see few, if any, fishermen. As one fisherman told us, the rivers have "fightin' Sandys" in 'em. This was a new fish to us until we learned that "Sandy" is the local name for the small mouth bass!

Just to make sure that the fishing continues to be good down there, Arkansas is now launched on a tremendous hatchery program to produce millions of game fish every year for the lakes and streams. The black bass from Hamilton run up to 10 and 12 pounds in weight. The season started May 16, so it's time to load up the boat and rig up the casting rods, Mr. Fisherman.



LARGE WATER WHEEL

This water wheel is one of the "musts" on itineraries of visitors to Spring Mill State park, Indiana.

New Hampshire Birches to Be Memorial Forest

The Shelburne birches, famous New Hampshire lure to travelers, are scheduled to become a memorial forest in honor of the men and women of the vicinity who are in the services Shelburne has contemplated the purchase of the 30 acres of white trees for some time, and citizens recently appropriated the necessary funds for the tract. The birches are noted for their whiteness and regularity of growth.

Michigan's Summer to Be 'Family' One

Bay City, Mich., June 6.—Michigan's second war time tourist season promises to be another "family" vacation year. At least, early reservations made with resort owner members of the East Michigan Tourist association indicate that family groups plan to rent cottages or cabins, and spend their vacations in one spot, as they did last season, due to war time travel problems.

Questionnaires sent approximately 300 of the E. M. T. A. membership—to those members who are actively engaged in the tourist and resort business in eastern Michigan—show that reservations already received are almost equal in number to those made at this time last year, and for longer periods.

Results of the questionnaire were revealed here by Frank Davis, E. M. T. A. secretary-manager. Davis said that fully 80 per cent, or 240 of the 300 members, asked regarding their 1943 vacation season plans, stated that they planned to keep their resorts open again this year. Of the 60 resort operators who reported that they planned to close their establishments this season, the greater per cent was overnight cabin operators. Most overnight cabin units in or near towns, however, will remain open, Davis said.

If notified in advance, resort owners will be able to meet trains and buses at terminals, and transport vacationists to their resorts during the approaching season. This arrangement will be possible under a recent ruling obtained by the E. M. T. A. from the district office of price administration at Saginaw, to the effect that resort owners and operators will be granted B gasoline ration books to make necessary trips to pick up vacationists arriving by bus, train, or boat, and to obtain necessary supplies.

Since good train and bus service exists between southern Michigan and Ohio war production centers, and eastern and northern Michigan resort areas, and with supplemental gasoline rations available to transport vacationers to and from bus, train, and boat terminals, resort operators believe that the tourist transportation problem this summer will be solved to a considerable degree.

As sensible vacations are needed by all workers in the stress of war time, E. M. T. A. members are stressing the importance of war time vacations this season in building health and morale. Vacation periods spent in the outdoors build a reserve of health and strength, and reduce fatigue, inefficiency, and absenteeism.

Meanwhile, Michigan resort operators are busy renovating, painting, and repairing their establishments in anticipation of the 1943 tourist season. And they are making preparations to offer their patrons as wide a variety of recreational activities as war time limitations will permit.

Coloma, Mich., Resort Area Extends Welcome

COLOMA, Mich. [Special].—Vacation forecasts for 1943 indicate that this will be a record year for "family" holidays, with the entire clan arranging, if possible, to vacation together. Coloma, headquarters for vacationists availing themselves of adjacent Paw Paw lake, is looking forward to, and is prepared for, an active season. Paw Paw lake, one of the most popular resort areas in southern Michigan, is easily reached by bus, train, or private car from all large midwest cities and towns, and activities for both oldsters and youngsters are included in the recreational facilities which have been carefully planned.

Aquatic sports rank high, of course, but in addition there are golfing, tennis, riding, hiking, cycling, roller skating, and social activities at the pavilions on the lake shore.

Wawasee, Ind., Builds Varied Summer Program

WAWASEE, Ind. [Special].—A summer program of rest, relaxation, and sports activities has been built around the sparkling waters of Lake Wawasee, the largest inland lake in Indiana. Recognizing the need of middle westerners for health building vacations in this era of stress, this resort community is ready to furnish visitors with a schedule of fishing, boating, canoeing, aquaplaning, and water skiing.

City of Grand Rapids to Begin Sailing June 20

The S. S. City of Grand Rapids will open its 1943 season on June 20 from Chicago, to continue until Labor day. The ship will make daily round trips between Chicago and Benton Harbor-St. Joseph, Mich., and evening skyline cruises out of Chicago every evening.

This year the boat, as an added convenience, will sail up the Chicago river and dock at the Michigan avenue bridges, making it unnecessary for passengers to go all the way to Navy pier to board her.

"Victory" cruises will leave daily at 10 in the morning from Chicago and lay over in the twin Michigan cities from 1:45 to 4:45 in the afternoon before making the return trip, thus allowing passengers three hours in which to see Michigan beaches and other attractions. The evening trips will be from 9:30 to midnight and an hour longer on Saturday nights. The recreational facilities of the large ship will be available to passengers on all sailings.

Foundation as Artists' Haven Is Suggested

By Eleanor Jewett

A number of people are becoming interested in the establishment of some sort of foundation which will be of service to older artists. The most practical suggestion so far has come from a Nebraska architect, Hugh McClure, who saw the estate near Grand Rapids, Mich., which was for many years the home of Alfred Juergens, noted American painter, and is now the home of his widow. Mrs. Juergens lives in the old house among the pictures which Alfred Juergens left as his legacy; other of his paintings have, naturally, been sold, and he is represented in public and private collections and in a great many homes where a "Juergens" is synonymous with a pleasant spot where always the eye may find rest and beauty.

The house is large and rambling, with porches and a huge attic. The barn was blown down a year or so ago, but the foundation of bricks is still good. The estate comprises several acres and a stream runs by at the base of a hill. There are woods, pasture, flowers in their thousands, and a pond. It is on Walker road, just two or three miles from the heart of Grand Rapids.

The idea which Mr. McClure is interested in seeing develop is to make this estate a foundation, perhaps called the "Alfred Juergens Foundation," where artists, architects, and artisans will be welcome. Each will contribute something; each will find there security and a haven. A school is a possibility, with older artists and craftsmen teaching; a gallery for changing exhibitions is a first necessity and the first building which will easily grow from the warm bricks of the old barn.

Some artists may make a permanent home there; others come for a brief stay. There are grounds enough to hold several cottages without any being crowded. Grand Rapids, says Mr. McClure, is filled with craftsmen in wood and metals, with furniture makers and cabinet makers, who have been displaced by machinery to a certain extent and yet whose ability and genius should be saved for the delight of our and future generations. There are architects, too, whose ideas are valuable but who need a breathing space from the worries of today.

The older painter would find a haven there, too, and a new opportunity. The exhibition gallery would include a salesroom. Exhibits would be sent thruout the middle west to smaller towns. Many of the artists could be self-supporting. One can imagine a group of our fine artists, Julius Moessel, Frank Peyraud, Wellington Reynolds, and others, teaching and creating. As the years pass other younger men and women would become eligible and the foundation would continue to be a legacy to our children and children's children.

We shall be interested in having opinions on the proposition from those who think something practical and fine might be worked out.

The decorative arts department has supplied the June masterpiece of the month at the Art institute.

"Unto the Least of These," by Barrie McDowell went on exhibit last Monday at the Findlay galleries. The picture is a symbolic painting depicting the deathless invincibility of Greece. It has been given to the Greek War Relief association by the artist and proceeds from the sale of it will go to the Greek War Relief association. At present McDowell is a private in the army air corps at Greensboro, N. C.

The Sixth Annual Woman's salon opened yesterday at the Findlay galleries, 338 South Michigan avenue, to continue to June 19. The exhibit is larger than usual, as each painter has been allowed to show a water color as well as an oil, and each sculptor two pieces of sculpture.

Dry points and etchings by Henri Matisse, who was born in 1869 and is still active in his profession, have been placed on view in Gallery 13 in the print rooms of the Art institute.

In Blackstone hall and in the school lobby are exhibits of work by students of the Art institute school.

The 48th annual water color exhibition by artist members is on view at the Palette and Chisel Academy of Fine Arts, 1012 North Dearborn. The exhibit is slighter than usual because many of the men are in service. Among the fine things in the show, however, are "Past Glories," by J. Jeffery Grant; "Main Street, Evanston," by Arnold Turtle; "Notre Dame, Paris," by Othmar Hoffler; "Beside Still Waters," by Ewert L. Williams; "Pussy Willows," by Leo R. Weeks and "Kindred Souls," by Oskar Gross.

Altrusa Club Cancels 1943 Biennial Meet

To lighten the war time transportation burden, Altrusa International, organization of executive and professional women, has cancelled its 1943 biennial convention, which was to have taken place in Chicago next month, the national president, Dr. Nina Fay Calhoun of Dallas, Tex., announces. The executive committee will meet at the Edgewater Beach hotel on July 7-9, as scheduled. The fifth district association, with Miss Alva Lowrey, governor of the district, presiding, will meet on July 10.

Altrusa clubs in approximately 200 major cities of the United States, Mexico, and Puerto Rico are sponsoring hundreds of war projects, such as day nurseries, recruiting campaigns for women war workers, vocational conferences for high school students, community canning centers, and youth recreation programs. While in peacetime years most Altrusa units disbanded during the summer months, 1943 finds many clubs carrying on a year-'round war time schedule.

Founded in 1917, at the height of World War I, Altrusa is taking positive and constructive action in the present conflict. Members of the organization are serving with military forces in many parts of the world, as dietitians in Egypt, as recreational leaders, and as army nurses in England and Australia. One Altrusan commands a WAAC unit in North Africa, and another is a prisoner of war in the Philippines.

Former Auxiliary Unit Heads Give to Legion Craft Shop

The Veterans Craft Exchange at 30 West Washington street was enriched last week by the annual donations of members of the Past Presidents' Parley, which is comprised of several hundred past unit presidents of the Cook County Council of the American Legion auxiliary.

The exchange, established by the American Legion auxiliary November 22, 1937, is a clearing house for handiwork made by disabled and handicapped veterans thruout the United States. It is the only one of its kind in the nation. All proceeds from sales go to the veterans whose work is sold, and all expenses in connection with the upkeep of the shop are assumed by the auxiliary.

In addition to its continued assistance pledged for the exchange, the Past Presidents' Parley also have outlined a program of continued aid to world war nurses who have been hospitalized. Card benefits and parties will be given thru the year to support both projects.

Mrs. Thomas McManus is chairman of the parley, and Mrs. Walter J. Kelly is secretary. Each year the retiring president of the Cook council becomes chairman of the past presidents' organization, and she appoints her secretary. B. L. Ransom, a world war veteran, is manager of the Veterans Craft exchange.

Week's Plans of Chicagoland Club Women

Profiting from a recent war conservation course in renewing and remodeling household furnishings, the Woman's City club members have dyed a quantity of salvaged cotton material and Tuesday will begin crocheting it for chair coverings at an all-day sewing bee in the club rooms. This is the first step toward carrying out a decorative scheme for the lounge, planned by Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley.

Mrs. L. Robert Mellin.

Friday will bring Mrs. L. Robert Mellin, chairman of the nursery schools committee of the board of education, to talk on "Nursery Schools for Children of Working Mothers," for which federal money has been allotted. Mrs. Henry C. Dormitzer, acting chairman of the club's public education committee, will present Mrs. Mellin at 1:30 o'clock.

Directors elected for two year terms are Mrs. Stanley Gibson, Miss Elaine A. Blackman, Miss Frances E. Schmidt, Mrs. Charles Tidholm, Mrs. Wilbur F. Blackford, Mrs. Emile Levy, Miss Helen B. Main, Mrs. Charles J. Farwell, Mrs. Arthur W. L'Hommedieu, Mrs. William C. Eaton, Mrs. August W. Degener, and Mrs. Julius J. Bensabott.

Tuned to the times, summer activities at the Chicago Woman's aid will open with a lecture and demonstration on preserving and processing foods at 1:30 o'clock Friday. The program, "You Can Can," will be presented by Miss Nellie Fredeen, home economist, and will deal with nonration point menus and recipes, step by step canning procedure, dehydrating, quick freezing, brining and storing of foods.

The American Daughters of Sweden will gather for their annual scholarship luncheon at 1 o'clock Saturday in the Swedish club to confer their $300 award, full tuition for one year at the University of Chicago, upon Miss Leila Jean Ehrenstrom, senior class member at Calumet High school. The award will be made by Dean William E. Scott of the university, and Harold A. Anderson of the University college faculty will be the speaker. Miss Ehrenstrom will enter Chicago as a pre-medical student. The scholarship was granted her both for excellence in her high school studies and her extra-curricular activities, which included participation in the programs of the a capella choir and Spanish and drama clubs of her school, and the Luther league and Camp Fire Girls.

A quiz program and reports on the recent national convention in St. Louis, Mo., will highlight the monthly dinner of the Credit Women's Club of Chicago at 6:15 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Top of the Town restaurant, 185 North Wabash avenue.

Its goal attained, the Chicago Club for Crippled Children will end a $200,000 war bond drive at a rally tomorrow in the Palmer House. The treasury department will provide speakers and entertainment. The philanthropic work of the group is centered at Michael Reese hospital, where a brace shop has been maintained for several years. This season the club also has taken over a splint room and is refurnishing the waiting room at the hospital.

With Miss Dorothea Thompson presiding, the first district of the Illinois State Nurses association will assemble at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in district headquarters, 8 South Michigan avenue. Five students from nursing schools in the district will be presented in a musical program: Miss Alice Wood, Miss Eleanor Stachowski, and Miss Dorothy Ann Straker, who will play solo piano selections, and Miss Ruth Ford and Miss Josephine Fischer, who will sing.

The Chicago woman's service group, a unit of the Illinois auxiliary of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, has its spring meeting called for 1:30 o'clock tomorrow at the institution. Mrs. Frederick Tice has arranged for a style show by a group of the patients of costumes of their own making and a book talk by Dorothy Posey. Mrs. Amie Heilmann will preside. BUY-LINES • by Nancy Sasser
A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting

Raleigh, N. C., June 6th. There's a sky overhead that looks lovelier than anywhere in the world,—because it's over the Hometown revisited! Pine trees fringe their shiny needles against the blue backdrop and breathe a pine-y sharpness through the air. The foreground is just plain red North Carolina claybanks,—but millions of roses climb there and blossom their sweet hearts wide into the sun. Such a rhapsody of late Spring at HOME must steal into the minds of millions of our fighting men and women all over the world . . . as they nostalgically remember the first of June in their own particular corner of America. So why not just let yourself go lyrical in your next letter to a serviceman or woman? What do you bet that your word-picture of June-magic in THEIR backyard will be the sweetest, most joyfully received gift you could give? . . . And now on to the practical job of BUY-LINES for the coming week!
Nancy Sasser

I've had several letters from readers lately,—complaining because they can't find VICEROY Cigarettes at their usual Tobacconist counter. Well, lady—all I can say is that it's worth travelin' on for! This smart smoke with the filter tip is sold most everywhere . . . but if you can't find it . . . then head off to another shop! VICEROY'S Filter Tips that keep tobacco crumbs from getting into your mouth to stain teeth certainly rate your search . . . or a request that your dealer order them for you! Cost is popular priced for this beauty-assuring smoke that's SMART because the Filter Tip makes it CLEAN and delightful in every way!

The June McCALL'S is right up to the minute with summer menu helps . . . recipes for refrigerator fruit desserts that cut through ration hazards and really glorify summer's fruit crop! Find these fruit dessert recipes on pages 62 and 63. Then check page 40 . . for Elizabeth Woody goes all-out on "GOOD MEALS . . . mostly GARDEN-GROWN." These McCALL recipes are definitely NOT for "nibblers" . . . they offer hardy, nourishing fare for hungry, hard-working men, women and children engaged in war-work along the Home Front. These fruit and vegetable recipes are marvelous helps when you're faced with BOTH meat and minute shortages!

Charm is a fragile thing, often completely ruined by ugly underarm circles caused by perspiration. So why not be SURE that you're protected safely and surely . . . in a way that's feminine and pleasant. Just whisk one of those 5-DAY Underarm Pads 'neath your arms . . . and you're perspiration-free from ONE to FIVE days, depending on the individual! You'll find these Pads in smart dressing table jars at DRUG and DEPARTMENT STORES for 55c . . . small circlets bathed in lovely lotion that pleasantly and effectively STOPS perspiration and its harmful effects on both fabrics and personal charm!

"ZINNIA" by Yardley

I've just returned from the YARDLEY Salon on Fifth Avenue . . . with news about the most divine new shade of Bond Street Face Powder! Appropriately, it's named "Zinnia" . . . for its rich, pastel tone is as compatible with the sun as summer's bright-faced zinnias! You'll love this stunning shade created by YARDLEY for this season . . . so rich in peachy, sunny tones that it's perfect for both blonde and brunette complexions. Cost is $1 at fine shops everywhere . . . just ask for "Zinnia" by YARDLEY,—distinguished by "Bond Street" fragrance and the famous mist-blown "English-Complexion" softness that gives a light and natural touch of loveliness to your skin!

* For summer menus *

One-upon-a-time you MIGHT not have thought macaroni and spaghetti perfect summer-dishes . . . but that was before TENDERONI came along! This extremely thin-walled product changed all that . . . for the tubular walls have been coated with egg white to make them light, fluffy, tender . . . never "collapsing" or becoming dough-y! TENDERONI absorbs whatever you use in combination perfectly . . . vegetables, sea food, even summer fruits! Use it resourcefully with ration-free foods and see how you save your precious ration points and s-p-r-e-a-d meats and cheese! Your Grocer has TENDERONI in plenty . . . wonderful for cold salads, hot entrees, new and exciting desserts!

By the first of June most every American woman is looking for a new make-up. And here's the PERFECT "pot o' gold" to end your search,—Angelus Make-up from The House of LOUIS PHILIPPE! It looks simply stunning on bare legs, spreads an indescribably lovely beauty-film over your face, serves to cover small skin blemishes, freckles and annoying signs of tire and overwork. Try it this week . . . it comes in FIVE flattering shades to match your complexion or the particular toast-brown you're becoming this summer! Ask at 10c, Drug and Department stores for this new Angelus "boon to beauty!"

Junior League Plans Social Service Class

tional and cultural forces in a community must be understood and appreciated, widened horizons are needed by all citizens everywhere. Thru the training of provisional members, and thru placement of all members in community volunteer jobs, the league is endeavoring to supply these widened horizons."

Social consciousness, Miss Howlett emphasized, was the first step toward developing a social conscience, which, in turn, assured responsible citizenship.

Hence, it is a stiff course which the Chicago league has mapped out for the provisional members who will enter upon their two week orientation training next week. No butterfly minded young leaguer will "get by" simply by going thru the mechanics of her volunteer social service job for a few hours each week, the purposeful leaders ordain. She is going to have to learn the whys and wherefores behind social problems. She is going to have a social consciousness.

Miss Helen M. Bennett, in charge of the course, will start the 40 newcomers off on the opening day of their school with a talk on "The Democratic Idea." Miss Elizabeth H. Webster of the Council of Social Agencies is being called in to explain the "Correlating of Social Efforts," and Mrs. W. S. Hefferan of the school board will discuss the question, "How Well Does Chicago Educate Her Children?"

Mrs. Kenneth F. Rich of the Immigrants' Protective league will come one day to tell of "Problems of the Foreign Born in the Community," Horace R. Cayton of Good Shepherd Community center will tell the class about "The American Negro, a World Problem," and Dr. Walter A. Lurie, Jewish Vocational Service and Employment, will lecture on "The New Problem of Employment."

On a day given to cultural aspects of the community's life, Maj. Lenox R. Lohr of the Museum of Science and Industry will talk on "Education Thru Pleasure," Miss Alice Gerstenberg will discuss the theater, and Miss Anna Fitzhugh will talk on today's opera.

Among many others whom the young women are to hear in their training course are Miss Sophronisba Breckinridge, Miss Elizabeth Wood of the Chicago Housing authority, Joel D. Hunter of the United Charities, Sara B. Place of the Infant Welfare society, Miss Jessie L. Binford of the Juvenile Protective association, Miss Ethel R. MacDowell, who is associated with the Municipal courts of Chicago, Samuel A. Goldsmith of the Jewish Charities of Chicago, Miss Marjorie S. Kimball of the Travelers Aid society, and Miss Harriet Vittum of Northwestern University settlement.

Augmenting the lectures and forum discussions will be several field trips to settlements, welfare centers, and industrial plants.

B'nai B'rith Young Women Plan Their Annual Convention

More than 400 delegates and guests are expected to attend the annual convention of the B'nai B'rith Young Women of district 6, which will be held next Saturday and Sunday at the Morrison hotel. "The Influx of War Service in B'nai B'rith" will be the convention theme. War service activities for the coming year are to be outlined, and participating chapters will make pledges for war bonds and set their quotas for allied war relief. Recently a group donated funds to equip four recreation rooms at the medical center in Camp Grant.

Registration will be open at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, and the first business session is scheduled at 2:30. The coronation of the district queen and a dance to which service men have been invited will feature Saturday night's program. The dance is to be preceded by 6:30 o'clock dinner in the Mural room.

The convention will close Sunday night, with the induction of a new slate of officers to serve the district for the ensuing year.

Women in War Work

By Kate Massee

Since rationing went into effect there has been an increasing demand for demonstrations of food and clothing preservation. To alleviate the current confusion on the part of the women on the home front, the home economics department of the Illinois Institute of Technology will add a new course, according to Dr. Ruth Cowan Clouse, head of the department. The course will start on July 1.

Both government agencies and private concerns have been asking for home economics demonstrators to show women what can be done with unrationed foods and how to get the best wear out of the substitute clothing materials on the market.

Beginning with the summer term, classes will be taught in the principles and practices of home economics. The technique of foods will feature canning procedure and the use of meat substitutes, and the clothing study will demonstrate the avoidance of wear and tear on clothing.

The course, which will be taught by Dr. Clouse, will be given in two parts, and students may take either the food demonstration half or the clothing demonstration half, or both. Those interested should apply at the women's war training department of Illinois Tech, 1951 West Madison street.

Miss Ruth Louise Leffler, 3719 North Monticello avenue, who was sworn into the officer ranks of the WAVES recently, reported yesterday for training at Smith college in Northampton, Mass. She is a graduate of Northwestern university, and will receive a master of arts degree from there in absentia June 16. Previously, she taught high school in Evanston, and later was employed for several months in the legal division of the war department.

Lt. [j. g.] Margaret Harding Cecil, Chicago area recruiting officer for the WAVES and SPARS, on a recent visit to the naval training school at Indiana university, Bloomington, Ind., reviewed the 900 WAVES-in-training on parade. "It was a thrilling experience," said Lt. Cecil, who was impressed by the new pride exhibited by the young women, who, until they enlisted in the navy to release men for active service, were girls in virtually all professions and phases of business life.

Lt. Cecil reports that the good, sound, business ability which the young women have taken with them into service accounts for the efficiency with which they have tackled the intricate problems of disbursing, correspondence, insurance, and allotments, classes in which are equipping them to be navy storekeepers. Under the guidance of teachers provided by the university, the WAVES trainees are showing aptitude for this type of work on a par with that of navy men.

Members of the women's reserves, the WAVES, SPARS, and marines, are qualified, after a 12 week training period, to take their places in jobs of responsibility at schools, bases, and training stations thruout the nation.

The women—and men, too—who have donated a gallon of their blood to the military units thru the Red Cross will be given a new small red ribbon to designate the eighth donation. Under the new system, a bronze pin is awarded for the first donation, a silver one for the third, and the red ribbon is added to the silver pin for the eighth. This insignia, Joseph H. King, chairman of the blood donor service of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross said, is expected to become the symbol of "gallon clubs" in communities where the Red Cross is collecting blood. Donations can be made at intervals of 10 weeks and are limited to five a year.

The Classic Sweater. A major in school, and a minor out of it . . . but only because your life is different, not because you love other clothes more. If you live in the suburbs you wear it almost as much as you did in school. If yours is a big city career, you put it with your casual suits, or with your slacks lounging about at home. Last winter, even the few who hadn't maintained that school-born allegiance, rediscovered the sweater as a way to keep warm. Here we sketch from our Sports Room collection sweaters that are summer, autumn, winter, spring majors for campus, country and city life.

Sports Room—Sixth Floor

Ribbed cardigan, half wool, and half rayon. Red, lilac, luggage, aqua and green; sizes 34-42. $7.95

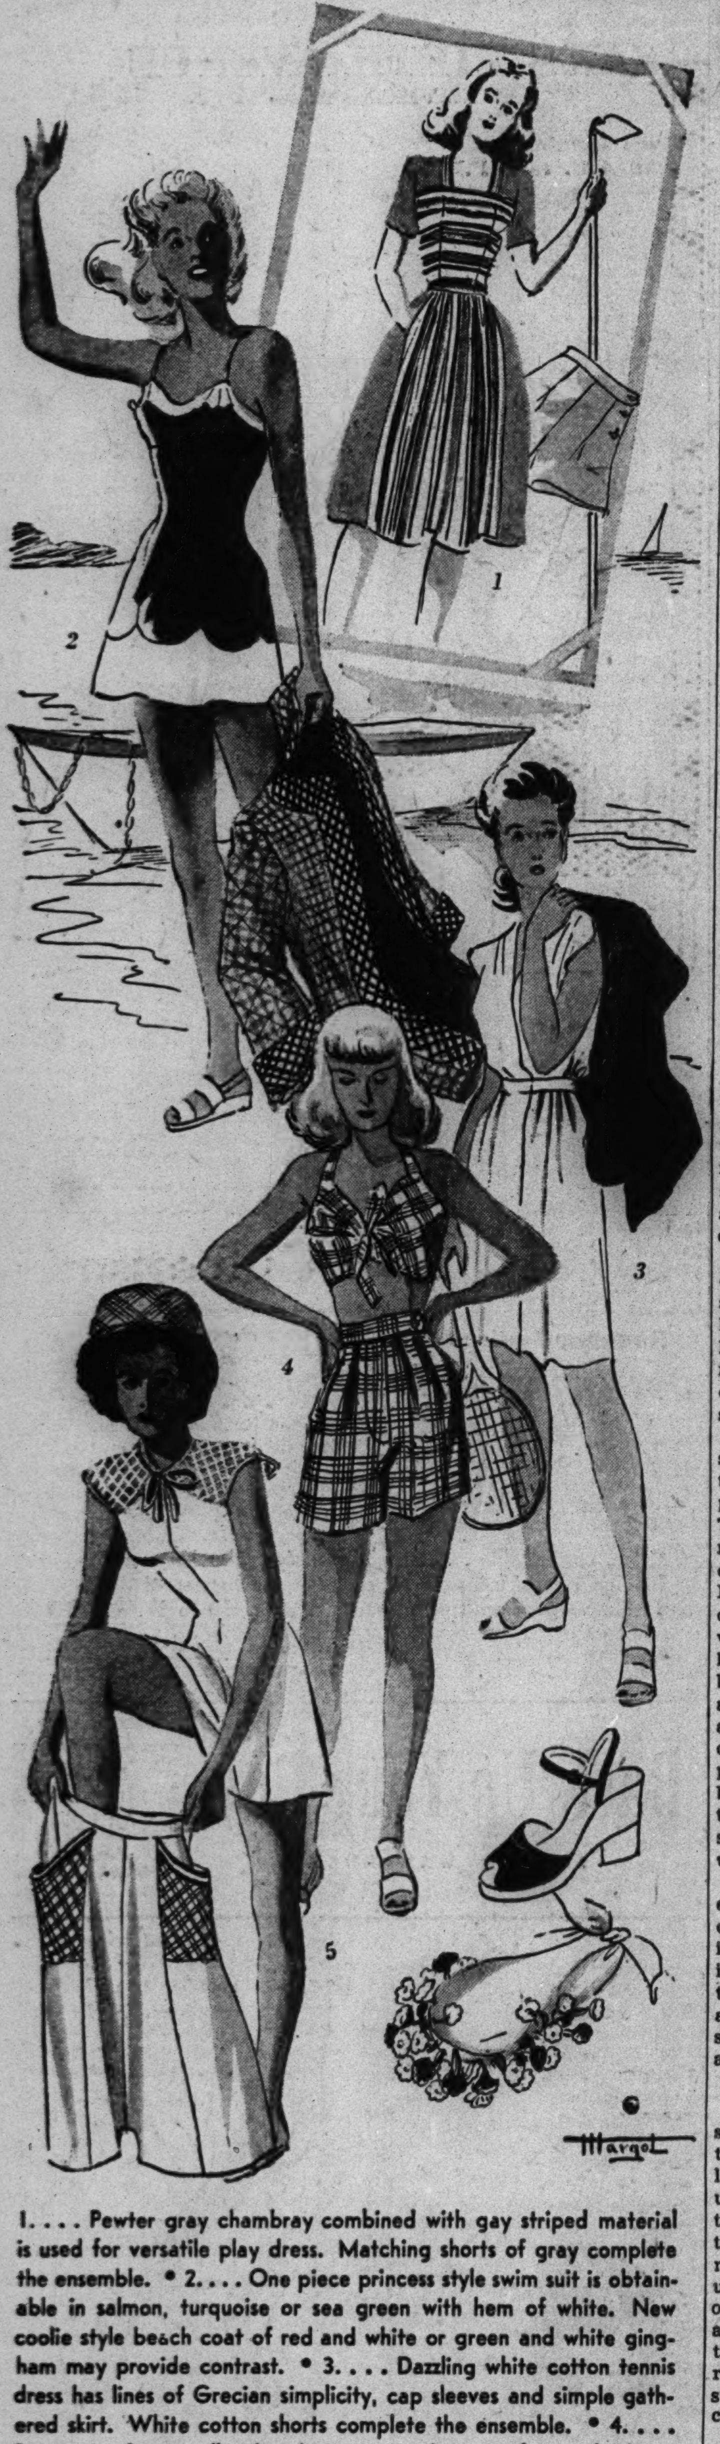
The boxy pullover in soft wool. White, dusty pink, powder blue, lilac, mist green; sizes 34-40. $4.95

Fitted twin sweater set, in fine wool. White, blue, yellow, pink; 34-40. $7.95

Hand fashioned, full fashioned wool pullover. Baby pink, blue, brown, maize, cherry red; 34-40. $7.95

Cardigan of wool, rayon, and rabbit's hair, set-in belt. Luggage, cherry, light blue, Kelly green; 12-20. $5.95

This is the ninth in our series of classic clothes—here today, here tomorrow.



1. . . . Pewter gray chambray combined with gay striped material is used for versatile play dress. Matching shorts of gray complete the ensemble. • 2. . . . One piece princess style swim suit is obtainable in salmon, turquoise or sea green with hem of white. New coolie style beach coat of red and white or green and white gingham may provide contrast. • 3. . . . Dazzling white cotton tennis dress has lines of Grecian simplicity, cap sleeves and simple gathered skirt. White cotton shorts complete the ensemble. • 4. . . . Swim suit of two well tailored pieces may be worn for sun basking. Material is soft bronze, green and gold madras cotton with an Oriental design. • 5. . . . All-white play suit has air conditioned shoulders of white cotton mesh. The same cool material is used for pockets of the step-in skirt.

Cotton Play Clothes Cool and Colorful

By Rea Seeger.

The great annual rush for relaxation out of doors gathers momentum with each week-end and the beginning of official summer vacation schedules. Sun worshipers by the thousands start the trek for country and beaches or anywhere the sun shines with vigor and persistancy all day long. So the play clothes resume their summertime importance, with new ideas gleefully welcomed. Suntan suits and dresses, swim suits reduced to the minimum, tennis clothes, combines of play suits and extra skirts to transform them into dresses that will double smartly as town outfits, rate all the shopping attention.

Cottons come into the sun spotlight, for they retain their brilliant colors until the last day of the season and are easily kept in spic and span condition thru long summer weeks of out of doors recreation, with the least amount of dither and bother. Seersucker and the sturdy cotton denims are top favorites for summer slacks and play clothes, as well as the outfits designed for gardening and other heavy duty clothes.

Special attention is paid to overall models this summer. Some have the shoulder straps and bib of the masculine overalls; others are cut and seamed with long cuffed sleeves and a shirttop securely stitched down to the belt of the slacks. These overalls come in the faded blue denims, cotton gabardines, seersuckers, and a few smooth ginghams and chambrays. Three-quarter length slacks provide the models for those seeking more epidermic exposure than the full length slacks provide.

Summertime uniforms of play suit, consisting of shorts and attached skirt teamed with a companion short skirt, are still tops. These are available in cottons, cool mesh rayons, sharkskin, silk rayons, cottons, and butcher's linen. Prints, vivid solid colors, combines of two or three colors, stripes, white dotted effects, checks, and huge, eye-blinding diagonals in double crossed bars and bands assure a wide choice. Some of the skirts are dirndls; some are modified dirndls, and others, the classics, are plaited affairs held with straight band belts. Side buttoned models, the button-down-the-front, and the surplice bodice with tie sashes are universal favorites.

Cotton materials make the smartest and newest swim suits. Because of the war time edicts regarding rubber, those seal-sleek rubberized or elasticized suits are out for the duration. But the 1943 models are eye-catching, for these cotton suits are the last word in provocative femininity.

The one piece suits are princess style in a gored silhouette to reveal the figure line. The two piece suits likewise reveal the figure and any uncontroled curves. Smartest of all the new arrivals are the stunning two piece halter bras and shorts made of India madras, featuring unusual oriental designs and colorings. Checked gingham, gay floral prints, white suits elaborately trimmed with yards of narrow rick rack, and, yes, the ruffled trimmed suits all are fashioned from crisp, cotton materials.

New tennis dresses are dresses, altho they are made with short, wide skirts. Sleeves in these are virtually nonexistant. Most of them are elongations of the shoulder sections well over the upper arm. Plaits and plenty of fullness both in back and front sections of the securely stitched blouse top assure ease, no matter how strenuous the action. White, dazzling pristine all-white, is the correct choice backed by all authorities.

A few of the newest summer play and suntan fashions are illustrated. All are included in a newly unpacked showing and may be found in a smart Chicago shop for women. For further information call Superior 0200.

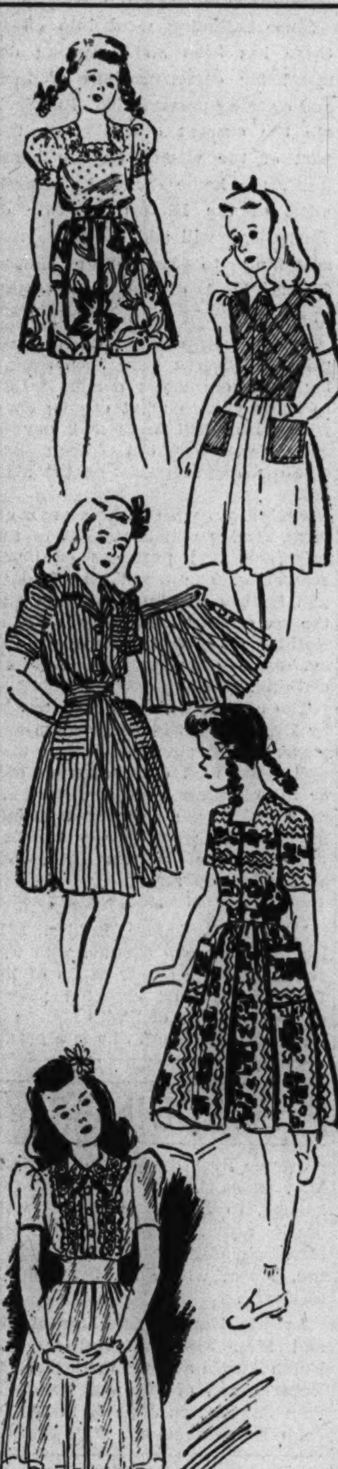
Fashions

By Angela



Summer dresses for the in-betweensters and adolescents range from informal summer play clothes to dressy marquisettes to be worn at sister's wedding.

Tiny seven to fourteeners have fun in the sun wearing a white dotted swiss blouse and rayon printed skirt, sketched at top. The blouse is buttoned down the back with white eyelet embroidery around the square neckline and the short sleeves. The full, peasant type skirt has vivid flowers against a French blue background.

An ideal all-around dress is sketched second. It is a cool, yet durable, poplin in two tones. The white skirt, sleeves and collar are contrasted with either aqua, blue, peach, or yellow in the embroidered bodice and pockets. The saddle stitching on the waist and around the pockets is done in white, creating a frosty finish so desirable on hot days.

A striped cotton seersucker, three piece, play ensemble is a necessity for every wardrobe. Girls from 8 to 16 years will find additional pleasure in their new outfits because of the unusual side pocket openings and back fastening of the skirt. The shorts have tiny, inverted plaits with side button closing. The shirt is the usual classic model with one pocket, the stripes of which run in contrast to those in the blouse.

A cunning, brunch coat type of dress, sketched fourth, has a cross-stitch, rose print combined with printed rickrack, against a spanking white background. This dress is fastened down the front with white buttons. It is available in sizes from 10 to 16 and is priced under $3.

For "Sunday best" or to wear at sister's wedding, the white cotton marquisette, sketched last, is the answer to the young girl's fashion prayer. The turn-over collar is of Irish lace edged with Val. Matching bands run vertically up the bodice, and buttons march down the front. The slim waistline is accented by billowy skirt fullness. A matching slip is sold with the dress. Pastel pink, blue and yellow are other colors in which the dress is available, and in sizes 8 to 16.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Find of the season is a leg makeup for the woman who finds she is apt to get more of such cosmetics on the walls and floor than on her legs. It's a pretty tint, non-streakable, and a little sponge applicator makes it a cinch to put on.

Like to know of at least one certainty in an uncertain world?

It's the "essentiality" of cosmetic hose this summer.

Women of all ages won't find life very pleasant without them, the hosiery situation being what it is, and they will find the hose themselves miraculously satisfactory, the perfection of the 1943 products being what IT is!

Last year we had some cosmetic hose that were, well, less than perfect. They were a new venture then. This year's offerings, by dint of greater research and understanding of some of the practical problems involved in applying and wearing them, are, on the whole, far more foolproof.

Some like the powdery-creamy ones, some the pastes, some the stains. What you like will depend on your own tastes and the results of your own experiences. Some girls, we've noticed, are extraordinarily deft in applying cosmetic hose swiftly and suavely. Others, and we're in this class, have to give the operation a little time. You get the hang of it after a few applications.

Perhaps it's because we're not particularly deft that we are rather specially smitten with one of the many bottled offerings of this year's crop. It's a cinch to apply and it doesn't streak.

This is more the stain type than any other. It's a thin liquid in a beautiful bittersweet shade, and, praise be, there is a little sponge applicator! You won't splash it all over the walls, the floor and your own hands! The applicator dips down into the bottle, gets saturated and is then used in even strokes. It's quite wonderful.

To deepen the intensity of the tint you apply a second coat. It dries fairly quickly and is a pretty tidy operation, even if you want more than two coats. And it doesn't streak as you stroke it on. The shade is lovely, a sort of burnished coppery color that is good with all costume hues.

We love the fact that this has an applicator. Next in the way of elegant features is the fact that it doesn't splatter. Plain water won't remove it. You must use soap. All in all, it's quite a find.

Teasing Often Is Difficult Habit to Cure

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Teasing, carried as far as some children carry it, can be a torment, a torment to the child who is teased, of course. Sometimes it is a torment to the mother of the young victim, because she's so helpless, and even to the mother of the tormentor. Here's a letter in point:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: I would like to know how I can manage a boy of 10 years who is continually teasing and pestering his little brother of 6 years. I have a little girl of 7.

"This big boy is quiet and bashful outside the home, but there is always trouble when he is in the house. He has a disagreeable, temperamental disposition, and that is aggravating his general condition because he is much under weight."

If I were the possessor of a magic carpet and an invisible cloak, I could probably answer more wisely the questions that are put to me about the behavior of readers' children. As it is, I must do what I can "sight unseen," using the evidence as given in the letters I receive, many of which give a good picture of the situation.

Today's letter is brief yet it makes me feel keenly the disadvantage at which this oldest young son finds himself. There may be several angles to this difficulty.

1. When this lad was 3 he had a baby sister. Soon a baby brother appeared. Was he made to feel secure in his family's love and attention, or did his busy mother unconsciously devote her caresses and interest to the babies?

2. This often is a teasing age. A boy of 10 should be helped and encouraged to have playmates his own age. This boy needs to be helped quietly to overcome his bashfulness by entering sports, games, joining the Scouts, clubs, and having boys at his home.

He probably is of a different temperament from the younger children. Instead of being scolded and blamed, he should be given all praise possible and treated with pride as "my older son."

4. Being underweight he may be nervous and fatigued much of the time. He should be examined by a doctor.

5. And last, he is at the teasing, noisy, heedless age. Until he outgrows it he needs patience, tolerance, and friendliness.

And here's a conversation about a slightly different teasing situation:

"I dread," said the little boy's nurse, "to see Timmy appear at the door. I almost told him he couldn't come in today."

"Oh, you can't do that, Maria," said their mother. "After all, Timmy is their cousin."

"Yes, I know, but he teases so that Don is nearly in tears every time he comes here."

Teasing is a difficult thing to cope with; it can come about with a child's friends, relatives, actually within his own close family.

I happened to know what partly gave rise to it in the case of Timmy, who was 10, and Donald, who was 5. Timmy had parents who were critical and antagonistic to Donald's parents. Donald was handsome and intelligent, and they were a little jealous, so they talked about all this before Timmy. Timmy loved his little cousin, but he heard too much. In addition, Tim was getting big, and so became temporarily a bit of a bully. He eventually outgrew the teasing.

Teasing occurs in families for various reasons. And it is not nearly as often from real cruelty as many people believe. Children usually tease those younger than themselves, but they don't do it if they put themselves in the other child's place and realize how he suffers. For example:

Sometimes a boy will tease just because the antics of the howling, stamping, furious little victim provide a little excitement.

Perhaps a child will tease another for the sense of power it gives him, denied in other ways. Sometimes a bullying instinct expresses itself in teasing. Jealousy or hurt may show itself in this way. Last, teasing often is just one more phase of a phase which passes.

The solution? Part of it consists in looking for the cause. Consider those I've listed, and others those may suggest. Then remove or modify them.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, but not value. The column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The important postal act of March 3, 1851, which introduced the three cent letter rate for domestic letters also established a carrier service for certain cities and authorized the postmaster general to prepare stamps for use in connection with that service. The cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and New Orleans were selected for trials of carrier delivery and the streets and all public ways of those cities were established as post routes and letter carriers were appointed.

It appears that private companies were engaged in the business of delivering mail from the postoffice directly to the home or business house of the addressee and soon the postal authorities began to devise means to take over this business also. By declaring the roads and public ways of a city as regular post routes they made it illegal for any one except the postoffice to carry letters within the city.

The stamp which was designed to show the payment of the carrier fee and to call attention to the letter bearing it as one which was entitled to delivery service was a vertical rectangle of the same size as the regular stamps and bearing a portrait of Benjamin Franklin. The framework of the stamp is quite similar to that of the 3 cent stamp of 1851 except that the label at the top reads "Carriers," and that at the bottom, "Stamp." There is no indication of the denomination and the corner ornaments are stars with brackets at either side. The color is blue and the stamps are unperforated. The paper is rather soft and is colored pale rose.

According to Luff in Postage Stamps of the United States, these stamps were issued on Sept. 29, 1851. The official Description of United States Postage Stamps gives the date as Oct. 6, 1851, and Scott's Specialized United States has selected the date Sept. 21, 1851. The last mentioned is the date when the first supplies were delivered to the postoffice department by the printers, Toppan, Carpenter, Casilear & Co.

Altho a new carrier stamp showing an eagle in the horizontal design was placed on sale by Nov. 17, 1851, the Franklin carrier was not removed from sale and copies have been found on covers dated several years later. Altho the bulk of the stamps were used at the four cities listed above copies have been seen from Washington, Cincinnati, and Kensington, Pa.

The Green Book of the Stamp Specialist series starts off the third year of this excellent philatelic publication by H. L. Lindquist, publisher, 2 West 46th street, New York City.

This number contains articles on the Trans-Mississippi issue of the United States, the Bulls Eyes of Brazil, Unusual Aguinaldo Stamps of the Philippines, Guadeloupe—the Emerald Island, Confederate Stamps on Provisional Covers, Siam or Thailand, Egypt, Embossed Revenue Paper of the United States and closes with an article on the Swastika in Philately.

A mere listing of titles means little, but this writer can assure his readers that each of these articles is worth while and up to the high standard usually found in the Stamp Specialist. The Green Book is priced at $1.50 or the entire series of four books for 1943 may be ordered at this time for $5.

The act of congress which authorized the change in the metallic content of the 1 cent piece also provided for the coinage of a 3 cent piece. At that time it was announced that this provision would be held in abeyance until after the problem of the coinage of steel cents had been solved.

Three cent pieces are not new to United States coinage, but none have been minted for 54 years. Silver 3 cent pieces were coined from 1851 until 1873 and nickel 3 cent pieces were coined from 1865 until 1889. So far as can be determined the mint has made no further statement about the 3 cent coins. It would seem to the bystander that the silver-copper alloy used for the new 5 cent pieces would be more satisfactory than the zinc coated steel in use for cents. In that case the coin might be about the size of a cent, but could be distinguished by its color rather easily.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

For repairs and remodeling, as well as for war housing, there's a building board, manufactured of enduring asbestos cement. . . . It is expected to replace many of our materials that have gone to war, and comes in large 4 feet by 8 feet sizes, of different thicknesses. . . . It is called an all-purpose material, since it can be nailed or drilled, sawed or scored. . . . Fireproof, of course, it has a dapple grey finish and does not even need to be painted. . . . It is distinctly a low cost material and smooth and flexible.

Paint manufacturers continue to offer interesting leaflets and charts as helps to those who would wield the paint brush around their homes. . . . One firm offers a free color guide chart. . . . This chart has been developed for those who aren't sure what color to paint their walls, that they may blend with furnishings and decorations. . . . The paint of this particular manufacturer will dry in approximately an hour and is odorless. . . . Another manufacturer prints an interesting free leaflet with concrete directions on the "how" of painting walls, ceilings, and furniture. . . . Cracks should be filled first with patching plaster, manufactured by the same firm and sanded smooth when dry.

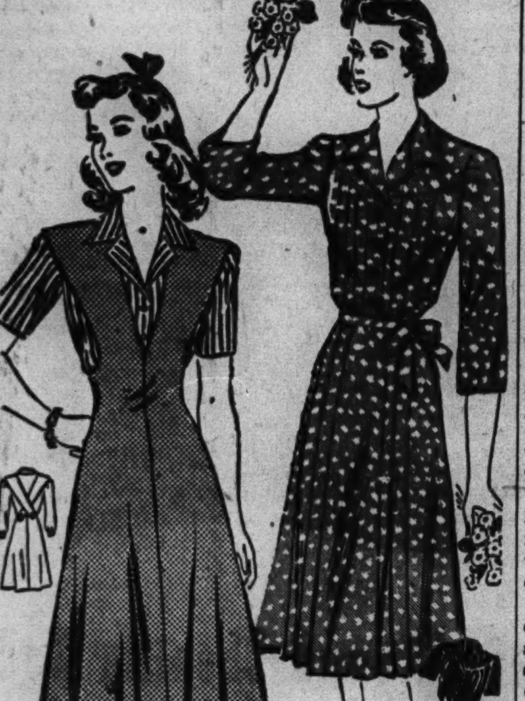
Patterns by Clotilde



Economical of fabric and requiring little sewing skill, these two patterns create the softly tailored, casual sort of frock you can wear to the office, to informal social events, in other words, everywhere.

One model employs the contrast fashion principle, using a striped, shirt-type blouse with a gracefully paneled jumper, which has wide shoulders which will "stay put" and, at the same time, lend breadth.

The second frock is a one-piece design with casual, rever collarline, bracelet length sleeves, and a plaited bodice. A self-fabric belt defines the slender waistline. Prints and plain colors, in all types of washable fabrics, make up well.

Style No. 2024 is designed for sizes 10 to 20, 36 to 40. Size 16 requires 1½ yards of 54 inch fabric for jumper; 1½ yards of 39 inch for blouse.

Style No. 2777 is designed for sizes 12 to 20, 36 to 40. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 35 inch, or 3⅝ yards of 39 inch fabric.

Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

For 15 cents buy the Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions, on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. 10 cents if ordered with a pattern. Address mail orders to New York address in coupon.

Clotilde is a daily contributor to the Chicago Tribune, offering constructive information to women who make their own things, presenting a fascinating pattern every day of the week.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

We're eating more fish now that meats are rationed. Among the fancier fish which we can buy, if we don't mind the expense, are fresh salmon, crabs, lobsters, red snappers, and pompano, all of them fine in flavor and definitely on the gourmet side.

More moderately priced are many kinds of fillets including haddock, cod, and rosefish. Shrimps aren't too expensive in many markets right now, either. The variety available in the fresh and frozen fish line allows us plenty of choice. Broiled salmon steaks with lemon, broiled lobster tails, baked stuffed fish, fish au gratin in sea shells, fillets baked in milk, breaded fillets with tomato sauce—how different in appearance and flavor!

Be certain that the fish you buy is very fresh. It should be firm of flesh, bright in color, not dull or faded looking, and it should smell fresh and fishy. If you buy a whole fish, look at the eyes. They should be clear and moist, not sunken.

When you buy whole fish, head and tail included, allow a pound for every two persons served. Fillets, steaks, and other solid parts of fish will serve three or four persons to the pound.

Fresh fish should be served promptly once it's taken from the market. You can store meat as long as a week in your refrigerator, but fish won't keep in good condition more than 24 hours unless it is kept solidly frozen.

If fish isn't to be cooked as soon as bought, wrap in moisture proof paper and store in the freezing unit or directly underneath it. The odor won't penetrate other foods if the wrappings are right.

In cooking, remember that high heat and overcooking dry out the flesh and cause the fish to lack tenderness. All kinds of fish cook quickly.

Soft shell crabs are hard shell crabs which are molting. They have shed their old cases, and the new ones haven't yet hardened. If you can find these delicacies [they're now in season] they'll be a treat prepared in this way.

Soft Shell Crabs.

To dress, use a sharp knife and cut off segments that fold under the rear of the body. Turn the crab about and cut off the entire face, from ½ to ¾ inch back of the eyes. Lift each point at the sides and remove all of the gills. Wash the crab. While the deep fat is heating, put crabs into a salt solution [two tablespoons salt to a cup of water]. Let them soak for a minute and a half, then remove and drain. Place in a wire frying basket not more than a layer deep. Cook at 365 degrees until golden brown. Turn while cooking. Remove, drain on soft paper and serve hot with tartar sauce. The entire crab is edible.

Crabs may be dipped in diluted egg and flour, cornmeal or fine crumbs before frying, if desired. The coating gives them a wonderful crispness.

Don't serve soft-shell crabs to any but your most discriminating friends, for they're gourmet's meat and should be appreciated!

Fish Fillets Au Gratin.

Place fish fillets in greased baking pan with milk to half cover fish. Salt and pepper fillets and cover with sliced onions. Place an oiled brown paper over the baking pan and bake in a 350 degree oven for half an hour. Remove fillets [still covered with onions] carefully to heatproof serving platter, sprinkle rather thickly with grated cheese and place under the broiler until cheese has melted. Cheddar cheese or one of the hard Italian types like provoloni should be used.

Shrimps Creole.
[Serves four.]

1 pound cooked shrimps, cleaned
½ cup chopped onion
½ green pepper, chopped
3 tablespoons fat
3 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper
½ teaspoon chili powder
1 can tomato soup
1 can water

Sauté the onion and green pepper in fat for about seven minutes. Blend in flour. Add seasonings and soup, thinned with water. Cook gently until thickened. Add shrimps, heat thru and serve on steamed rice.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

The daintiest and the sweetest smelling bouquets of the season were the tiny boutonnieres that Mrs. Albert Day Farwell put together out of her herb and flower garden for a luncheon to tell the plans for the Lake Forest Garden club's harvest festival next September. Rose geranium foliage combined with a few white stock blossoms and a bit of mignonette made one fragrant miniature bouquet, while lemon verbena leaves and a single pink carnation formed another. Mrs. George R. Blossom Jr. pinned one of these gay little flower pieces to the lapel of her mixed blue plaid tweed suit with matching visored cap that she wore in from Lake Forest to the party. Mrs. John M. Simpson added hers to the smart bloused jacket of beige with a faint crimson plaid that topped a black wool skirt. Her hat was a bunch of black feather flowers secured over her brow by a black bandeau. The tiny nosegay added a bright touch to Mrs. Edward L. Hasler's navy ensemble with which she wore a navy straw hat made with a flattering double ruffled brim and trimmed with navy veiling. The first spring prints of the season to appear in any number came forth to the annual musician members' musical and tea at the Arts club on the first sunny day after the long rainy spell this season. Mrs. Charles H. Swift epitomized the gay spirits brought by the sunshine in an attractive frock of black crêpe printed all over with sprays of lilies of the valley. A tiny bouquet of fresh lily of the valley and red roses was pinned to one shoulder. Mme. Giulio Bolognesi appeared in a festive two piece dress of blue printed in vague, whirling lines of white, and a cherry red straw hat trimmed with a huge bunch of little garden flowers.

Mrs. William E. Ragland brightened a navy crêpe dress with crisp ruffles of white chiffon around the necklines and short sleeves. More of the ruffles trimmed her smart tricorne hat. Two of the participating artists appeared in long white gowns, Miss Margaret Sweeney, the Woman's Symphony orchestra harpist, who is tall and slender, with a crowning glory of titian curls, and Sydnia Smith Cooley [Mrs. Albert H. Ullrich], who is president of the orchestra board. Miss Sweeney's dress had a shirtwaist top with collar and long revers of blue, and a knife plaited skirt. A fresh gardenia was pinned in her hair. Mrs. Ullrich's dress was unrelieved by color. In her dark hair she pinned a large, white orchid, tipped in crimson. Another musician member who appeared on the program, Lola Fletcher, sang in a well fitting long gown of black with a wide shell pink ruffle of soft chiffon around the neck and sleeves. Mrs. Welch Dickinson, pouring tea, looked gay in a black dress printed with vivid flowers. Mrs. Samuel Rinaker's smart little hat was the very spirit of spring. It consisted of a number of bright yellow tulips mounted on a black base and tied with green veiling. Miss Alice Roullier's ensemble was more restrained, a black tailored suit, a black sweater, and a black modified homburg, veiled in black. Her accessories were a stunning gold link necklace, and heavy gold earrings. One of the prettiest spring coats seen at the tea was worn by Mrs. Thomas J. Fleming. It was of thin gray wool, cut full and flaring, and perfectly plain. With it Mrs. Fleming wore several sable skins.

An attractive picture was made by a brother and sister in uniform Lt. [j. g.] William Pattison, wearing his khakis, and 1st Officer Priscilla Pattison of the WAAC, also in tan. She had come up from Indianapolis to see her brother, who had his bride of a few months with him for her first Chicago visit. Mrs. Pattison is a tall and slender young woman, who added to her height with a high rising hat of jade green. Her dress was black. Mrs. Fred Gerlach was wearing a well tailored suit of gray herringbone tweed, and a jaunty little hat of leaf green. Mrs. Bruce Borland, who is a tall and exceedingly slender woman, wears clothes with dash and assurance. One of her prettiest spring ensembles has been a violet colored crêpe dress plaited across the front of the skirt, a tiny brown felt hat, and a short sable jacket. Mrs. William E. Vogelback has a pretty little hat, the kind that "goes with anything." It is made of several little white birds mounted on black and worn directly above the center of her forehead. Mrs. Eugene Swigart, who is much missed around town since she departed to live in Washington, D. C., came back the other day, looking as smart as ever. Her costume was a black suit. The jacket fastened diagonally across the front and the edge was piped in white. Snowy white gloves, a white blouse and a white hat added to the perfection of the whole. Mrs. Robert A. Carr, homeward bound on a 57 bus, patriotically laden with packages, was wearing one day a bolero suit of sheer black wool, a white blouse, and a tilted sailor of green and white checked taffeta with a plaited ruffle around the brim, and a belt to match. She carried a green umbrella.

You Can Bleach Your Skin to a Lighter, Prettier Hue with Mercolized Wax Cream

FASHION indicates the return to favor of fairer, softer skin. Ever in stride with the latest mode, Mercolized Wax Cream lends its subtle bleaching and beautifying action to help you win a fashionable, lighter, lovelier complexion. Mercolized Wax Cream hastens the natural shedding of the dull, surface skin and uncovers the fairer, softer, smoother underskin. The action takes place so gradually that the actual flaking process is not visible. But soon you become aware of the improved appearance of your complexion. Start bleaching your skin tonight using Mercolized Wax Cream according to directions and you will be pleased.

REMOVE FACIAL HAIR with PHELACTINE DEPILATORY—Phelactine not only takes off the surface hair, but actually extracts the portion embedded under the skin, leaving no fuzz or stubble. It can be applied quickly and easily in a few seconds. Not a cream or powder. Has no obnoxious odor. You will like Phelactine.

TRY SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT, the DELIGHTFUL SKIN FRESHENER. It is a quick acting, refreshing aid for daily care of the skin. Saxolite reduces excess oil on the surface skin; and its contracting action temporarily tightens the skin tissue. Simply dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and pat this lotion briskly on the skin several times daily.

Lady of the House

June.

June, when the year is coming to high noon, has always seemed a special kind of month. Even now the OPA has set "no price on the lavish summer" [tho at the moment it doesn't promise to be so lavish], and still "June may be had by the poorest comer"—no ration stamps, red, white or blue.

Flowers are everywhere, even on the peas, beans, tomatoes and potatoes; brides and sweet girl graduates are the darlings of June and summer sun; young birds topple out of their nests, young kittens and puppies tumble about; the voice of the lawn mower is abroad in the land as of yore. The June moon still inspires the poet, and gardeners fight bugs, especially June bugs. Looks as if we could still depend on June to be June, tho some may lament with Hood—

"What joy have I in June's return?
My feet are parched—my eyeballs
burn,
I scent no flowery gust;
But faint the flagging zephyr springs,
With dry macadam on its wings,
And turns me 'dust to dust'."

Summer Is a Smile.

Summer is a smile, broad, unrestrained,
A heartfelt smile, so warm, unfeigned,
The teeming earth beneath its glow
Breathes and responds, and row on row,
Blossoms nod their genial heads
And stretch their toes in earthen beds.

This smile of summer, golden spun,
I've found in sweet strains from the sun,
In the warmth of sod, the grinning trees,
And the friendly touch of a gentle breeze
In thick woods with finches of gold and black—
Summer just makes you smile back!

Molly Johnson.

House Cleaning.

I'll fling out fear and discontent,
And give my doubts the broom,
Then bring in cheer and merriment
To fill each empty room.

The windows darkened by distress
I'll brighten up again
And wash with suds of cheerfulness
To let the sunshine in.

I'll toss out selfishness and hate,
Then buy a box of love
So big it barely clears the gate,
And ceiling high above.

O yes, this year house cleaning time
Has me on reverent knees
Scrubbing my heart—of moral grime—
To win great victories.

Nicholas Lloyd Ingraham.

Rebirth.

The raindrops smell of spring,
Of new-born purity and loveliness;
And yet, the rain is old—
As ageless as the whirling world itself.
The falling drops have met the earth
A thousand times before.

Vapor—rain—and vapor,
Then back to rain again—
An endless cycle.
Water knows a charted orbit
Just as surely
As the sun and stars.

Papa robin forsook his habit of ground feeding and preëmpted the feeding table to help support his family. His eldest son was out of the nest at mid-May and is a very demanding sort of fellow. Adventurous, too, as most young things. Only a day out of the nest he hitchhiked to town in a friend's car [she had left the door open], much to her surprise and dismay. Presently he was restored to his hard-working parents.

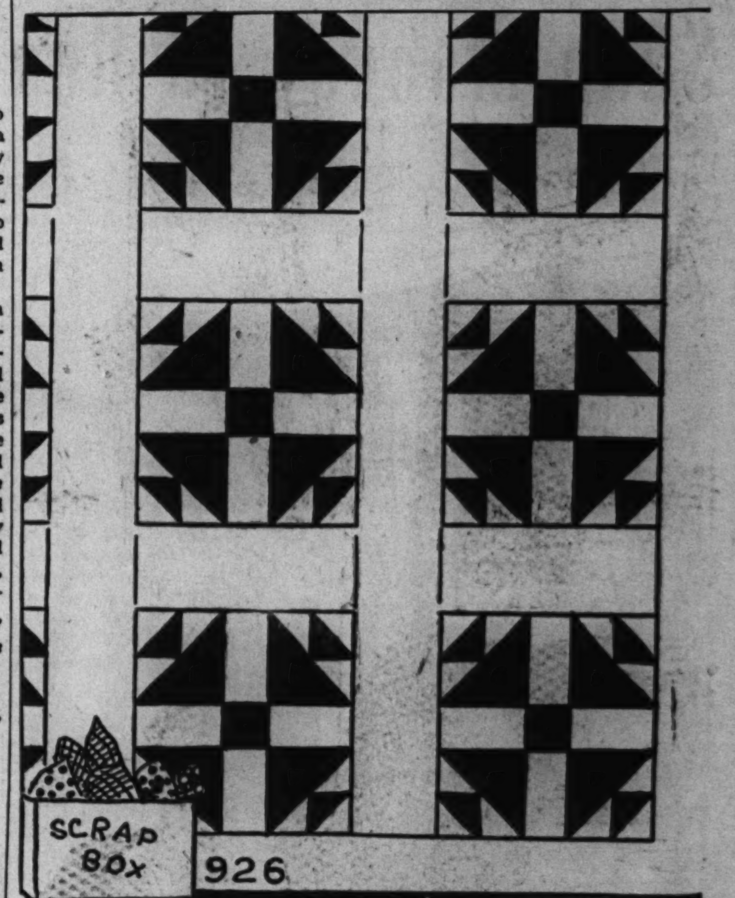
Favorite Quilt Pattern



By Nancy Cabot

"Wild Goose Chase" is a quilter's favorite, and it is also one of the oldest, dating back to the ranking 300 in quiltdom. White and a solid color is the popular choice, but a printed material may be used effectively. The completed block measures approximately 15 inches square and is set together with wide bands of white.

For the quilt pattern, "Wild Goose Chase," No. 926, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1943: By Ely Culbertson.]

Give the average player something like A-Q-x-x-x in one hand, opposite J-x in the other, and he becomes blind to the fact that he can do anything but finesse toward the A-Q. What he overlooks is that there is an entirely different type of finesse available which, under many circumstances, is better than the "garden variety" he contemplates.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 diamond	Pass
1 spade	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 no trump	Double	Pass	Pass
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

West decided to open an unbid suit, hoping that his partner was well heeled in that department, hence selected the heart seven. Dummy played low and East went right up with the king, then shifted to his fourth highest diamond. Declarer put in the eight spot and was pleased to find that West had to use the queen to capture the trick. Convinced that there was no future for the defenders in the heart suit, West now shifted to the nine of spades. Dummy covered, as did East, and declarer won. At this point declarer made his fatal error. He led the nine of clubs and, when West covered with the ten, put up dummy's queen. East won with the king and laid down the diamond king. Declarer let this hold, probably hoping for a diamond continuation, but East now shifted to the ten of spades. Dummy's jack won and a low club was led to the jack. The diamond ace was cashed, dummy discarding a spade, after which a low heart was led to the ace. The club ace was then laid down, probably with a silent prayer on declarer's part, but West still had the suit stopped. The heart jack was overtaken with the queen and, to declarer's great relief, the ten spot dropped from East, permitting the cashing of the nine. Nevertheless declarer had taken only eight tricks and had to concede another diamond to East for the setting trick and a 400 point penalty.

In view of East's double of the final contract declarer had gone about the establishment of clubs in a clumsy and illogical fashion. The preliminary plays were unimportant but at the point where South took his ace of spades, he most certainly should not have led a club toward the A-Q. He should have entered dummy with the heart ace and led a low club toward his own J-9. Almost certainly the king was in East's hand. If East played the king, declarer would, of course, duck and his jack would be preserved for future use. If East failed to put up the king, the jack would presumably hold and then declarer could go about future development of the hand with a point well won. Whether he went right back at the club suit in an attempt to establish it immediately, or deferred this in favor of an eventual throwin play against East, would be unimportant. As the cards actually lay, of course, East would have been forced to put up the club king on the first lead and after that South's jack and dummy's A-Q would have drawn all of West's clubs and insured four club tricks for the declarer. Then declarer would have won at least nine tricks; and, against normal defense, would have made an over-trick. Depending on the defense, a swing of 850 or 1,250 points was involved, aside from the rubber bonus.
